PREFACE.

This translation of the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa was undertaken by me for the Asiatic Society of Bengal many years ago, when I hoped to be able to carry it through in no long period ; but onerous official duties left little leisure, and for years removed me to a distance from the Society's Library and other means of reference. The Society was reluctant that the translation should be dropped, and it has therefore been continued as well as leisure permitted. It is hoped that in spite of these difficulties the translation may be of service to scholars, and the notes with all their shortcomings not unwelcome.

INTRODUCTION.

This translation of the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa being made for the Asiatic Society of Bengal naturally follows the edition of this work prepared by the Rev. Dr. K. M. Banerjea, and published in the Bibliotheca Indica in 1862; yet other editions and some MSS. have been consulted and are referred to. The translation has been kept as close to the original as possible, consistently with English sense and idiom; for a translation loses some of its interest and much of its trustworthiness, when the reader can never know whether it reproduces the original accurately or only the purport of the original. The time during which the work has been in hand has rendered it difficult to maintain one system of transliteration throughout; but, in order to place the whole in a consistent state, the system established by the Royal Asiatic Society and approved by the Asiatic Society of Bengal has been adopted in the Index and in this Introduction.

The general character of this Purāṇa has been well summed up by Prof. Wilson in his preface to his Translation of the Viṣṇu Purāṇa, except that his description hardly applies to the Devi-māhātmya. "This Purāṇa has a character different from that of all the others. It has nothing of a sectarian spirit, little of a religious tone; rarely inserting prayers and invocations to any deity; and such as are inserted are brief and moderate. It deals little in precepts, ceremonial or moral. Its leading feature is narrative; and it presents an uninterrupted succession of legends, most of which when ancient are embellished with new circumstances, and when new partake so far of the spirit of the old, that they are disinterested creations of the imagination, having no particular motive, being designed to recommend no special doctrine or observance. Whether they are derived from any other source, or whether they are original inventions, it is not possible to ascertain. They are most probably, for the greater part at least, original; and the whole has been narrated in the compiler's own manner; a manner superior to that of the Purāṇas in general, with exception of the Bhāgavata."

Composition.

The Purāṇa is clearly divisible (as Dr. Banerjea noticed) into five distinct parts, namely :—

1. Cantos 1-9, in which Jaimini is referred by Mārkaṇḍeya to the wise Birds, and they directly explain to him the four questions that perplexed him and some connected matters.

2. Cantos 10-44, where, though Jaimini propounds further questions to the Birds and they nominally expound them, yet the real speakers are Sumati, nicknamed Jaḍa, and his father.

3. Cantos 45-81 : here, though Jaimini and the Birds are the nominal speakers, yet the real speakers are Mārkaṇḍeya and his disciple Krauṣṭuki.

4. Cantos 82-92, the Devī-māhātmya, a pure interpolation, in which the real speaker is a ṛṣi named Medhas, and which is only repeated by Mārkaṇḍeya.

5. Cantos 93-136, where Mārkaṇḍeya and Krauṣṭuki carry on their discourse from canto 81.

The 137th canto concludes the work ; it is a necessary corollary to the first part.

There can be no doubt that only the third and fifth of these parts constituted the Purāṇa in its original shape as Mārkaṇḍeya's Purāṇa. The name would imply that originally Mārkaṇḍeya was the chief figure, and it is only in the third part that he appears as the real teacher. There is, however, clearer evidence that the Purāṇa began with the third part originally, for this is asserted almost positively in canto 45, verses 16 to 25. There Mārkaṇḍeya, after declaring that this Purāṇa, equally with the Vedas, issued from Brahmā's mouth, says—" I will now tell it to thee Hear all this from me as I formerly heard it when Dakṣa related it." These words plainly mean that the true Purāṇa began here ; or, if the necessary words of introduction be prefixed, that it began at verse 16 or 17, which verses have been slightly modified since in order to dovetail them into the preceding portion.

The first and second parts were composed afterwards and then prefixed to the Purāṇa proper. That they were later compositions is implied by the fact that the Birds recite the Purāṇa proper as an authority, and is indeed indicated by the origin attributed to them. While the original Purāṇa was proclaimed to be a revelation from Brahmā himself, no higher authority is claimed for the first and second parts than Mārkaṇḍeya and the unknown brahman Śumati Jaḍa. Further, mention is made in canto 20, verse 33, of Purāṇas which narrate Viṣṇu's manifestations. This expression is vague. If it means lengthy descriptions of some of the incarnations, such Purāṇas might be the Viṣṇu, Brahma-vaivarta, Brahma and Bhāgavata; but the last two were pronounced by Prof. Wilson to be late compositions, and the reference here may be to the former two only, to which he assigned about an equal date with this Purāṇa. There is nothing definite to show whether the first and second parts had been united before they were prefixed to the Purāṇa proper, or whether the second part was inserted after the first had been prefixed; yet it would seem more probable that they had been united before they were prefixed. There is a marked similarity between them.

The prefixing of the discourses delivered by the Birds to the Purāṇa proper raised the Birds to the primary and chief position and tended to derogate from Mārkaṇḍeya's pre-eminence; but clashing was avoided and Mārkaṇḍeya's supremacy was preserved by two expedients; first, he was introduced at the very beginning in order that he might expressly declare the wisdom and authority of the Birds; and secondly, the original Purāṇa was interfered with as little as possible by making the Birds repeat it in its entirety as Mārkaṇḍeya's teaching, conclusive upon the subjects dealt with in it. The Birds on beginning it retire from further notice, but reappear with Jaimini in the final canto to conclude their discourse and give consistency to the combined instruction. This was a termination rendered necessary by the prefixing of the first two parts to the original Purāṇa.

The second part appears to have been amplified beyond its primary scope. It discourses about birth and death, about the hells, about sins and their punishments and about yoga or religious devotion. All these subjects are briefly dealt with, though the description of the different hells is ampler than in other Purāṇas, but the last subject leads to a discursive exposition. If dealt with like the other subjects, the exposition would pass from canto 16, verse 12 immediately to canto 37, where king Alarka is driven by adversity to seek Dattātreyā's advice and that ṛṣi expounds the doctrines of yoga to him in cantos 38 to 43, and the story naturally closes with canto 44. But the reference to that king and that ṛṣi was considered to require some elucidation at canto 16, verse 13, hence the story of Dattātreyā and the story of Alarka's parents Ṛtadhvaja and Madālasā are made the introduction to the direct exposition of yoga, with the result that the digression is so long that, when the subject of yoga is reached, its connexion with Jaimini's questions has been lost to sight; and even the passage from the story of Dattātreyā to that of Alarka at the end of canto 19 is inapt and abrupt.

Both these stories moreover appear in their turn to have been expanded beyond their natural course. The story of the brahman and his devoted wife in canto 16, which furnishes an unnecessary explanation of the birth of Dattātreyā, is a story of common town life, an absurd anachronism compared with what it explains; and it seems with its reference to a temple dedicated to Anasūyā during her life-time to be an interpolation intended for her glorification. The story of Ṛtadhvaja and Madālasā is a charming one of simple marvel and runs its natural course in cantos 20 to 27 as far as Madālasā's instruction of her son Alarka in kingly duties; but the following cantos 28 to 35, in which she expounds the laws regarding brahmins, śrāddhas, custom, &c., hardly accord with the story or with her position and knowledge, and seem to be an interpolation. Some teaching on such matters being deemed desirable, here was the only place where the addition was possible.

The Devī-māhātmya stands entirely by itself as a later interpolation. It is a poem complete in itself. Its subject and the character attributed to the goddess shew that it is the product of a later age which developed and took pleasure in the sanguinary features of popular religion. The praise of the goddess Mahā-māyā in canto 81 is in the ordinary style. Her special glorification begins in canto 82, and is elaborated with the most extravagant laudation and the most miraculous imagination. Some of the hymns breathe deep religious feeling, express enthusiastic adoration, and evince fervent spiritual meditation. On the other hand, the descriptions of the battles abound with wild and repulsive incidents, and revel in gross and amazing fancies. The Devī-māhātmya is a compound of the most opposite characters. The religious out-pourings are at times pure and elevated: the material descriptions are absurd and debased.

The ending of the Purāṇa deserves notice. It closes with the exploits of king Dama. According to the Gauḍiya or Bengal MSS., which Dr. Banerjea followed, the Purāṇa ends abruptly in canto 136, leaving Dama acquiescing tamely in the flight of his father's murderer Vapuṣmat. The up-country version (the ending of which he placed in an appendix) is found in the Bombay and Poona editions and carries the story on till Dama takes vengeance on Vapuṣmat. Dr. Banerjea considered the abruptness and incompleteness were strong evidence of the genuineness of the Bengal ending; and no doubt that is a fair argument, but it overlooks the character of the two endings. The pusillanimity which that ending ascribes to Dama jars with the whole tone of his threat in canto 135 which both versions account genuine. On the other hand the up-country ending narrates the fulfilment of that threat, and the savage and even inhuman incidents which it mentions are hardly explicable if it is spurious, for Dama after killing Vapuṣmat used Vapuṣmat's blood and flesh for the oblations due to his murdered father, and also (it is implied) gave certain degraded brahmans a cannibal feast. A forger would not wish nor dare to invent in his eulogy of one of the kings such repulsive incidents, desecrating the most sacred rites and tenets of his religion, nor if we can imagine such a forgery did occur, could it have ever obtained even tolerance. It is impossible, therefore, to think that the up-country ending is a forgery; and if it be the true original, one can easily understand why such an ending should have been struck out, and how the reviser, unable to invent or palm off a new ending, had to bring the story to the abrupt and jejune conclusion of the Bengal version. The up-country ending has, therefore, been adopted as the true version in this translation, and the Bengal ending has been noticed separately. The former discloses, like stray passages elsewhere, that savagery was not absent from the earliest memories of the Aryans in India.

For the purpose of discussing the Purāṇa further, it will be convenient to consider the first and second parts as composing one Section, and the third and fifth parts as composing another Section; and this division will be observed in what follows. The Devi-māhātmya constitutes a Section by itself.

Place of Origin.

With regard to the question of the place of its origin, the Purāṇa in both its Sections professes to have emanated from Western India.

The second Section as the oldest may be considered first. In canto 45, vs. 24 and 25, Mārkaṇḍeya says positively that Cyavana was the ṛṣi who first declared it: Cyavana obtained it from Bhṛgu and declared it to the ṛṣis, they repeated it to Dakṣa and Mārkaṇḍeya learnt it from Dakṣa. Now Cyavana is intimately associated with the west of India, especially with the region about the mouths of the rivers Narmadā and Tapti. His father Bhṛgu and their descendants Ṛcika, Jamadagni and Paraśu Rāma are connected in many a legend with all the country north, east and south of that region. That was the territory of the Bhārgava race (see pp. 310 and 368). As Cyavana settled near the mouths of those rivers, the Purāṇa itself claims to have been first declared by him in that region.

Mārkaṇḍeya himself was a Bhārgava. This is stated in canto 45, v. 18 and canto 52 vs. 14-17; and also in the Mahā-bhārata, Vana-p. ccxvi. 14104-5. The Bhārgavas spread from Cyavana's region, especially eastward along the valleys of the Narmadā and Tapti, as those valleys were gradually wrested from the hill races by the Yādavas and Haihayas, the most famous conquerors of which race were Arjuna Kārtavīrya and Jyāmagha. The former reigned in Māhiṣmatī on the Narmadā; and the latter apparently conquered further eastward (see M. Bh., Vana-p. cxvi., Sānti-p. xlix; Hari-V., xxxiii. 1850-90, and xxxvii. 1930-87; Viṣṇu P., cli-clxxiv; and Matsya P. xliii.-13-51 and xliv. 28-36). Mārkaṇḍeya is said to have paid visits to the Pāṇḍavas and to have had a tīrtha at the junction of the Ganges and Gomatī (M. Bh., Vana-p. lxxxiv. 8058-9), but his special abode appears to have been on the river Payoṣṇī (the modern Purnā and its continuation in the Tapti, see p. 299) (id. lxxxviii. 8330). Both by lineage and by residence therefore he belonged to that western country, and the original Purāṇa must have been composed there. Bhārgavas are continually alluded to throughout the Purāṇa.

As regards the first Section, it is said the Birds, to whom Jaimini was referred, were living in the Vindhya mountains, and it was there that they delivered the Purāṇa to him. They are explained of course to be four brahman brothers in a state of transmigration, and it appears to be implied in canto 3, vs. 22-24, that their father, the muni Sukṛṣa, dwelt on or near the Vindhyas. He had a brother named Tumburu. There were other persons of this name, such as Tumburu who was a guru among the Gandharvas (see pp. 571, 647, 648, and 118 as corrected; and M. Bh., Sabhā-p. li. 1881.); but it seems permissible to connect this brother Tumburu with the tribes of the names Tumbura and Trambula who dwelt on the slopes of the Vindhyas (p. 343).

The Birds are said to have dwelt in the Vindhyas in a cave, where the water was very sacred (p. 17), and which was sprinkled with drops of water from the river Narmadā (p. 19); and it is no doubt allowable to infer the situation from these indications, namely, some cliffs of the Vindhya hills where those hills abut on the river Narmadā at a very sacred tirtha. Such a spot cannot be sought above the modern Hoshangabad, for the river above that was encompassed in early times by hills, dense forest and wild tribes. Among the very sacred places where the Vindhya hills on the north approach close to the river, none satisfies the conditions better than the rocky island and town of Mandhātā, which is to be identified with Māhiṣmatī, the ancient and famous Haihaya capital. The modern town of Mahesar, some fifty miles lower down the river, claims to be the ancient Māhiṣmatī, but does not satisfy the allusions. Māhiṣmatī was situated on an island in the river and the palace looked out on the rushing stream (Raghu-V., vi. 43). This description agrees only with Mandhātā. Māhiṣmatī was sacred to Agni in the earliest times (M. Bh., Sabhā-p. 1125-63). Mandhātā has special claims to sanctity; it has very ancient remains; it has become sacred to Śiva, and the famous shrine of Ōmkāra and other temples dedicated to him are here (Hunter, Impl. Gaz., "Mandhātā."). The hills close in on the river here, and on the north bank are Jain temples. In these hills on the north bank overlooking the river at Mandhātā we may place the alleged cave where the first part of the Purāṇa professes that it was delivered; and this identification will be found to explain many further features of the Purāṇa.

With regard to the second part it may be noticed that Sumati Jaḍa, whose words the Birds repeat, belonged also to the family of Bhṛgu (p. 63). Hence this part belonged to the same region where the Bhārgavas predominated. With this view agrees the statement that the rainy season lasts four months and the dry season eight months (p. 147), as I understand is the rule in this region. It is further worthy of note that eyes of blue colour, like the blue water-lily (nīlotpala) are given to Lakṣmī (p. 104) and to Madālasā (p. 114); and such a comparison is rare, I believe, in Sanskrit. It was (may it be inferred?) in Western India that people with blue eyes could have been seen as visitors in circumstances of such appreciation that their features became a model of beauty.

There are some other matters that might have been expected to yield information of a local character, such as the lists of various trees, plants, birds and animals (pp. 24-31, 164-6 and 244-5) and the peculiar exposition of the construction and nomenclature of fortresses (pp. 240-2). I have, however, been unable to deduce any definite conclusion from the latter, and the lists betray no special local character, but rather aim at being as comprehensive in their way as the geographical cantos (57 and 58).

Both the first and second Sections, therefore, plainly emanated from Western India, and indicate the middle portion of the Narbadā and Tapti valleys as their place of origin. It remains to consider the Devī-māhātmya, and the following considerations point to the same place of origin, especially to Mandhātā.

The Devī-māhātmya must have originated in some place dedicated to the goddess in her terrible form. The poem has now become a text-book of the worshippers of Kālī throughout Northern India and in Bengal, especially at the great Durgā-pūjā festival, but it did not originate in Bengal. The goddess whom the poem glorifies is a goddess formed by the union of the vigours or energies (tejas, not śakti) of all the gods (p. 473), and she is called Mahā-māyā, Caṇḍikā, Ambikā, Bhadrā-kālī and Mahā-kālī (pp. 469, 476, &c. and 521). Though identified with Śrī once (p. 484), yet she is generally identified in the hymns with Śiva's consort as Durgā, Gaurī, Śiva-dūtī and Mahā-kālī (pp. 484-5, 494-6, and 521). The goddess Kālī, however, who is also called Cāmuṇḍā (p. 500), is made a separate goddess who issued from Caṇḍikā's forehead (p. 499); and Caṇḍikā gave her the name Cāmuṇḍā, because (as it is expressed in a bon mot) she had killed two great demons Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa (p. 500). Whether this derivation has any imaginary truth or not must be very doubtful, because fanciful derivations are common in this Purāṇa and elsewhere. The Śaktis of the gods are made separate emanations from the gods, and are called the Mothers, mātr-gaṇa (pp. 502, 504). The poem is therefore a glorification of Durgā in her terrible aspect, with Kālī as an emanation from her.

One would therefore look among the strongholds of Śiva worship for the birth-place of this poem. Now it is remarkable that of the great liṅga shrines (which are reckoned to be twelve), no less than six are situated in or near the very region of Western India where the Purāṇa originated; viz. Omkāra at Mandhātā, Mahākālā at Ujjain, Tryambak at Nasik, Ghr̥ṇeśvara at Ellora, Nāganāth east of Ahmadnagar, and Bhīma-śaṅkar at the sources of the river Bhīma. Mandhātā was doubly distinguished, for another famous liṅga was Amreśvara on the south bank of the river there. At none of them however, except at Omkāra, was Śiva or Durgā worshipped with sanguinary rites, as far as I can find.

In the Mahā-bhārata Durgā has the names Mahākālī, Bhadrakālī, Caṇḍā and Caṇḍī; and she is also called Kālī, no distinction being made (Virāṭa-p. vi. 195; Bhīṣma-p. xxiii. 796-7). The name Cāmuṇḍā does not apparently occur there. Cāmuṇḍā was worshipped with human sacrifices, for she is mentioned in the fifth Act of the Mālātī-mādhava, where her temple is introduced and her votaries tried to offer a human sacrifice at the city Padmāvati. Padmāvati was a name of Ujjain; but some scholars would identify it with Narwar which is on the R. Sindh, though that town seems to be too distant to suit the description at the beginning of the ninth Act. Whether Padmāvati was Ujjain or not, there can be no doubt from that description that it was situated in the region north of the Vindhya between the upper portions of the rivers Chambal and Parbati, that is, in the region immediately north of Mandhātā.

The only local allusion in the poem is that the goddess is Mahākālī at Mahākālā (p. 521), which is a shrine of Śiva at Ujjain; and it is possible the poem may have been composed to proclaim the māhātmya or glory of that place. But this is hardly probable, because the allusion is very brief, and the worship there was not apparently of the kind to originate this poem. Moreover, if Padmāvati was Ujjain, the Mālati-mādhava distinguishes between the temple of Cāmuṇḍā and the shrine of Mahākālā, for the temple is described as being adjacent to a field which was used as a burning-ground for corpses and which must have lain outside the city; and if Padmāvati was some other town, the allusion here to Mahākālā has no connexion with Cāmuṇḍā or Caṇḍikā at Padmāvati. It is hardly probable that, if this poem originated at Ujjain, the goddess at the shrine of Mahākālā would have been referred to in this manner. Hence this passage more probably conveys only a commendatory allusion; and it seems more natural and appropriate to connect the poem with Mandhātā, where this phase of sanguinary worship was particularly strong.

The worship of Cāmuṇḍā points to the same conclusion. Human sacrifices had long been abolished in the civilized countries of India, and the offering of such sacrifices at Padmāvati could hardly have been a survival but must have been introduced from elsewhere. Such a practice would naturally be clandestine. Human sacrifices were offered in those times only among the rude tribes of Central India, among whom such sacrifices survived till the last century; hence it may be inferred that such offerings to Cāmuṇḍā at Padmāvati must have been introduced from places which bordered on those tribes and were affected by their rites. The middle portion of the Narbada valley was eminently such a place. Pointing in the same direction is the statement in the Mahā-bhārata that Durgā had her eternal abode on the Vindhya and was fond of intoxicating liquor, flesh and cattle (Virāṭa-p. vi. 195). It seems reasonable then to conclude that the Devi-māhātmya is earlier than the Mālati-mādhava; and if so, the name Cāmuṇḍā and the form Caṇḍikā occur apparently the first time in this poem.

Mandhātā was a famous ancient tirtha and appears to have fallen into neglect and been almost deserted in the 11th and 12th centuries A.D., but its glory was revived. About the year 1165 "a Gosāin, named Daryáo Náth, was the only worshipper of Omkār on the island, which pilgrims could not visit for fear of a terrible god called Kal Bhairava and his consort Kālī Devī, who fed on human flesh. At last Daryáo Náth by his austerities shut up Kālī Devī in a cave, the mouth of which may yet be seen, appeasing her by erecting an image outside to receive worship; while he arranged that Kál Bhairava should, in future, receive human sacrifices at regular intervals. From that time devotees have dashed themselves over the Birkhala cliffs at the eastern end of the island on to the rocks by the river brink, where the terrible god resided; till in 1824 the British officer in charge of Nimár witnessed the last such offering to Kál Bhairava." (Hunter, Impl. Gaz., "Mandhāta"). There does not appear to be any information, what kind of worship was offered there before the 11th century, yet the facts suggest strongly that such sanguinary rites were not a new ordinance but had prevailed there before.

Both Śiva and his consort in their most terrible forms were thus worshipped at Mandhāta, which was almost exclusively devoted to their service; and it is easy to understand how such a sanguinary form of religion could take shape here. This region of the Narbadā valley was specially connected with demon legends, such as the demon stronghold of Tripura and the demon Mahiṣa, after which the towns Tewar and Mahesar are said to be named. It also bordered on the Nāga country. Mandhāta, with such associations, would be the most probable birth-place of this poem, and the brief allusion to Mahākāla would then be only a collateral one; yet, even if the poem was composed at Ujjain, the conclusion would still remain good that the poem originated in this region of Western India.

Date of the Purāṇa.

The question of the date of the Purāṇa is more difficult, since all questions of chronology in Sanskrit writings are most uncertain. One definite and important date may be first noticed. Mahāmahopādhyāya Haraprasād Śāstri found a copy of the Devī-māhātmya in old Newari characters in the Royal Library in Nepal, and it is dated 998 A.D. (See his Catalogue). It may be safely inferred therefrom, that this poem must have been composed before the beginning of the 10th century at the latest. The Devī-māhātmya cannot therefore be later than the 9th century and may be considerably earlier. Since it is the latest part of the Purāṇa, the other parts must have been composed earlier, and the question for consideration is, how much earlier?

Prof. Wilson in his preface to his Translation of the Viṣṇu Purāṇa pointed out that this Purāṇa is later than the Mahā-bhārata but anterior to the Brahma, Padma, Nāradya and Bhāgavata Purāṇas, and conjectured that it may be placed in the ninth or tenth century A.D. This, as already noticed, is too recent, moreover it has been discovered since that his estimates of the composition of the several Purāṇas under-reckon their age, and that the periods assigned by him should be moved some centuries earlier. For instance, he conjectured the collective writings known as the Skanda Purāṇa to be modern and "the greater part of the contents of the Kāśī Khaṇḍa anterior to the first attack upon Benares by Mahmud of Ghizni" (Preface, p. lxxii)—which must mean that the Kāśī Khaṇḍa is earlier than the 11th century A.D. But Mahāmahopādhyāya Haraprasād Śāstri found in the Royal Library in Nepal a copy of the "Skanda Purāṇa" written in the later Gupta characters of the 6th or 7th century A.D. From that it is obvious that the composition of the Skanda Purāṇa must have taken place four or five centuries earlier than Prof. Wilson's estimate. Hence it is possible that a corresponding modification of his estimate regarding the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa should be made, and that would place it about the 4th century A.D.

Further evidence is obtained from Jain writings that the Purāṇas are much earlier than Prof. Wilson estimated. Thus the Padma Purāṇa of the Jains, which was written by Raviṣena in imitation of the Hindu Padma Purāṇa, contains, I understand, a couplet showing that it was composed in the year 678 A.D.; and that Purāṇa mentions all the Purāṇas. All are mentioned again in the Jain Ādl Purāṇa of Jinasena who lived about a century later. This evidence would demonstrate that all the Hindu Purāṇas had been composed before the end of the sixth and probably by the end of the fifth century A.D.; though of course it leaves room open for subsequent additions and interpolations in them.

A common method of estimating the age of a Sanskrit composition is to consider the religious and philosophical ideas embodied in it; yet to discuss questions of chronology on the basis of such ideas seems to be more interesting than convincing. Such ideas have passed along a course of development in India, but it is doubtful how far general inferences therefrom can be safely applied to fix the date of a particular work. Where such ideas are founded on sacred compositions, which are the subject of reverent study, there must be flows, eddies and intervals of stagnation, and even rapids and back currents, in the stream of such ideas. Their course may be compared with similar speculations, not in a single European country, but in the whole of Europe, for India has always comprised many countries; and the history of Europe during the last four hundred years shews, whether it would be easy to determine the date of a writing on such subjects, in Latin solely from its contents, for the progress of thought in the different countries has been neither simultaneous nor uniform. Similarly in India, there can be no doubt that, while religion and philosophy have had their general course of development, the course has been very unequal in the different countries, so that it would not be unreasonable to suspect that at the same time one country was advancing, another was stationary, and a third was even degenerating under political adversity. The development of religion and philosophy in India then is not so clear that one can do more than venture to conjecture upon such grounds, at what period or periods this Purāṇa, which was written in Western India, was composed. And, as already mentioned, it has so little of a sectarian spirit or of special doctrines that the basis for conjecture is meagre. Subject to this caution the following features may be noticed.

Among the deities, Indra and Brahmā are mentioned oftenest; next stand Viṣṇu and Śiva; then the Sun and Agni; and lastly Dharma and others. Indra is mentioned most often in the first and fifth parts, and Brahmā in the third and fifth parts; while Viṣṇu and Śiva do not show any particular preponderance. If the Devī-māhātmya is put aside, the Sun is the deity that receives the most special adoration, and his story is related twice, first, briefly in cantos 77 and 78, and afterwards with fullness in cantos 102-110. To this may be added the cognate worship of Agni in cantos 99 and 100. Such marked reverence for Agni and the Sun would be natural in such a place as Māhiṣmatī, which (as already mentioned) was specially sacred to Agni before the worship of Śiva obtained supremacy there. Kāmarūpa, the modern Gauhāṭī in Assam, is mentioned as specially appropriate for the worship of the Sun (p. 581), and why it should have been so characterized seems unintelligible unless it was considered to be an udaya-giri.

The prominent notice of the great Vedic god Indra, and of Brahmā the earliest of the post-Vedic gods, would indicate a fairly high antiquity for the Purāṇa, especially for the second Section, which boldly claims to have issued from Brahmā's mouth equally with the Vedas (p. 219) and thus to stand almost on an equality with them—an honour which none of the other Purāṇas ventures to arrogate for itself. Such an antiquity would also explain the high position assigned to the Sun and Agni, who are also among the chief Vedic gods; yet the special praise offered to the Sun may, as Dr. Banerjea hinted, be perhaps attributable in part to Persian influences.

The first Section of the Purāṇa is certainly later than the Mahā-bhārata, for the four questions that Jaimini propounds to the Birds arose expressly out of that work. These questions are, first, a religious enigma, Why did Vāsudeva (Viṣṇu) though devoid of qualities assume human shape with its qualities of goodness, passion and ignorance? secondly, a social perplexity, Why was Draupadī the common wife of the five Pāṇḍava brothers? thirdly, a moral incongruity, Why did Baladeva expiate the sin of brahmanicide by pilgrimage? and fourthly, a violation of natural justice, Why did Draupadī's five sons all perish in their youth? The obtrusion of these questions implies that the Mahā-bhārata was firmly established as an unimpeachable authority, so that difficulties involved in it could not be disputed and must admit of reconciliation with the laws of Righteousness.

The explanations offered by the Birds appear to be these. Vāsudeva (Viṣṇu) existed in quadruple form; the first form was devoid of qualities, but each of the others was characterized by one of the three qualities, so that in his assuming human and other shapes with all the qualities no violation occurred to his nature. The second question is solved by the assertion, that because of Indra's transgressions five portions of his essence became incarnate in the Pāṇḍavas, and his wife became incarnate as Draupadī, so that she was still the wife of only one person. The third question seems to turn on the ideas, that brahmanicide was a heinous sin expiable by death and that pilgrimage was a pious undertaking; how therefore could such a sin be expiated by such action? The answer seems to be that the sin was unintentional, being due to overpowering sensual influences, and did not call for the full rigour of punishment, while the real penance consisted in confession. The fourth question is solved by a story of transmigration; Draupadi's sons were five Viśve Devās who were cursed by Viśvāmitra to assume human form for a brief period.

The first two questions and answers call for some notice and throw some light on the age of the first Section of the Purāṇa.

With regard to the first question, Dr. Banerjea has remarked in his Introduction that the description of Vāsudeva belongs to the school Nārada-pañcarātra, to which Śaṅkarācārya has given an elaborate reply in his commentary on the Brahma Sūtras; while no trace of this doctrine is to be found in the second Section of the Purāṇa. As Śaṅkara lived in the 8th century A.D., that school existed before him. The first part of this Purāṇa was, therefore, probably prior to his time; yet it may possibly have been later. This comparison then yields nothing definite.

The second answer presents some remarkable peculiarities when compared with the Mahā-bhārata. That work gives two explanations about Draupadi's wifehood, first, why she was destined to have five husbands, and secondly, why the five Pāṇḍavas became her husbands.

The first explanation is given twice in the Ādi-parvan, viz., in clxix. 6426-34 and in cxvii. 7319-28. She had been a ṛṣi's daughter and unmarried; in order to obtain a husband she propitiated Śiva with austerities, and he offered her a boon. She begged for a husband, and in her eagerness made the request five times, hence he promised her five husbands, and in spite of her objection adhered to his word and promised them to her in another life. Hence she was born as Drupada's daughter. In the latter of these two passages and in line 7310 she is made an incarnation of Lakṣmī.

The second explanation is given in Ādi-parvan cxvii. 7275-7310. Indra went to Śiva on Mount Himavat and accosted him rudely, but Śiva awed him and pointed to a cave in the mountain wherein were four prior Indras. Śiva said that Indra and those four prior Indras should be born in human shape in order to reduce the over-population of the world, and that Lakṣmī should be born and be their common wife. Accordingly Indra was born as Arjuna and the prior Indras as the other Pāṇḍavas, and Lakṣmī was born as Draupadī.

Now these stories in the Mahā-bhārata itself furnished some explanation, and why Jaimini should have felt any perplexity, if he had these explanations before him, is at first sight strange. This suggests a doubt whether they were then in the Mahā-bhārata, or whether they were inserted there afterwards to meet this very question. On the other hand, it may be noted that these explanations did not really solve the difficulty, for the five Indras who became the Pāṇḍavas were not the same deity, and thus Draupadī's husbands were still separate persons. On this point, therefore, the difficulty remained, and the answer given by the Birds removes it (though at variance with the Mahā-bhārata) by declaring that the Pāṇḍavas were all incarnations of portions of the same deity, Indra, and were thus really only one person. The Mahā-bhārata, however, presented a further difficulty, for why should Lakṣmī have become incarnate to be the wife of incarnations of Indra? The Birds alter this by declaring (again at variance with the Mahā-bhārata) that it was Indra's own wife who became incarnate as Draupadī. Both these contradictions are left unnoticed; yet it is said very truly that there was very great perplexity about this matter (p. 19).

This incongruity of Lakṣmī's becoming incarnate to be wife to incarnations of other deities suggests a further speculation. In the Mahā-bhārata as it now stands, Kṛṣṇa is an incarnation of Viṣṇu, and it was proper that Lakṣmī should become incarnate to be his queen. Nevertheless that work states that she became the wife of five persons all distinct from Viṣṇu. May it be surmised that these explanations in the Mahā-bhārata were fashioned before Kṛṣṇa had been deified, and before it was perceived that they could have any bearing on his story? If so, it is quite intelligible that it was deemed necessary, after Kṛṣṇa was deified, to remove the incongruity by asserting that Draupadī was an incarnation, not of Lakṣmī, but of Indrāṇī. This view, that the revised explanations here given regarding Draupadī and the Pāṇḍavas were necessitated by the deification of Kṛṣṇa, seems not improbable. If so, the revision and the name

Vāsudeva, by which Viṣṇu is specially addressed in the first part, would indicate that the first part was composed, when the Kṛṣṇa legend had become so well established that it was needful to bring other stories into harmony with it.

The Purāṇa contains little reference to the political condition of India; yet it may be pointed out that all the stories narrated in the first Section relate to Madhya-deśa, the Himālayas and Western India, while no mention occurs of Southern, Eastern or North-Western India. In the second Section, few illustrative stories occur apart from the main discourse on the Manus and the royal genealogies. Only one dynasty is treated of, that in which the chief princes were Vatsapri, Khanitra, Karandhama, Avikṣit and Marutta. These were famous kings, especially Marutta who was a universal monarch. I have not been able to find anything which indicates where their kingdom was, yet it must have been somewhere in the Middle-land or North-West, because of Marutta's relations with Vṛhaspati and Saṁvartta (M. Bh., Aśvam -p. iii-vi); the Middle-land here comprising the country as far east as Mithilā and Magadha. In the second Section the only allusions to other parts of India are one to the river Vitastā in the Panjab (p. 438), one to an unknown town in South India (p. 412), and several to Kāmarūpa, the modern Gauhāṭi in Assam; but the author's knowledge of Eastern India was so hazy that he treats Kāmarūpa as being easy of access from the Middle-land (p. 581). Is it reasonable to draw any inference from the mental horizon here disclosed? It agrees with the state of India in the third century A.D.

The geographical cantos 57 and 58 are no doubt special compilations and may to a certain degree stand apart. They appear to aim at being comprehensive, and to enumerate all the countries, races and tribes till then known, whether ancient or mediæval. This comprehensive character rather prevents the drawing of any large definite conclusions from them, yet two points may be noticed.

The Huṇas are placed among the peoples in the north in canto 58, though the context is not very precise. The Huns in their migrations from the confines of China appear to have arrived to the north of India about the beginning of the third century A.D., and one branch the White Huns, established a kingdom afterwards in the Oxus valley. India had no actual experience of them until their first invasion, which was made through the north-western passes in the middle of the fifth century (Mr. V. Smith's Early History of India, pp. 272, 273). The allusion to the Huns therefore, with the position assigned to them in the north, in canto 58, is plainly earlier than their invasion, and is what a writer in the third century or the early part of the fourth century would have made.

In these two cantos Prāgjyotiṣa is placed in the east, and no mention is made of Kāmarūpa. Prāgjyotiṣa was the ancient kingdom that comprised nearly all the north and east of Bengal (p. 328); later on it dwindled and seems to have lingered and perished in the east of Bengal; and after that Kāmarūpa came into prominence in its stead. In the Mahā-bhārata and Rāmāyaṇa Prāgjyotiṣa alone is named; Kāmarūpa is never, I believe, mentioned there, and it occurs in later writings only. In the Second Section however Kāmarūpa is mentioned, and no allusion is made to Prāgjyotiṣa. This difference tells in favour of the antiquity of these cantos.

With regard to the Devī-māhātmya, if the comparison made above between it and the Mālātī-mādhava is reasonable, it would follow that, since Bhavabhūti who wrote that play lived about the end of the seventh century A.D., this poem must be anterior. It would represent the incorporation of barbarous practices borrowed from the rude tribes of Central India into brahmanic doctrines, and might be assigned to the sixth or perhaps the fifth century.

From all these considerations it seems fair to draw the following conclusions. The Devī-māhātmya, the latest part, was certainly complete in the 9th century and very probably in the 5th or 6th century A.D. The third and fifth parts, which constituted the original Purāṇa, were very probably in existence in the third century, and perhaps even earlier; and the first and second parts were composed between those two periods.

Other matters of interest.

Certain other matters may be mentioned, which are of great interest in the Purāṇa.

In the first part Jaimini, though a disciple of Vyāsa and a famous ṛṣi (Mahā-bh., Śānti-p. cccli. 13647), is yet made, when perplexed by four difficult questions in Vyāsa's own work, the Mahā-bhārata, to seek instruction, not from Vyāsa but from Mārkaṇḍeya ; and this raises a presumption that there was an intention to make Mārkaṇḍeya equal with, if not superior to, Vyāsa. Further, Mārkaṇḍeya does not himself explain the questions but, declining with a transparent excuse, refers Jaimini to the Birds. The Birds, though said no doubt to be brahmans undergoing a transmigration, were inferior in education and fame to Jaimini, yet they were deemed fully capable of authoritatively answering the questions that puzzled him. It seems hard to avoid suspecting again in this construction of the story, that there was an intention to exalt the instruction given by the munis of the Vindhya to equality with, if not superiority over, that given in Madhya-deśa. It may be mentioned that according to certain legends Vaiśampāyana's pupils were transformed into partridges (tittiri) in order to pick up the Black Yajus verses disgorged by one of their companions ; but it does not seem reasonable to ascribe the introduction of these Birds as dramatis personæ in this Purāṇa to any imitation of those legends, because the nature of the stories is wholly different. The use of the Birds seems rather to be the application of a class of ideas common in the animal-tales of folk-lore to religious teaching, and to be similar to the machinery employed by Bāṇa in his story of Kādambari.

In the second part it is worthy of note that indulgence in spirituous liquor and in sensual enjoyments is viewed with little or no disapprobation in the story of Dattātreya ; and meat and strong drink are mentioned as most acceptable offerings in the worship of Dattātreya (p. 106), as an incarnation of Viṣṇu (p. 99). Meat of various kinds, including even hog's flesh, is declared to be most gratifying to the pitṛs. Such food was not unknown in ancient times, for it is said that during a severe famine king Triśaṅku supported Viśvāmitra's wife with the flesh of deer, wild pigs and buffaloes (Hari-V., 724-731).

A most extraordinary passage may be noticed in conclusion. It is related of king Dama that, after taking vengeance on prince Vapuṣmat, "with Vapuṣmat's flesh he offered the cakes to his [murdered] father, he feasted the brāhmans who were sprung from families of Rākṣasas" (p. 683 with 679). Brahmanas at times lost their caste and became degraded, but here the position is reversed and certain descendants of Rākṣasas were reckoned as brahmans. Such cannibalism is, I believe, unparalleled in Sanskrit, and it is almost incredible that there should have been brahmans of any kind whatever who would have participated in it. Eating human flesh was not unknown in ancient times (p. 427), yet a story is told in the Mahā-bhārata where Rākṣasas and even flesh-eating Dasyus disdained the flesh of a true though degraded brahman (Śānti-p. clxxii. 6420-29). This story of king Dama would seem to imply that it is of real antiquity, and that the account of the dynasty in which he occurred, and which is the only dynasty described, must be a purāṇa in the full meaning of the term.

1	Jaimini applied to Mārkaṇḍeya for instruction on four questions. Mārkaṇḍeya referred him to four learned Birds, sons of Droṇa and the Apsaras Vapu who was cursed by the	1
2	ṛṣi Duryāsas to be a bird ; and narrated the story of their	6
3	birth, and of their education by Śamika ; and explained that they were four brāhmans, who were so born, because	11 cursed by their father Sukṛṣa for not offering their bodies as food to a famished bird.
The Birds' discourse on Jaimini's four questions.
4	Jaimini visited the Birds at the Vindhya Mts. and they answered his four questions thus :—Viṣṇu assumed bodily	17
5	forms in order to accomplish good ; Draupadī became the joint wife of the five Pāṇḍavas because they were all	21
6	emanations of Indra ; Baladeva committed brahmanicide during intoxication and expiated it by pilgrimage ; and five	23
7	Viśve Devās, who, on seeing Viśvāmitra's brutality to king Hariścandra, censured Viśvāmitra, incurred his curse thereby and were born as the five sons of Draupadī to die young and	32 unmarried.
8	This story led the Birds at Jaimini's request to narrate the whole story of king Hariścandra's sufferings and	38 birds.

the instruction that a brāhman Sumati, nick-named Jaḍa, once gave to his father (cantos x—xliv).
Thus the Birds gave in Jaḍa's words a description of 11 death, after-existences and certain hells; of human concep-	69
12 tion and birth, and the evils of all existence; of certain other	71
13 hells and the various terrible torments inflicted there; and	74
they narrated the story of king Vipāścit's descent into hell,
14 with a discourse regarding actions and the specific punish-	76
15 ments for a long list of various sins, and of his deliverance	83 from hell together with other persons confined there.

Stories illustrating religious devotion (yoga).

16 The Birds, continuing Jaḍa's discourse, broached the sub-	91
ject of yoga or religious devotion, but prefaced it with a long narrative (cantos xvi to xliv). A brāhman Māṇḍavya was saved from a curse by his devoted wife, who stopped the rising 17 of the sun and gained a boon from Atri's wife Anasūyā; the	99 gods in consequence blessed Anasūyā, and Brahmā, Viṣṇu and S'iva were born as her three sons Soma, Dattātreyā and Durvā-
18 sas; Dattātreyā indulged in sensual pleasures; Arjuna Kār-	101 tavīrya, however, being advised by his minister Garga to propitiate Dattātreyā, because Dattātreyā (being an incarnation of Viṣṇu) had once saved the gods from the demons, 19 did so and by Dattātreyā's blessing reigned gloriously.	106
This led on to the story of Alarka, which is used to convey political, religious and social instruction (cantos xx to xliv).

Alarka's birth and education.

20 King Satrujit's son Ṛtadhvaja lived in intimate friend-	109 ship with two Nāga princes; they told their father Aśvatara—how Ṛtadhvaja had succoured the brāhman Gālava
21 with the help of a wondrous horse named Kuvalaya, and	113 descending to Pātāla, had killed the demon Pātāla-ketu there, and had rescued and married the Gandharva princess Madā-22 lasā, and was famed as Kuvalayāśva; and also how a	121 demon had caused Madālasā to die on a false report of

- 23 Kuvalayāśva's death. King Aśvatara, by propitiating Sa- 125
 rasvatī then, gained perfect skill in poetry and music (which are described), and by propitiating Śiva received 24 Madālasā restored to life; he invited Kuvalayāśva to 136
 25 Pātāla and gave Madālasā back to him. Kuvalayāśva had 140 26 a son by her, and she prattled to the infant; they had 142 three other sons and she named the youngest Alarka.

Political, religious and social instruction.

- 27 Then followed an exposition of political, religious and social 145 doctrine in the guise of instruction given by Madālasā to Alarka. She instructed him in the duties and conduct 28 of a king; in the duties of the four castes and of a brāh- 148
 29 man's life; in the general duties of a gṛhastha and various 151
 30 religious matters; in the duties of a gṛhastha in detail; 155
 31 in the śrāddha ceremonies; in the performance of the Pār- 157
 32 vaṇa Śrāddha and the persons to be excluded; in the par- 164 ticular foods, periods, sites and ordinances to be observed in 33 the śrāddha; in the Voluntary śrāddhas and their benefits 168
 34 and proper occasions; in the rules of Virtuous Custom, 170
 35 generally and with much detail; about diet, purification, 180 conduct, holy days and various religious ceremonies.

Exposition of religious devotion (yoga).

- 36 R̥tadhvaja then resigned his kingdom to Alarka and de- 186 37 parted to the forest. Alarka lived in pleasure, but, being 187 reduced to great straits by his brother and the king of 38 Kāśī, sought relief from Dattātreya. Dattātreya spoke 191 about the soul and, on Alarka's asking about religious devotion 39 (yoga), expounded the method, conditions and signs of its 193
 40 proper performance; the attendant ailments and the stages 198
 41 which lead to final emancipation from existence; the way 202 in which a yogī should live, beg, eat and reach his end;
 42 the composition, meaning and efficacy of the word "Om"; 205
 43 ill omens and their signification; and the seasons for, and 207 the importance of, yoga. Alarka then relinquished the

- 44 kingdom, but his brother, glad at Alarka's conversion, de- 213 clined it and departed. Alarka gave it to his son and departed to the forest. This ends Jaḍa's exposition.

The Birds' discourse on Jaimini's further questions.

Discourse on Creation.

- 45 Jaimini put further questions, and the Birds answered 217 them by repeating what Mārkaṇḍeya had taught Krauṣṭuki.
This discourse runs on to the end of the Purāṇa.

Mārkaṇḍeya, after extolling this Purāṇa, described the course of creation from Brahmā through Pradhāna, &c., and 46 the mundane egg; he discoursed about Brahmā, and ex- 224
47 plained divine and human time and the four ages. He de- 228 48 scribed the creation of the earth and all it contains; the 232 gods, demons, piṭṛs, mankind, &c., and the positions assign-49 ed them; the origin of the primeval human race and its 237
50 social and moral evolution; the birth of the nine Sages, 246 Rudra, Manu Svāyambhuva and his descendants, Dakṣa and his offspring; A-dharma and his progeny, especially the 51 goblin Duṣṣaha and his powers, whose brood of goblins and 257
52 hags are named with their particular functions; the crea- 268 tion of the Rudras; and the wives and offspring of the ṛṣis and piṭṛs.

Account of the Manus.

- 53 Mārkaṇḍeya next discoursed of the Manus and man- 271 vantaras. He told of the first Manu, Svāyambhuva, and his descendants who peopled the seven Continents. Jambu-dvīpa was occupied by Agnīdhra, and his descendant Bharata gave his name to India. This introduced the subject of geography.

Geography.

- 54 Mārkaṇḍeya described the earth and its continents, espe- 275
cially Jambu-dvīpa; and also Mount Meru, first briefly, and 55 then with full mention of neighbouring forests, lakes and 278
56 mountains; and the course of the Ganges in the sky and on 280

- 57 the earth. He mentioned the nine divisions of Bhārata, 288 and then dealt with India in detail; naming its seven 284 mountain ranges and its scattered hills; and its rivers, dis- 290 tinguishing them according to their sources, in the Himā-laya, the Pāripātra, the Vindhya, the Rkṣa, the Sahya, 298
 the Malaya, the Mahendra and the Suktimat ranges. 308
 He named the various peoples inhabiting India and its 307 confines, according as they dwelt in the Middle Land (Madhya-deśa), in the north-west, outside northwards, 311 in the north, in the east, in the south, in the west, 324 around the Vindhya mountains and beneath the Himālayas. 340
- 58 Next representing India as resting upon Viṣṇu in the form 348 of a tortoise, Mārkaṇḍeya named the various peoples (with the corresponding lunar constellations) as they were dis- 349 tributed over the middle of the tortoise's body, over its 358 face, its right fore-foot, its right flank, its right hind-foot, 370 its tail, its left hind-foot, its left flank and its left fore-foot; 384 and he added some astrological, religious and political
- 59 comments. He then described the countries Bhadrāśva, 387
- 60 Ketumāla, the Northern Kurus, Kimpuruṣa, Hari-varṣa, 390
 Ilāvṛta, Rāmyaka, and Hiraṇmaya.

Account of the Manus (resumed).

- 61 Mārkaṇḍeya related the birth of the second Manu. A 391 brāhman visited Himavat and met an Apsaras Varūthini;
 62 a Gandharva Kali by personating him gained her affection; 399
 63 and she bore a son Svarocis. Svarocis delivered a maiden 401
 64 Manoramā from a curse and married her, and also rescued 406
 65 her two girl-companions and married them; after living 408
 66 long in heedless pleasure with them, he had three sons 411 whom he established in separate kingdoms by the knowledge called Padmini; and he had by a forest goddess 67 another son Dyutimat who became the second Manu, 415
 68 Svārociṣa; and his period is noticed. The allusion to the 415 knowledge Padmini introduced a discourse on its supporters, the Nidhis.

CANTO.	PAGE.
69 Continuing, Mārkaṇḍeya related how king Uttama	419 banished his queen for bad temper, and helped a brāhman to find his ill-tempered wife who had been carried off ; he 70 was rebuked by a ṛṣi for his own conduct ; he recovered the	425 brāhman's wife, whose bad temper a Rākṣasa consumed.
71 A Nāga king had taken the queen to Pātāla, and she was	429
72 hidden ; the brāhman changed her nature and the Rākṣasa	432 restored her to king Uttama ; she bore a son, who became 73 the third Manu, Auttama, and his period is noticed.	436
74 Mārkaṇḍeya related how king Svarāṣṭra when driven	438
from his kingdom, met his deceased queen, and had a son who became the fourth Manu, Tāmasa ; his period is noticed.
75 The ṛṣi R̥tavāc made the constellation Revatī fall ; a maiden	443 was born therefrom ; she married king Durgama and bore a son, who became the fifth Manu, Raivata ; his period is 76 noticed. Cākṣuṣa, being changed when an infant by a hag,	449 became king Vikrānta's son, but turned an ascetic and became the sixth Manu, Cākṣuṣa ; his period is noticed.
77 Continuing the manvantaras, Mārkaṇḍeya said the Sun	455 married Tvaṣṭṛ's daughter Sañjñā and had two sons Vaivasvata and Yama ; Sañjñā quitted him, leaving her Shadow 78 behind, because his splendour was excessive ; Tvaṣṭṛ pared	458 his splendour down while the gods hymned the Sun ; the Sun regained Sañjñā ; he had by the Shadow a son who will be the 79 eighth Manu, Sāvarṇi. Vaivasvata is the seventh and present	461
80 Manu ; his period is noticed. The future period of Sāvarṇi	463 with its ṛṣis, gods, &c., is prophesied.

The Devī-māhātmya.

81 The mention of Sāvarṇi introduced the Devī-māhātmya.	465
Mārkaṇḍeya related that king Suratha, being ousted from his kingdom, met a vaiśya driven from his family, and both consulted a ṛṣi about their longings for home ; the ṛṣi ascribed their feelings to the goddess Mahā-māyā (Great Illusion), and related how, when she was lauded by Brahmā, Viṣṇu slew the demons Madhu and Kaiṭabha.

- 82 The ṛṣi then recited her exploits. Here begins the Devi- 473 mähātmya properly. The demons under Mahiṣa vanquished the gods, and the goddess was formed as Caṇḍikā (Am-83 bikā) out of their special energies combined; she began a 478 great battle and destroyed the demons, all the demon chiefs 84 and finally Mahiṣa himself. The gods praised her in a 482 hymn, and she promised to befriend them always. Again the gods were vanquished by the demons Śumbha and Niśumbha, and invoked her; she appeared, and Śumbha 86 wanted to marry her but she declined; he sent an army 497 and she destroyed it; he sent another with Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa;
 87 the goddess Kālī destroyed them and Caṇḍikā gave her the 499
 88 combined name Cāmuṇḍā; Śumbha sent all his armies; 501
 89 Caṇḍikā killed the chief Raktaviḍja, then Niśumbha in spite 506
 90 of Śumbha's aid, and many demons, and finally Śumbha 509
 91 himself; whereat the universe was filled with joy. The 511 gods praised her in a hymn and she promised to deliver them 92 always. She descanted on the merits of this poem. The 519 gods regained their supremacy; and she is extolled. Here ends the Devi-mähātmya properly.
 93 After hearing this poem king Suratha worshipped Caṇḍi- 522 kā, and she promised he should be the eighth Manu, Sāvarṇi.

Account of the Manus (resumed).

- 94 Mārkaṇḍeya, continuing, mentioned the other future 524
 Manus, the ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth named Sāvarṇa, 95 and the thirteenth named Raucya; and their periods. He 526 narrated the story of Raucya. A prajāpati Ruci was urged 96 by the Pitṛs to marry; he propitiated Brahmā and promised 529
 97 the Pitṛs in a hymn; they appeared and promised him a 534
 98 wife and extolled his hymn; he married an Apsaras and had 538
 99 a son who will be the thirteenth Manu Raucya. Sānti, the 539 disciple of an irascible ṛṣi Bhūti, finding the sacred fire ex-100 tinguished, offered a hymn to Agni. Agni restored the fire 546 and promised to Bhūti a son who should be the fourteenth

Manu, Bhautya. Bhautya's period is noticed. This account of the manvantaras is extolled.

Commencement of the Genealogies.

- 101 At Krauṣṭuki's request Mārkaṇḍeya began the genealo- 550
gies. Brahmā created Dakṣa, from whom came Mārtaṇḍa, the Sun. Then mentioning that Brahmā was born from the mundane egg, and produced the lokas (worlds), and next the four Vedas with their merits—Mārkaṇḍeya diverged into a laudation of the Sun.

The majesty of the Sun.

- 102 The gods and the Vedas are declared to be manifesta- 553 103 tions of the Sun. The Sun's glory was at first too great, 556 and Brahmā with a hymn induced him to contract it 104 and then finished the creation. Marici's son Kaśyapa 558 begot the gods, demons, mankind, &c. The demons overcame the gods and Aditi sought help of the Sun in a 105 hymn. He became her son as Mārtaṇḍa and destroy- 563
106 ed the demons. The story of the Sun and his wife Sañ- 566 jñā (as told in cantos lxxvii and lxxviii) is re-told here with more detail regarding the Shadow-Sañjñā, the curse on 107 Yama, the paring down of the Sun's splendour, the hymns 572 108 offered to the Sun, and the Sun's offspring and the sta- 574 tions allotted them.
- 109 Further Mārkaṇḍeya related that king Rājya-varadhana 577 when old resolved to resign the kingdom, but his people in 110 grief propitiated the Sun, and the Sun granted him great 583 length of life; the king similarly obtained the same boon for them. This story is extolled.

The Genealogies resumed.

- 111 Mārkaṇḍeya mentioned Manu Vaivasvata's seven sons 587 112 and Ilā-Sudyumna, Purūravas, &c. Manu's son Pūṣadhra 590 killed a brāhman's cow and being cursed became a śūdra.
113 Karuṣa's descendants were mentioned. 593
Diṣṭa's son Nābhāga married a vaiśya maiden wilfully

- 114 and became a vaiśya ; their son Bhanandana conquered the 597 earth, but Nābhāga declined to reign. Then Nābhāga's wife explained that she was not really a vaiśya, but that her father was a king who became a vaiśya under a ṛṣi's curse 115 with a promise of recovery, and that she was a princess and 601 had become a vaiśya under Agastya's curse.
- 116 Bhanandana became king. His son Vatsapri rescued a 604 princess Sunandā from Pātāla after killing a demon king 117 who had a magic club, and married her. His son was 610 Prāṁśu, and Prāṁśu's son Prajāti. Prajāti's son Khani-tra was beneficent ; his brothers' ministers practised magic 118 to dethrone him but destroyed themselves ; Khanitra re- 615 119 signed the kingdom in grief and went to the forest. His 617 son Kṣupa performed sacrifices for the harvests. His son 120 was Vira and grandson Vivimśa. Vivimśa's son Khanine- 619 tra while hunting met two deer eager to be sacrificed, and 121 by Indra's favour obtained a son Balāśva. Balāśva was called 623 Karandhama because of a fanciful victory.
- 122 His son Avikṣit married many princesses and carried off 256 123 princess Vaiśālīnī at her svayamvara : the suitor kings 628 conquered and captured him, but she refused them all : 124 Karandhama rescued Avikṣit, but Avikṣit refused to marry 631
the princess after his discomfiture ; she turned to austerities 125 and obtained an assurance from the gods : Avikṣit's mother 637 by a ruse obtained a promise from him to beget a son :
126 while hunting he rescued the princess from a demon and 641
127 pleased the gods : she proved to be a Gandharva maiden and 645
Avikṣit married her in the Gandharva world ; she bore a son 128 Marutta there. Avikṣit returned but refused the kingdom 649 129 because of his discomfiture. Marutta became king, and was 653 a universal monarch, a great sacrificer, and liberal benefactor 130 to brāhmins. The Nāgas gave great trouble, and he at- 658 tacked them, but Avikṣit interposed in favour of the Nāgas ; 131 a battle was averted by the ṛṣis, and the Nāgas made repara- 660 tion. Marutta's wives are named.
- 132 His son Nariṣyanta enriched the brāhmins permanently 665

133 at a great sacrifice. His son Dama was chosen by the	668
Daśārṇa princess, and defeated the suitor kings, who, in vio-
134 lation of marriage laws, opposed him. Dama became king.	674
Nariṣyanta was murdered in the forest by Vapuṣmat one of 135 those kings. Dama bewailed, and vowed vengeance against	678
136 the murderer ; he slew Vapuṣmat and celebrated his father's	680 obsequies with Vapuṣmat's flesh and blood.

Conclusion.

137 The Birds closed their long repetition of Mārkaṇḍeya's	684 instruction to Krauṣṭuki, with an encomium on the Purāṇas and this Purāṇa in particular. Jaimini thanked them.

MARKANDEYA PURANA.

OM! REVERENCE TO THE ADORABLE VISHNU!

May Vishnu's lotus-feet, which power have To dissipate the woes wrought by the fear
Of existence, and which are lauded high
By ascetics, assiduous, whose minds
From all things else are rapt—may those same feet,
Whose steps the earth, the sky, and heaven o'erpassed;
To sight appearing, purify your souls!

May He protect you, who is skilled to save
In every kind of sin impure; whose form
Within the bosom of the sea of milk Upon the hooded snake reclines; and at Whose touch the sea grows mountainous, its spray
Up-tossing from its waters by his breath Disturbed, and into seeming dancing breaks!

CANTO I.

The Curse on Vapu.

Jaimini applies to Márkandeya for instruction regarding certain difficulties in the Mahábhárata—Márkandeya refers him to four learned Birds, the sons of Drona, and narrates their history—Their mother Vapu, an Apsaras, was condemned by the Muni Durvāsas to become a bird for tempting him.

Having adored Nārāyana, and Nara the best of men, the goddess Sarasvatī, and then Vyāsa, let him utter the verse of Victory!

- 1 The illustrious Jaimini, the disciple of Vyāsa, interrogated the great Muni Márkaṇḍeya, who was engaged in the performance of austerities and the study of the Veda.
- 2 “Sir! the high-souled Vyāsa related the story of the Mahābhārata, which is replete with splendid spotless collections 3 of various Śāstras, which is characterized by accuracy regarding the different classes, is embellished with beautiful words, and contains complete knowledge of primā facie assertions, and 4 established conclusions. As Viṣṇu is chief among the gods, as the brahman chief among men, and as the crest-jewel chief 5 among all decorations, as the axe* is the best among weapons, as the mind best among the organs, so in this world is the 6 Mahābhārata the best among all the Śāstras. Here are described both Wealth and Virtue, Love, and Final emancipation from transmigration; these have both reciprocal and peculiar 7 consequences. It is the best Dharma-śāstra, it is the most eminent Artha-śāstra; it too is the foremost Kāma-śāstra, as 8 well as the noblest Moksha-śāstra. It has been declared, Sir, by Veda-Vyāsa the wise, to be the authority for the sacred and maxims of the laws of the four periods of a brahman's 9 life. For this Mahā-śāstra has been so constructed, dear Sir, by Vyāsa the noble in deeds, that although beset with 10 difficulties it is not overthrown by them. The earth has been freed from the dust of passion by the stream of Vyāsa's words, which has descended from the mountain of the Veda, 11 and has swept away the trees of bad reasoning. Therefore have I come to thee, Sir, being desirous to know truly the story of Vyāsa, in which melodious sounds are the geese, the 12 noble story is the splendid lotus the words are the expanse of water, and the Vedas are the great lake—this precious 13 and long story of the Mahābhārata. Why was Janārdana

* Or Indra's thunderbolt.

- Vásudeva, who is the cause of the creation preservation and destruction of the world, although devoid of qualities, endued with humanity? And why was Drupada's daughter Krishná the common wife of the five sons of Páṇḍu? for on this point we feel great perplexity. Why did the mighty Baladeva Haláyudha expiate his brahmanicide by engaging in a pilgrimage? And how was it that the unmarried heroic high-souled sons of Draupadí, whose protector was Páṇḍu, were slain, as if they had no protector? Deign to recount all this to me here at length; for sages like thee are ever the instructors of the ignorant."
- 18 Having thus heard his speech, the great Muni Márkaṇḍeya, devoid of the eighteen* defects, began to speak.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 19 "The time for my engaging in religious rites has now arrived, most virtuous Muni! and this is not esteemed the season for a long discourse. But I will now tell thee, O Jaimini, of those birds who will speak to thee and so resolve thy doubts. They are Pingáksha and Vibodha, Supatra, and Sumukha, the sons of Droṇa, the noblest of birds, versed in the principles of philosophy, and meditators on the Sástras. Their mind is unclouded in the knowledge of the meaning of the Veda and Sástras. They dwell in a cave of the Vindhya mountains, visit and question them."
- 23 Then, thus addressed by the wise Márkaṇḍeya, replied the Muni pre-eminent, his eyes wide open with astonishment.

Jaimini spoke.

- 24 "Very wonderful is this, O brahman! that those birds have gained knowledge most difficult to be acquired, as if birds

* The 18 defects are said, in a translation begun by the late Rev. K. M. Banerjee, to be these—palpitation, fear, thickness in speech, indistinctness, speaking through the nose, discordancy, want of emotion, disconnectedness, roughness, hoarseness, high pitch, inaccuracy in pronunciation, perturbation, want of cadence, sing-song, shaking the head, weakness of voice, and unmeaningness.

25 possessed human speech. If their birth is of the brute creation, whence have they the knowledge? And how is it that those 26 winged ones are called the children of Drona? And who was this famous Drona, who had those four sons. Do those virtuous high-souled birds possess the knowledge of righteousness?"

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

27 "Listen attentively to what happened of yore in Nandana at the meeting of Indra and the Apsarases and Nárada.
28 Nárada saw Indra the king of the gods in Nandana, surrounded by a band of those wanton maidens, with eyes fasten-29 ed on their faces. Śac'í's lord, immediately he was seen by that best of Rishis, rose up, and respectfully gave him his own 30 seat. Those heavenly maidens, on seeing him, the slayer of Bala and Vṛitra, rise up, prostrated themselves before the 31 Devarshi and stood reverently bending. He then, worshipped by them, duly greeted Indra, when he had seated himself, and conversed pleasantly with him.

32 "Then in the course of their talk, Indra said to the great Muni— 'Declare, which of these dancers pleases thee most. Is 33 it Rambhá, or Karkaśá, or Urvasí, Tilottamá, Ghritác'í, or 34 Menaká? or whichever delights thee.' Nárada, best of dvijas, hearing this speech of Indra, pondered and then addressed 35 the reverently bending Apsarases :—'She, of you all here present, who thinks herself pre-eminent in beauty, nobility 36 and good qualities, let her dance before me. There is indeed no success in dancing for one who is destitute of good qualities and beauty. Good dancing implies graceful comportment : other dancing is vexation.'

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

37 "And immediately on that speech, each one of those bowing ones thus exclaimed—'I excel in good qualities; not you, nor 38 you!' The lord Indra seeing their agitation said, 'Let the Muni be asked, he will say which of you excels in good qualities.' 39 What Nárada, sought by those followers of Indra's will, 40 then said, hear that from me, O Jaimini! 'She among you who by her power perturbs the most noble Muni Durvāsas, who is performing austerities, dwelling on the mountain, her among you I deem pre-eminent in good qualities.'

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 41 "Having heard that his sentence, they all exclaimed, with trembling necks, 'this is impossible for us!'
- 42 "Among them an Apsaras named Vapu, confident of perturb-ing the Muni, replied, 'I will follow where the Muni dwells; 43 now will I make that tamer of his body, who has yoked the horses of his organs, but a poor charioteer whose reins 44 drop before the weapons of love. Whether it be Brahmá, or Janárdana or the purple S'iva, his heart will I now pierce with the arrow of love.'
- 45 "Having thus spoken Vapu departed then to the Snowy mountain to the Muni's hermitage, where the beasts of prey 46 were quelled by the might of his austerities. Stopping at the distance of a call from where the great Muni is seated, 47 the lovely Apsaras sang the cuckoo's melody. Hearing the strains of her song, the Muni astonished in mind went 48 to where sits that beauteous-faced maiden. On seeing her, beautiful in every limb, the Muni, summoning his resolution, was filled with anger and resentment, knowing 49 that she had come to perturb him. Then the great Rishi, the performer of mighty austerities, pronounced this sentence.
50 'Since thou hast come here, O maiden! intoxicated with pride, to cause me pain by obstructing my austerities, which are ac-51 complished with difficulty, O Apsaras, therefore shalt thou, polluted by, my wrath, be born in the foolish race of birds 52 for the space of sixteen years, losing thine own form, and taking the form of a bird; and four sons shall be born to 53 thee, O vilest of Apsarases; and without having gained affection among them, absolved from guilt by dying in the field of battle, thou shalt regain thy dwelling in the sky. Never make any reply.'
- 54 The Bráhmaṇ, red-eyed with anger, having pronounced this grievous sentence on that proud maiden, whose tinkling bracelets were trembling, abandoned the earth, whose waves were very tremulous, and departed to the heavenly Ganges whose stream consists of a multitude of renowned qualities."

CANTO II.

The Birth of the Sparrows.

The story of the Birds continued—Kandhara, king of the birds killed a Rákhasa Vidyud-rúpa for killing his brother, and, marrying the Rákhasa's wife, had a daughter by her named Túrksí who was the Apsaras Vapu—She married Droṇa—When pregnant by him she was killed at the battle of the Kauravas and Páṇḍavas, and there laid four eggs from which the four Birds were born—The Birds were nourished by the Muni Ś'amika.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 The king of the birds, Garuda by name, was the son of
- 2 Arishtaṇemi : Garuda's son was renowned as Sampáti : and his son was Supárśva, heroic, mighty as Váyu : Supárśva's son
- 3 was Kunti ; Kunti's son was Pralolupa. And he had two sons Kanka and Kandhara.
- 4 On the top of Kailása, Kanka saw the Rákshasa famed as Vidyud-rúpa, whose eyes were like a lotus leaf, a follower
- 5 of Kuvera, who was busied in a banquet, clad with strings of bright garlands, sitting in company with his wife on a beautiful clean rocky seat. Then the Rákshasa, immediately he
- 6 was seen by Kanka, filled with anger, said, "Wherefore hast thou come hither, O vilest of the egg-born ? Why hast thou
- 7 approached me when I am in company with my wife ? Such is not the rule of the wise in matters that must be accomplished in secret."

Kanka spoke.

- 8 "This mountain is common both to you and me and to other creatures also ; what special ownership then canst thou, Sir, have here ?"

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 9 The Rákshasa with his sword slew Kanka, while he was thus speaking, who fell defiled with the streaming blood, quivering and senseless.
- 10 Having heard that Kanka was slain, Kandhara the king of the birds, bewildered with anger, resolved speedily to slay
- 11 Vidyud-rúpa. Having gone to the mountain-top, where Kanka lay slain, the king of the birds, his eyes swollen with anger and resentment, and sighing like the king of the Nāgas
- 12 performed the Sankalana for his elder brother. Where sits the slayer of his brother, there he went, rocking the lofty
- 13 mountains with the mighty wind from his wings. He, with blood-red eyes, overtopping the mountains, and forcibly hurling down masses of clouds with his wings, used to destroy
- 14 his enemies suddenly. There he saw that demon, whose thoughts were intent on drinking, whose face and eyes were of a copperish colour, and who was seated on a golden couch,
- 15 whose crest was covered with strings of garlands, who was adorned with yellow sandal, whose face was very horrible with teeth that resembled the inside of the Ketakí leaf.
- 16 And he saw, seated on the Rákshasa's left thigh his long-eyed wife, named Madaniká, whose voice was soft as the cuckoo's.
- 17 Then Kandhara, whose mind was filled with wrath, addressed that inmate of the cave, "O thou of utterly evil soul! come
- 18 forth and fight with me. Since thou hast murdered my trustful elder brother, therefore I will bring thee, while en-
- 19 grossed in drunkenness, down to Yama's abode. To-day, slain by me, shalt thou go to all those hells that are the abodes of the murderers of those who trust in them, and of the murderers of women and children."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 20 Addressed even thus by the king of the birds in his wife's presence, the Rákshasa, filled with anger, then answered the
- 21 bird. "If thy brother has been slain, then have I displayed my valour; thee, too, to-day, will I slay with this sword, O

22 bird. Stay a moment, thou shalt not move here alive, O vilest of birds."

Thus he spoke and seized his bright sword that resembled 23 a mass of collyrium. Then took place a marvellous battle between the king of the birds and Kuvera's warrior, such 24 as between Garuda and Indra. Then the Rákshasa, in anger swiftly hurling his sword, black as charcoal, flung it against 25 the king of the birds. And then the king of the birds, slightly springing up from the ground, seized it with his beak, as 26 Garuda seizes a serpent; and the egg-born one broke it with his beak and talons, and shook it. Thereupon, the sword 27 being broken, they began to fight with their arms. Then the Rákshasa, being attacked in the breast by the king of the birds, was speedily deprived of arms, feet, hands and head.

28 When he was killed, his wife besought protection of the 29 bird: somewhat fearful, she said, "I am thy wife." That noblest of birds, taking her, returned to his abode, having obtained a recompense for his brother by the slaughter of 30 Vidyud-rúpa. And she, the daughter of Menaká, with beautiful eyebrows, capable of assuming forms at pleasure, on reaching the house of Kandhara, took a form resembling Garuda's.
31 Of her, he then begat a daughter named Tárkshí, (namely Vapu the loveliest of the Apsarases, who was consumed by the fire of the Muni's curse). Then the bird gave her the name Tárkshí.

32 And Mandapála had four sons of boundless intellect, Jari-33 tári the eldest and Drona the youngest, best of dvijas. The youngest of them, righteous in soul, thoroughly read in the Vedas and Vedángas, married her the beauteous Tárkshí, 34 with the consent of Kandhara. And after a while Tárkshí conceived; when she had gone seven fortnights in her preg-35 nancy, she went to Kurukshetra. The very terrible battle between the Kurus and Paṇḍavas was then being fought, and, in consequence of her action being predestined, she entered into 36 the battle. There, then, she beheld the contest between Bha-gadatta and Arjuna. The sky was thick filled with arrows, 37 as if with locusts. Discharged from the bow of Arjuna an arrow, black as a serpent, fell with great force and pierced 38 the skin of her belly. Her belly being pierced, four moon-like eggs fell on the ground as if on a heap of cotton, from the 39 fact that their allotted period of life was not ended. At the same time that they fell, fell the great bell, the cord of which was cut by an arrow, from the noble elephant Supratika.

 40 It reached the ground evenly all around, cutting into the surface of the ground, and covering the eggs of the bird which lay upon flesh.

41 And after king Bhagadatta, ruler of men, was slain, the fight between the armies of the Kurus and Pāṇḍavas went on 42 many days. At the end of the battle, when Dharma's son Yudhishtira approached the son of Sántanu to hear the high-43 souled Bhishma proclaiming the entire laws, a sage named Samika came to the spot where, O best of dvijas, lay the eggs 44 within the bell. There he heard the voice of the little birds chirping, whose voices were inarticulate on account of their 45 infancy, although they had transcendent knowledge. Then the Rishi, accompanied by his disciples, lifted up the bell and saw with surprise the young motherless and fatherless birds.
 46 The venerable Muni Samika, having so seen them on the ground there, filled with astonishment, addressed his attendant dvijas.

47 "Well was it said by the chief of the dvijas, Uśanas himself, the regent of the planet Venus, when he saw the army of 48 the Daityas intent on fleeing, hard-pressed by the gods. 'Ye must not go, turn ye back; why run ye away, ye feeble ones?
 Abandoning valour and glory, where have ye gone? Ye shall 49 not perish. Whether one perishes or whether one fights, one possesses life as long as God originally created, not as 50 long as one's mind desires. Men perish, some in their homes, some in flight; so, too, do they meet their death when 51 eating food and drinking water. So, too, others, when sporting themselves, seated in the chariot of Love, free from sickness, their bodies unpierced by arrows, fall into the power 52 of the King of the departed. Others, when intent on austerities, are led off by the servants of the King of the departed :

and others occupied in meditation and study have not gained 53 immortality. Of yore, Indra hurled his thunderbolt against Sámbara, yet that demon, though pierced thereby to the heart, 54 did not perish. By that very thunderbolt, indeed, and by the same Indra, when their time was come, the Dánavas 55 were slain, the Daityas forthwith perished. Perceiving this, ye should not fear : return ye.' Then those Daityas, aban-56 doning the fear of death, turned back. This speech of Uśanas is proved true by these most noble birds, which even in the superhuman battle did not meet with destruction.
 57 Whence comes the laying of the eggs, O brahmans ? Whence comes the even fall of the bell ? And how comes it that the 58 ground is covered with flesh, fat, and blood ? Certainly these must be some brahmans ; they are not ordinary birds. The favour of destiny shows great good-fortune in the world."
 59 Having spoken thus he looked at them and spoke again,
 "Return, go to the hermitage, taking the young birds with you.
 60 Where these egg-born may have no fear of cat, or rat, of 61 hawk or ichneumon, there let the birds be placed. O dvijas, what is the use of great care ? All creatures are destroyed or preserved by their own actions, as have been these young 62 birds. Nevertheless men must exert themselves in all matters ; he who does a manly act gains commendation from us, the good."

63 Thus urged by that illustrious Muni, those young Munis, taking those birds, went then to their own hermitage, delightful to ascetics, where clusters of bees settled on the boughs of 64 the trees. And he, the noblest of dvijas, gathering wild roots, flowers, fruits, grasses, such as his mind loved, perform-65 ed the various religious ceremonies ordained by the Veda to all the deities, to Viṣṇu, Rudra, and the Creator, to Indra, Yama, and Agni, to Varuṇa, to Vṛihaspati and Kuvera, and also to Vayu, to Dhátri and Vidhátṛi.

CANTO III.

The Visit to the Vindhya Mountain.

The Story of the Birds continued—The Birds, when full-grown, were endowed with speech, and explained that wonder to the Muni Samika—They were the four sons of a Rishi Sukrisha—Indra appeared to the Rishi in the form of an aged bird, and asked for human flesh—The Rishi ordered his four sons to sacrifice themselves—They refused, and he cursed them to be born in the brute creation, but, moved with compassion at their entreaty, bestowed on them perfect knowledge—Hence they were born as birds.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 Thus he, the most virtuous Muni, O princely brahman,
- 2 nourished them day by day with food and water, and in safety.
- 3 After a month they resorted to the sun's chariot-road, being
- 4 gazed at by the Munis' sons, whose eyes were tremulous
- 5 with curiosity. After seeing the earth, with its cities, and
- 6 with its ocean and noble rivers, which appeared of the size
- 7 of a chariot wheel, they returned to the hermitage. The
- 8 spirited birds were wearied in their souls with their toil : and
- 9 their knowledge was developed there through their energy.
- 10 They all performed the reverential circumambulation around
- the Rishi, who was expounding the truths of the law in com-
- passion for his disciples, and respectfully saluted his feet
- and said, " We have been delivered by thee, O Muni ! from
- dreadful death ; thou hast given us shelter, food, and water ;
- thou art our father and spiritual guide. Our mother died,
- when we were still in the womb ; nor have we been nourished
- by a father : thou, by whom we were preserved when young,
- hast given us life. Thou, of perfect splendour on the earth,
- lifting high up the elephant's bell, didst purge away evil
- from us who were withering like worms. ' How may these
- strength-less ones grow ? When shall I see them flying
- in the sky ? When shall I see them alighting on a tree of the - earth, settling within the trees ? When shall my natural
- colour be obliterated by the dust which the wind from their

- 11 wings raises, as they flit about near me ? ' Thou, dear Sir, thus thinking, didst nourish us ; now we, those very birds, are grown up and have become wise, what ought we to do ? "
- 12 Having clearly heard this their perfectly articulated speech, the Rishi, surrounded by all his disciples, and accompanied 13 by his son S'ringin, being full of eager curiosity, and covered with horripilation as with a garment, said, " Tell me truly the 14 cause of your power of speech. Through whose curse did you incur this wondrous transformation both in form and speech ? Deign here to tell me that."

The birds spoke.

- 15 " There was of yore a most virtuous Muni named Vipulasvat.
 16 To him were born two sons Sukrisha and Tumburu. We are the four sons of soul-subdued Sukrisha ; to that Rishi we were ever submissive in reverence, religious practices and faith.
 17 As he desired, who was diligent in the performance of austerities, and who constantly kept his organs under control, 18 we at once produced fuel, flowers and everything else, and whatever was needed for sustenance.
- 19 " Now while he and we thus dwelt in the forest, there came the king of the gods in the appearance of a bird, mighty in size, with broken wings, stricken with age, with eyes of a 20 copperish colour, down-cast in soul ; desirous to prove that venerable Rishi, who practised truth, purity, and patience, and who was exceedingly lofty in mind ; and for the coming of the curse upon us.

" The bird spoke.

- 21 " " O exalted dvija, deign here to save me, who am consumed with hunger. I seek for food, noble Sir ! be thou my in-22 comparable refuge. As I was standing on a summit of the Vindhya Mountains, I fell, Sir, at an exceedingly swift blast sent 23 by the wings of a bird. So there I lay on the ground, lost in unconsciousness, without memory, for seven days ; with the 24 eighth day I regained consciousness. New fully conscious, pressed by hunger, I have come for help to thee ; I am seeking for food, deprived of all pleasure, and with a mind in 25 pain. Therefore turn, pure-minded sage, thy steadfast mind to my rescue; give me, O Brahmarshi, food suitable to support my life.'

26 "He, thus invoked, answered him, Indra in bird-like shape,
 'I will give thee the food thou desirest for the support of thy 27 life.' Thus having spoken, that best of dvijas further asked him, 'What food shall I prepare for thy use?' and he replied,
 'My chiefest delight is in human flesh.'

"The Rishi spoke.

28 "'Thy childhood is past; thy youth, too, gone; thou art as-
 • 29 suredly in the decline of life, O egg-born. Why art thou most malign-hearted even in old age, thou in whom of all 30 mankind every desire has ceased? What has thy last stage of life to do with human flesh? Assuredly no one is created 31 foremost among evil-beings! Or what need hast thou to address me, being what I am? One should always give when one has promised—such is our professed opinion.'

32 "Having thus spoken to him, the Brahmarshi resolved that it should be so. Calling us quickly and commending us accord-33 ing to our good qualities, the Muni, agitated at heart, addressed a most severe speech to us all, who were respectfully 34 bowing, full of faith, with hands reverently joined. 'Ye noble dvijas, whose minds are improved, are bound by obligations equally with me. A glorious progeny has sprung from you, just 35 as ye, O twice-born, have sprung from me. If a father is deemed by you a guru worthy of reverence and most exalted, perform ye then my promise with cheerful mind.'

36 "Whilst he so spoke we exclaimed respectfully, 'What thou shalt say, consider that in truth as already accomplished.'

"The Rishi spoke.

37 "'Of me has this bird sought protection oppressed with hunger and thirst; wherefore let him be straightway satisfied 38 with your flesh, and let his thirst be quickly assuaged with your blood.

“Then we, afflicted, our terror visible in our trembling, exclaimed, ‘Alas, alas!’ and said, ‘not this deed! How for the sake of another’s body can a wise man destroy or injure his own body? for a son is even as one’s own self. A son pays those debts, indeed, that have been declared due to the pitris, the gods, and men; a son does not offer up his body. Therefore we will not do this; we have done as has been done by men of old. While alive one receives good things, and while alive one does holy acts. When one is dead, the body perishes, and there is an end of righteousness, &c. Men skilled in holy law have declared that one ought by all means to preserve one’s self.’

“Having heard us speak thus, the Muni, burning as it were with anger, again addressed us, scorching us, as it were, with his eyes. ‘Since ye will not perform this my plighted word for me, therefore, blasted by my curse, ye shall be born among the brute creation!’

“Having thus addressed us, he next said to that bird, ‘When I have performed for myself the final sacrifice, and my obsequies, according to the S’ástras, do thou unhesitatingly eat me here, (O best of dvijas): this my body I here grant thee for food. The brahmanhood of a brahman is deemed such, so far indeed as he maintains his truthfulness, O chief of the feathered race. Not by sacrifices accompanied with presents, nor by any other act, do brahmans acquire such great virtue as by the observance of truth.’

“Having heard this his speech, the Muni concentrated himself in deep meditation. Perceiving that his fixed resolution, Indra, further, resuming his own form said, ‘Ho! princely brahman, understand with thy understanding what is to be understood, O man of understanding! To prove thee have I thus transgressed, O sinless one! Pardon me then, O pure-minded one: and what wish is there of thine that may be granted?

 Pleased most highly am I with thee, for maintaining thy true 54 word. Henceforth, knowledge like Indra's shall be revealed to thee, and no obstacle shall withstand thee in austerities and holy law.'

55 "But when Indra after speaking thus had departed, we prostrate on our faces thus implored our father, the renowned 56 Muni, who was filled with anger. 'Dear father, high-minded, deign to pardon us miserable ones who dread death; for life 57 is dear to us. In an aggregate of skin bones and flesh, filled with pus and blood, wherein one should take no delight, therein 58 do we find this delight. Hear too, Sir, how people are beguiled when overcome by those powerful enemies, their faults, 59 love, anger and so forth. Great is the fortress which has Wisdom for its rampart, the bones for its pillars, the skin for 60 its walls and banks, the flesh and blood for its plaster. Nine gates it has; it is capable of great effort; it is enclosed on all sides with sinews; and there the Sentient Soul* sits firm as 61 king. He has two rival ministers, the Intelligence† and the Understanding‡; those two strive to destroy each other as 62 foes. Four enemies desire the destruction of that king, Desire,§ 63 Anger, and Covetousness; and Folly|| is the other enemy. But when that king closes those gates and stands firm, then he becomes indeed both happily strong and free from alarm;
 64 he displays his affections; he is not overcome by his enemies.
 65 But when he leaves all the gates open, then the enemy named 66 Passion¶ assails the gates of the eyes, etc. Gaining an entrance by the five gates, he penetrates everywhere and spreads widely:
 then indeed enter, following on his track, the three other 67 terrible enemies. That very enemy, Passion, having entered there, forms a close union with the Understanding, together

* Purusha.

68 with the other gates which are known as the organs. He, difficult to be approached, having reduced into subjection the organs and the Understanding, and having reduced into sub-69 jection the gates, then destroys the rampart. The Intelligence, seeing the Understanding the dependent of that enemy, perishes forthwith. And there, deprived of his ministers and abandoned 70 by his subjects, the king, his strategetical points gained by the enemies, perishes. Even so Passion, Folly, Covetousness and 71 Anger prevail, evil in their nature, wrecking the memory of mankind. From Passion springs Anger; from Anger is born 72 Covetousness; from Covetousness arises Folly; from Folly errors of memory; from loss of memory loss of the intellect; through 73 loss of the intellect man perishes. Shew favour, O thou most virtuous! to us who have thus lost our intellects, who are compliant to Passion and Covetousness, and who covet life.
 74 And let not this curse take effect, which thou hast pronounced, Sir! Let us not tread the miserable path of darkness, O best of Munis!

“ The Rishi spoke.

75 “ ‘ What I have uttered, will never become false; my voice 76 has not spoken untruth hitherto, O sons! Fate is here supreme,
 I think. Fie on worthless manhood, whereby I have been thoughtlessly forced to do a deed that ought not to be done!
 77 And since I am besought reverently by you, therefore, when endowed with the nature of brutes, ye shall obtain the highest 78 knowledge. And ye, having your paths illuminated by knowledge, with the stains of pain removed, free from doubt, shall through my favour gain the highest perfection.’ 79 “ Thus, Sir, we were cursed of old by our father through the power of destiny; hence we have descended to a lower grade of 80 created beings for a long time; and we were born on the field of battle; we were nourished by thee: thus have we acquired the nature of birds, O bráhmaṇ. There is no man in this world who is not bound by fate.”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

81 Having heard this their speech, the venerable and eminent

- Muni Samika answered those dvijas who stood near him.
- 82 ' Even before did I make this remark in your presence, ' These are not ordinary birds ; these must be some bráhmans, who even in the superhuman battle escaped destruction.' "
- 83 Then they, permitted by that affectionate high-souled Muni, went to the Vindhya, the goodliest of mountains, clad with
- 84 trees and creepers. Hitherto have the righteous birds remained on that mountain, engaged in austerities and the study
- 85 of the Vedas, and resolute in meditation. Thus those Muni's sons gained the hospitality of the noble Muni, acquired the shape of birds, and are dwelling on the Vindhya range, in a cave of the noble mountain, where the water is very sacred, with their minds subdued.

CANTO IV.

The Incarnation of the Four-formed God.

Jaimini visits the Birds, and explaining the reason of his visit, puts them the four questions that perplexed him—After invoking Vishnu, Brahmá and S'iva, they explain the first question, why Vishnu, though devoid of qualities, is endued with humanity.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 Thus those birds, the sons of Droṇa, became learned ; and they dwell on the Vindhya mountain : visit them and ask them.
- 2 Jaimini, having heard this speech of the Rishi Márkaṇḍeya, went to the Vindhya mountain, where dwelt those righteous birds. And when Jaimini reached that mountain, he heard their voices as they were reading, and having heard
- 3 filled with surprise, he reflected. ' The bráhmans are reading, observing the beauties of the various passages, regulating their breath, without any intermission, distinctly and
- 4 without faults : wondrous is this, methinks, that Sarasvatí does not forsake these Muni's sons, although they are born in
- 5 the brute creation. One's circle of relatives and a friend and whatever else is desired in one's home—all that forsakes one

7 and departs ; Sarasvatí does not abandon one.' Thinking even thus, he entered the mountain cave ; and entering saw those 8 dvijas standing on a ledge of the rock. Looking at them as they were reading, their faces free from blemish, he then addressed them all, with mingled sorrow and joy.

9 "Hail to you, O bráhmans ! Know that I am Jaimini a disciple of Vyása, who am come to you, being eager for learn-10 ing. Verily be ye not angry ; whereas ye, being cursed by your father, who was exceedingly wrathful, have been turned 11 into birds, that was indeed altogether fate. In a family of immense wealth some intelligent members, it is said, were born ;
when their wealth was lost, they were well comforted, 12 O bráhmans, by S'abara. Men after giving to others become beggars themselves ; and others, after killing men, have been killed themselves ; and others, after having overthrown men, have been themselves overthrown ;—those very men, through the decay 13 of austerities. Thus I have very often seen opposites of this kind : the world is constantly distressed by the destruction of 14 existence and non-existence. At such thoughts as these in your minds, ye should not give way to sorrow : so much is invulnerability to sorrow and joy the fruit of knowledge."

15 Then they all did Jaimini honour, by giving him water for his feet, and the arghya offering ; and they bowed to him, and 16 questioned him with deep respect. Then all the birds addressed him, the disciple of Vyása, rich in austerities, as he sat at ease, resting himself, with his fatigue mitigated by the breeze from their wings.

The birds spoke.

17 "To-day has our birth become fruitful, and our lives have been well-lived, inasmuch as we see thy lotus-feet which are worthy 18 to be praised by the gods. The blazing fire of our father's anger, which continues in our bodies, has been quenched to-19 day by the water of the sight of thee, O bráhman. We trust that all is well in thy hermitage among the deer and birds, among the trees too, and the various kinds of creepers, shrubs, 20 reeds, and grasses. Or perhaps we though respectful have not spoken this fittingly ? Whence can evil befall those who 21 have met with thee? And here, shew us favour, tell us the cause of thy visit; union with thee, as with the gods, is great prosperity; by whom, powerful for our good fortune, hast thou been brought to our view?"

Jaimini spoke.

22 "Let the reason be heard, O bráhmans, why I have come here to the Vindhya mountain's delightful cave, which is sprinkled 23 with drops of water from the river Narmadá. At first I questioned the great Muni Márkaṇḍeya, a scion of Bhṛigu's race, since I found difficulties in connexion with the Mahá-24 bhárata. And he, when asked by me, replied, 'Droṇa's highsouled sons are living on the mighty Vindhya mountain; 25 they will declare the full meaning to thee.' And I, impelled by his speech, have come to this great mountain: therefore hear me fully; having heard, deign to give an explanation."

The birds spoke.

26 "The matter being one specially known to us, we will declare it; listen then, free from distrust; why should we not tell 27 thee that of which our intellects are cognizant? For even in the four Vedas, for in the Dharma-śāstras also, and in all the Angas and whatever else is conformable to the Vedas—
28 in these does our intellect range, O best of bráhmans; but 29 nevertheless we are not able to give a promise. Therefore declare fearlessly what is doubtful in the Mahábhárata; we will declare it to thee, O thou who art wise in the law; if not there will be bewilderment."

Jaimini spoke.

30 "Hear, O ye pure ones! the matters in connexion with the Mahábhárata, which are doubtful to me here; having heard, 31 deign to explain them. Why is Janárdana Vāsudeva, who is the support of everything and the cause of all causes, al-
32 though devoid of qualities, endued with humanity? And why was Drupada's daughter Kṛishṇá the common wife of the five sons of Páṇḍu? On this point there is very great perplexity.
33 Why did the mighty Baladeva Haláyudha expiate his brah-34 manicide by engaging in a pilgrimage? And how was it that the unmarried heroic high-souled sons of Draupadí, whose protector was Pándu, were slain, as if they had no protector ?

 35 Let all these doubtful points in connexion with the Mahábhárata be explained to me ; that I having attained my object, may return to my hermitage in comfort."

The birds spoke.

36 " Having paid adoration to Vishnu, the lord of the gods, the pre-eminent, the universal soul, the immeasurable, the eternal,
 37 and the changeless ; to him who subsists in four forms, possessed of the three qualities, and devoid of qualities, the most choice,
 38 the most venerable, the most excellent, and the immortal ; to him than whom there is nothing more minute, than whom there is nothing more immense, by whom—the unborn one, the beginning of the worlds—this universe is permeated,—this universe which, characterized by appearance and disappearance, by visibility and invisibility, has, men say, been created and also been 40 destroyed in the end : and having paid adoration with profound meditation to Brahmá, the creator, who purifies the three worlds with his mouths as he utters the Ric' and Sáma
 41 hymns : also having prostrated ourselves before the lord, conquered by one of whose arrows the bands of the Asuras do 42 not interrupt the sacrifices of the sacrificers : we will declare the whole doctrine of Vyása, who was wonderful in his actions, by whom, in delivering the Mahábhárata, justice and the other virtues were made manifest.

43 " The waters were called Nára by Munis conversant with truth ; they were originally his place of movement* ; hence he 44 is called Náráyana. The adorable god, the lord Náráyana, pervading all things, lives, O brahman, in a quadruple form : he 45 is possessed as well as devoid of attributes. His first form is inscrutable ; the wise behold it bright ; it is covered with garlands of flame ; it is the acme of perfection to devotees ; it is both far and it is near ; it is to be understood as transcending attributes ; when called Vásudeva, it is seen devoid of egoism ;
 47 its shape, colour, etc., are not real but imaginary ; it is indeed 48 always pure ; it is the sole form of pre-eminence. His second form, called Śeṣha, supports the earth below with its head ; it is described as being characterized by the quality of darkness ;

 49 it belongs to the brute creation. His third form is active, and devoted to the preservation of creatures ; it is to be considered as consisting chiefly of the quality of goodness ; it is the 50 fashioner of virtue. His fourth form abides in water ; it lies on a serpent as its bed ; its attribute is passion ; and it is always indeed active.

51 “ The third form of Vishnu, which is assiduously intent on the preservation of creatures, always maintains righteousness on the 52 earth. It destroys the haughty Asuras, the exterminators of righteousness ; it protects the gods, and holy men, who are 53 devoted to the preservation of righteousness. Whosoever, O Jaimini, the wane of righteousness occurs and the rise of 54 iniquity, then it creates itself. Having formerly become existent, as a wild boar it repelled the water with its snout, and 55 lifted out the earth like a lotus with one of its tusks. Having taken the form of the man-lion, it slew Hiranya-kaśipu, and 56 destroyed Viprac'itti and other Dānavas. I cannot now enumerate its other incarnations, those of the dwarf, etc. : his 57 recent incarnation here was this one in Mathurā. Thus that form, which is characterized by goodness, becomes incarnate ; and it is designated Pradyumna ; it is occupied in the work of 58 preservation. And ever by Vāsudeva's will, it exists in divine form, human form, and brute form, and partakes of their several natures.

59 “ Thus this has been declared to thee, how that the lord Vishnu, though all-successful, assumed human form. Hear again the sequel thereof.”

CANTO V.

Indra's Transformations.

The Birds explain the second question—Draupadī was the wife of the five Pāṇdavas, because they were partial incarnations of Indra, and she was the incarnation of his wife.

The birds spoke.

1 “ Of old, O brahman ! when the son of Tvashṭri was slain,

Indra's splendour, oppressed by the brahmanicide, suffered a 2 grievous decline. Then because of his wrong conduct Indra's splendour entered Dharma; and, his righteousness and splendour being gone, Indra became splendourless.

3 "Then hearing that his son was slain, the prajāpati Tvashṭri enraged, tearing out a single matted lock of hair, uttered this 4 speech. 'Let the three worlds and the gods thereof see my might this day, and let Indra the perverse brahmanicide see, 5 by whom my son when engaged in his own business was destroyed.' Thus having spoken, he, his eyes red with anger, sacrificed that lock of hair in the fire.

6 "Then uprose Vritra, the mighty Asura, encircled with flamé, huge in body, with great teeth, resembling a mass of broken 7 collyrium. He, the enemy of Indra, of immeasurable soul surpassing the might of Tvashṭri, mighty in valour, increas-8 ed daily a bow-shot in stature. And Indra, having seen the mighty Asura Vritra eager for his slaughter, unnerved by 9 fear, sent seven Ṛishis, desiring peace. Then the affectionate-minded Ṛishis, who delighted in benevolence towards all creatures, brought about friendship and treaties between him and 10 Vritra. When Indra violating the rules of the treaty slew Vritra, then his might overwhelmed by the sin of the slaughter 11 waned; and that might which quitted Indra's body entered the wind, which pervades everything, is imperceptible, and is the supreme deity of power.

12 "And when Indra, assuming the form of Gautama, violated 13 Ahalyá, then the lord of the gods lost his form. Thereupon his beauty of limb and feature, which was exceedingly captivating, forsook the wicked lord of the gods and went to the Áśvins.

14 "Perceiving the lord of the gods to have lost his uprightness and glory, to be powerless and formless, the Daityas endeavour-15 ed to conquer him. Daityas of exceeding might, desirous to conquer the lord of the gods, were born in the families of kings 16 of surpassing valour, O great Muni. Then the Earth, afflicted with their weight, once went to the summit of Meru, where is 17 the abode of the heaven-dwelling gods. Afflicted with their excessive weight, she declared that the cause of her distress 18 arose from the Dánavas and Daityas. 'These Asuras, widely resplendent, have been slain by you ; they have all been born in 19 the world of men in the families of kings ; their armies are numerous indeed : oppressed by their weight, I am sinking downward ; do ye, O ye thirty gods, devise how tranquillity may be attained for me.'

The birds spoke.

20 "Then the gods descended with portions of their glory from heaven to earth, to benefit the creatures and to alleviate the 21 burden of the Earth. Dharma himself relinquished the glory which is innate in the body of Indra, then was born 22 of Kuntí the resplendent raja Yudhishthira ; Váyu relinquished his might, then was born Bhíma ; and from the half of Indra's power was born Dhananjaya, the son of Prithá ; 23 Yama's two sons, resembling Indra in form, of glorious dignity, were born of Mádrí. Thus the adorable Indra became incar-24 nate in five forms. His auspicious wife was born as Kṛishṇá 25 from Agni : she, Kṛishṇá, is the wife of Indra alone, and of no one else. The lords of ascetics can even multiply their bodies.
 26 "Thus the fact of her being one wife to five men has been explained to thee ; be it heard how Baladeva went to the Sarasvatí."

CANTO VI.

Baladeva's brahmanicide.

The Birds explain the third question—Baladeva, in order to avoid siding with the Pándavas and Kauravas, went to the Raivata forest—Overcome by intoxication, love, and the influences of the place, he killed Síta for not saluting him—To expiate that sin he undertook the pilgrimage.

The birds spoke.

1 The plough-armed Ráma, knowing the perfect affection of Kṛishṇa for Arjuna, deliberated much—"Can what has been 2 done be better done ? Without Kṛishṇa, assuredly, I will not go near Duryodhana ; or how, siding with the Pándavas, shall

- 3 I slay king Duryodhana, my royal son-in-law and disciple ?
Therefore I will go neither to Arjuna nor to king Duryodhana.
4 I will myself bathe myself at holy bathing places, so long as it conduces to the ending of the Kurus and Pāṇḍavas.” 5 Having thus taken leave of Kṛishṇa, Arjuna and Duryodhana, the descendant of Súra, surrounded by his army, went to Dvā-6 raká. Arriving at Dvāravatí, which was thronged with glad and well-fed citizens, Rāma Haláyudha drank a draught at the 7 holy bathing places, which are to be visited in future. Having drank his draught, he then marched to the flourishing park of Raivata,* taking with him the intoxicated Apsaras-like Revatí.
8 Encircled by a bevy of maidens, the hero went on, intoxicated, stumbling in his walk. And he saw a forest, fascinating, beyond 9 compare, loaded with the fruits and flowers of every season, thronged with troops of monkeys, sacred, dotted with clumps of 10 lotus-flowers, a great forest abounding in pools. Listening to the copious, pleasure-inspiring, love-soft, beautiful, ear-delighting, melodious songs poured forth from the mouths of the birds, he 11 saw the trees there, loaded with the weight of the fruits of every season, bright with the blossoms of every season, ren-12 dered resonant by the birds ;—mango trees, hog-plums,† kámarangas,‡ cocoanuts, and tindaka trees,§ and little bel

* A mountain near Dvāraká in Gujarat. The woodland scene described seems to be a fanciful one, compounded from the author's observations everywhere.

† Amrataka, the Hog-plum, Spondias mangifera ; the modern amra. It is both wild and cultivated. I give the botanical names, from Hooker's Flora of British India, of all except the most common, as many of the trees have no English names, and are better known by those names: but there can be no doubt that the various species in a genus are not always distinguished, and that the Sanskrit names are sometimes as much generic as specific. The descriptions are taken from Roxburgh's Flora Indica, Edn. Clarke, 1874, from Oliver's Indian Botany, 1869, and from Firminger's Manual of Gardening for India.

§ I do not find tindaka in Prof. Monier-Williams' Dictionary: tinduka occurs in verse 14. The late Rev. Dr. Banerjea, in a translation he began, translates it Ebony, which is Diospyros melanoxylon, the modern tindu. It is a large tree, growing in most woody mountainous parts of India.

* A'bilvaka. I do not find this in the Dictionary. Bilva, the Bel or Bengal Quince, Ægle marmelos; the modern bel-phul and s'ré-phal. Both wild and cultivated. It bears panicles of large white flowers, which are used in worship.

† Jíra, Cumin, Cuminum cyminum; the modern jíra; this is a slender cultivated annual. Jíra also means Panicum miliaceum, Roxb., the modern cheena, which is a cultivated cereal from 2 to 4 feet high. (Roxb., p. 104.) Neither seems appropriate.

 Nípa, Anthocephalus cadamba (Nauclea cadamba, Roxb.); also kadamba, the modern kadam. A garden tree, highly ornamental with its large, globular, beautiful, orange-coloured heads of flowers, and very useful from its extensive close shade (see Roxb., p. 172).

†† Párávata: the Dictionary says this is Diospyros embryopteris (glutinosa, Roxb.), which is the modern gáb: but this tree is also tinduka, which occurs in the next verse, and tinduka has occurred in verse 12. Párávata means also a dove or pigeon, and has been corrupted into the Bengali páyrá; might not párávata, the tree, be corrupted into the Bengali peyará, which means the Guava, Psidium guajava?

‡‡ Kan'kola. I do not find this in the Dictionary. Read kan'kellán for kan'koldán? Kan'kella is given as the Asok, Saraca indica (Jonesia asoka, Roxb.), but this occurs in verse 15.

§§ Nalina. Dr. Banerjea translates this as the Indigo plant, but Prof. Monier-Williams says nalina, neut., is the Indigo shrub, Indigofera tinctoria; while nalina, masc. as here, is the Carissa carandas; but the latter occurs in the next verse.

||| Amla-vetasa, the Dock or Sorrel, as Prof. Monier-Williams gives it. The Dock is Rumex vesicarius, Roxb. The Sorrel is Oxalis corniculata, Hooker (see Oliver, pp. 181 and 269).

¶¶ Bhallátuka, the Marking-nut tree, Semecarpus anacardium, the Bengali

lans,* and gáb trees† bearing large fruits, almond trees,‡ karamcha trees,§ yellow myrobalans,|| beleric myrobalans.¶
 15 He, Yadu's descendant, saw these and other trees, and also aśo-
 16 kas, punnāgas,†† screw-pines,‡‡ and vakulas,§§ c'ampakas,|||

bhela. A tree, growing in all the mountainous parts of India, with large panicles of small greenish yellow flowers. (Roxb., p. 268.)

* A'malaka, the Emblic Myrobalan, Phyllanthus emblica, the modern amla (Roxb., p. 684 and Oliver, p. 279). I do not find it in Hooker. Emblica officinalis is an earlier name.

† Tinduka, Diospyros embryopteris (glutinosa, Roxb.), the modern gáb. It is a tree common in Bengal, and among the mountains in the Circars. Its fruit is as large as a medium-sized apple.

 A'soka, the Asok, Saraca indica (Jonesia asoka, Roxb.). A middling-sized, very handsome, garden tree, with large, globular bunches of rather large flowers. The flowers are of a beautiful orange colour when they first expand, and gradually change to red, forming a variety of beautiful shades: they are fragrant during the night. (Roxb., p. 312).

‡‡ Ketakí, the Screw-Pine, Pandanus odoratissimus, (Roxb. and Oliver), the modern keorá. A large shrub, with panicles of large white, sheath-like leaves, enclosing bundles of closely-packed minute flowers. "It is the tender white leaves of the flowers, chiefly those of the male, that yield that most delightful fragrance, for which they are so universally and deservedly esteemed; for of all the perfumes in the world it must be the richest and most powerful." (Roxb., p. 707.)

§§ Vakula, Mimusops elenghi, the modern bakul. A tree, commonly cultivated, with flowers middle-sized drooping, white and fragrant; but Firminger says they are small, pale-green. (Roxb., p. 313; Hooker, p. 458; Firm., p. 490).

||| O'ampaka, Michelia champaca, the modern champak or chám pá. A garden tree with large yellow delightful fragrant flowers.

saptaparnas,* karnikáras,† and Spanish jasmines,‡ párijáta trees,§ kovidáras,|| mandáras,¶ and jujube 17 trees, delightful Bignonia trees†† in blossom, and devdár trees,‡‡ sál trees,§§ palmyra palms,||| and ta-

* Saptaparna, Alstonia scholaris. An ever-green tree growing in the drier forests of India.

† Karnikára, Pterospermum acerifolium, the Bengali kanak-champa. A Himalayan tree, but also grown in gardens. It has very large, pure white, fragrant flowers.

‡ Málati, the Catalonian or Spanish Jasmine, Jasminum grandiflorum, the Bengali játi or chameli, Hindustani chambeli. It is a spreading garden shrub with graceful pinnate foliage and middling-sized white fragrant flowers, which retain their odour when dried and are much used for perfume. (Firm., p. 518). Málati also means the Clove-scented Echites, Aganosma caryophyllata (Echites caryophyllata, Roxb.), now called málati, which is a climbing shrub, with bay-like leaves and sprays of middling-sized fragrant white flowers. (Roxb., p. 245; Firm., p. 518.)

§ Párijáta, Erythrina indica. A large tree growing all over India, with racemes of numerous large bright scarlet flowers. This tree is generally called mandár now.

¶ Mandára. Prof. Monier-Williams says this is Erythrina fulgens, but I do not find it in Hooker or Roxburgh. May it be E. stricta, which grows in the Western Peninsular and much resembles E. indica? In Bengal E. indica is now generally called mandár.

 Badara, Zizyphus cenoplia (jujuba or scandens, Roxb.), the Bengali kul, the Hindustani ber. A small tree with fruit of the size of a large cherry.

‡‡ Deva-dáru, Pinus devdara, Roxb., the modern devdár. I do not find it in Hooker. A great tree, native of the mountains north of Rohilkhand. No species of pine is native in the Peninsula (Oliver, p. 294); this tree therefore is quite out of place in this Gujarat scene.

§§ Sála, the Sál tree, Shorea robusta, the modern sál. An immense timber tree.

||| Tála, the Palmyra Palm, Borassus flabelliformis, Roxb., the modern tál. Not in Hooker. Fans are made from the large fan-like leaves.

18 málās,* kimsúkas,† and fine vanjula trees‡:—inhabited by chakors,§ and woodpeckers, shrikes,|| and parrots, koíls,¶ and 19 sparrows, green pigeons, and jivajivaka pheasants,†† by priya-

* Tamála. Prof. Monier-Williams says this is Garcinia xanthochymus (Xanthochymus pictorius, Roxb.); this is a tree, a native of the mountainous districts in India. But Roxburgh says the Tamála is Diospyros cordifolia, which Hooker unites with D. montana; this is a common tree.

† Kimsúka, Butea frondosa, the Bengali palásh. Oliver calls this tree the Dhak, (p. 195), but I do not find this name anywhere else. It is a common tree, with handsome, irregular, orange-red flowers in racemes which are covered with a soft greenish-purple down. (Roxb., p. 540.)

§ C'akora, Caccabis chukor. The Chakor is said in Prof. Monier-Williams' Dictionary to be the Greek partridge, Perdix rufa or Tetrao rufus, but the Greek partridge, Caccabis saxatilis, is a different species, inhabiting Europe, from the chakor the Asiatic species. The chakor is found in the Himalayas and the other northern ranges. It is always a bird of the hills, and does not occur in Gujarat, where this scene is laid (Jerdon's Birds of India, Edn. Godwin-Austen, Vol. II, p. 564; Hume and Marshall's Game Birds of India, Vol. II, p. 33). Tetrao rufus is the name Linnæus gave the European bird. Perdix rufa seems, from the edition of his works in the Bengal Asiatic Society's Library, to be an earlier name. There are other partridges in the plains of India, Ortygornis gularis, &c., but I do not think the reference can be to them, for the writer seems to be mentioning birds inhabiting the Himalayas; see the note on the Jivajivaka pheasant, below.

|| Bhṛīṅga-rāja. Prof. Monier-Williams translates this, Malabar shrike, Lanius malabaricus. This bird stands in Jerdon as Edolius malabaricus, and is, I am informed by Dr. J. Scully, a king-crow. Another bird may be meant, the Malabar Wood-shrike, Tephrodornis sylvicola, but, as the writer seems to be referring to birds found near the Himalayas, bhṛīṅga-rāja may mean any kind of shrike, almost every kind of which is common throughout the greater part of India. (Jerdon, Vol. I, p. 400).

 Háríta, the Green Pigeon, probably the Bengal green pigeon, Crocopus phœnicopterus, or the Orange-breasted green pigeon, Osmotreron bicincta. The Southern green pigeon, Crocopus chlorigaster, and the Green imperial pigeon, Carpophaga sylvatica, are not found near the Himalayas.

†† Jivajivaka. Prof. Monier-Williams gives the synonyms jīva-jīva and jīvanjīva, and explains the word as a kind of bird supposed to be a pheasant, putras,* and pied-crested cuckoos,† and by various other birds, 20 warbling pleasingly and very melodiously:—and the lakes, beautiful and placid, crowded on all sides with the lotus water-lilies,‡ and lotuses,§ and the brilliant blue water-or the chakor. As the chakor is mentioned already, it must have the first meaning. Taking it to be a kind of pheasant, I would suggest that it is the Cheer Pheasant, Phasianus Wallichii. The Sanskrit name looks like an onomatopœous one, and the cry of this bird is “something like the words chir a pir, chir a pir, chir chir, chirwa chirwa.” Cheer is the native name. The bird is found in Garhwal and Kumaon and the neighbouring country, and inhabits the middle slope of the Himalayas (Hume and Marshall, Vol. I, p. 169; Jerdon, Vol. II, p. 527). If this bird be a pheasant, it is clear the writer is mentioning, not the fauna of Gujarat, but of the country near the Himalayas, for it appears from Hume and Marshall, and Jerdon, that no pheasants are found in India except in the Himalayan and Indo-Burmese mountains and forests.

* Priya-putra. I do not know what this bird is. The name affords no indication.

‡ Kumud, the Lotus water-lily, Nymphaea lotus (Oliver, p. 155). There seems to be some confusion in distinguishing between the Sanskrit names for the lotus and the water-lilies, and I would attempt a solution in this and the following notes.

Of the water-lilies, Nymphaea, large water-herbs with leaves and flowers floating on the surface, there are 2 species common in India, viz., N. lotus, the Lotus water-lily, and N. stellata, the Blue water-lily.

N. lotus has leaves 6—12 inches broad, and flowers 2—10 inches broad, white, rose, or red. This species combines Roxburgh’s N. rubra and N. edulis (esculenta). Its Sanskrit name is kumud, and probably ambu-ja; the red variety is raktotpala. It closes during the day and opens at night.

The latter species, N. stellata, has flowers 1—10 inches broad, slightly odorous. It comprises 3 varieties, (1) cyanea (N. cyanea, Roxb.), flowers medium-sized, blue; (2) parviflora, flowers usually smaller, blue; (3) versicolor (N. versicolor, Roxb.), flowers larger, white, blue, purple, or flesh-coloured. The blue-flowered N. stellata is called indivara, utpala, kuvalaya and nilotpala. (Hooker, Vol. I, p. 114; Roxburgh, p. 427.)

§ Pundarika, the Lotus or Sacred Lotus, Nelumbium speciosum. This is the only species of Nelumbium in India. It is a large erect water-herb with its

21 lilies,* with water-lilies,† and lotuses;‡ and thronged with kádamba geese,§ and ruddy shieldrakes|| and water-fowl,¶ 22 with káraṇḍava ducks, pelicans,†† geese,‡‡ tortoises, and leaves and flowers raised high above the water. Its leaves are peltate, cupped, 2—3 feet in diameter. The flowers are 4—10 inches broad, white or rose-red. Its Sanskrit names are kamala, nalini, padmini, punḍarīka, sarasi-ja, and sahasra-patra. The flower is padma and panka-ja. The red variety is kokanada and támarasa. Roxburgh says the white variety is called in Sanskrit sitámbu-ja, and the red variety raktotpala; but these names more properly designate the white and red varieties of the water-lily (Nymphaea), and Prof. Monier-Williams translates them so. The Lotus opens during the day and closes at night (Hooker, Vol. I, p. 116; Oliver's Indian Botany, p. 156; Roxburgh, p. 450.)

* Nilotpala, the Blue water-lily, Nymphaea stellata, see note † on kumud, supra p. 29.

† Kahlára. Prof. Monier-Williams says this is the White esculent water-lily, Nymphaea lotus, but Roxburgh assigns it to his N. cyanea. Can it mean the rose-coloured variety of the N. lotus or stellata? See note † on kumud, supra p. 29.

§ Kádamba, a kind of goose with dark-grey wings (kala-hansa), so Prof. Monier-Williams. It seems to be the Grey Lag-Goose, Anser cinereus, which is called kar-háns in Behar. (Hume and Marshall, Vol. III, p. 55; Jerdon, Vol. II, p. 779.)

|| C'akraváka, the Ruddy Shieldrake or Brahminy Duck, Casarca rutila. Anas casarca is the Linnæan name. (Hume and Marshall, Vol. III, p. 125; Jerdon, Vol. II, p. 791.)

¶ Jala-kukkuta. This is probably the Water-hen, Gallinula chloropus, commonly called the jal-murghi, which means the same. (Jerdon, Vol. II, p. 718.)

 Káraṇḍava, a kind of duck; also called káraṇḍa. I would suggest that this is the Common Teal, Querquedula crecca, which is now called kerra in the N. W. Provinces, and kardo in Sindh. (Hume and Marshall, Vol. III, p. 205; Jerdon, Vol. II, p. 806.)

†† Plava. Prof. Monier-Williams translates this as pelican, Pelecanus fuscicollis; but I do not find any such species in Jerdon. It may be the Grey pelican, Pelecanus Philippensis, which is the most abundant species in India. (Jerdon, Vol. II, p. 858.)

‡‡ Hansa. This is of course general, and means any kind of goose or duck.

divers;* thronged with these and other birds swimming in the water all around.

- 23 So gazing on the delightful forest, Śauri accompanied by the maidens gradually proceeded onwards to an incomparable 24 bower of creepers. There he saw brahmans, deeply read in the Vedas and Vedāngas, belonging to the families of Kuśika, 25 and Bhṛigu, Bharadvāja, and Gotama, and brahmans sprung from various families, all eagerly listening to the tales, 26 seated on large outer garments made of the hide of the black antelope, and on the kuśa grass and on kuśa-grass seats; and 27 Sūta (their bard) in the midst, reciting glorious tales of the olden times, based on the deeds of the first Surarshis. Seeing 28 Rāma, whose eyes were red with drinking, all the brahmans, perceiving he was intoxicated, rose up in haste, saluting the 29 plough-bearer, except that scion of the bards. Then filled with rage, the mighty plough-bearer, who caused all the Dānavas to quake, rolling his eye, smote Sūta.
- 30 When that bard was slain while repeating the words of the Veda, all those brahmans, clad in black antelope skins, depart-31 ed from the wood. And the plough-armed hero, perceiving himself disregarded, thought, "This is a very grievous sin 32 that I have committed; for since I have come here to a brahmans' abode and have slain Sūta, these dvijas perceiving 33 me have all departed. And my body has a disgusting odour, as it were of blood, and I perceive that I am condemned as 34 a brahmanicide. Fie on my rage, and the wine, my arrogance, my cruelty! Possessed by them, I have committed this most 35 grievous sin. To expiate it I will perform a twelve-year vow, making the confession of my deed the uttermost penance.
 36 This then is the pilgrimage which I have now undertaken; I 37 will go to the Pratilomā Sarasvatī itself." Hence he, Rāma, went to the Pratilomā Sarasvatī.

Next listen to this reference to the story of the Pāṇḍaveyas.

* Madgu, a kind of diving bird. It is probably the Little Grebe, Podiceps Philippensis, commonly called dub-dubi from its inveterate diving. (Jerdon, Vol. II, p. 822.) But it may be the Bald Coot, Fulica atra, which is also a ready diver (id., p. 715.)

CANTO VII.

The Birth of the Sons of Draupadī.

The Birds explain the fourth question—King Hariś-c'andra incurred Viśvámitra's anger, and to appease him gives up to him his kingdom and all his wealth—Viśvámitra ill-treats the queen, and five Viśve Devas censure him for his brutality—He curses them to be born as men, but exempts them from marriage—They were born as the five sons of Draupadī, and died young.

The righteous birds spoke.

- 1 There lived formerly in the Tretá Age a most exalted Rájashī named Hariś-c'andra, virtuous in soul, a ruler of the earth,
- 2 brilliant in fame. No famine, nor sickness, nor untimely death occurred among men, nor did the citizens delight in evil, while
- 3 he ruled as king; nor, further, did the people become uproarious through wealth, valour, austerities or spirituous liquors; nor were any females born who failed to reach womanhood.*
- 4 And he, of mighty arm, when once chasing a deer in the
- 5 forest, heard women repeatedly crying, "save us"! The king, giving over the deer, called out "fear not! who is this perverse being that, under my rule, behaves with injustice?" At
- 6 this interval also the Raudra Vighna-ráj, the opponent of every
- 7 undertaking, who was following that cry, deliberated:—"This Viśvámitra, full of heroism, undertaking incomparable austerities, keeping a vow, is mastering the sciences of Śiva and others, which have not been perfected before. Those sciences
- 8 being mastered by this man, who governs his mind in patience and silence, are verily lamenting, afflicted with dread. How
- 9 can I manage this? Glorious is this noblest of the Kauśika family; I am much weaker than he: these terrified sciences are thus bewailing: it appears to me difficult to be accomplished. Now this king has come in my way, calling out
- 10 repeatedly 'fear not!'; into him indeed entering, I will speedily accomplish my desire."
- 11 Then the king possessed by that Raudra Vighna-rája, who had thus taken counsel with himself, uttered this speech in anger:—

* An allusion to infanticide?

- 12 "Who is this wicked man that binds fire in the corner of his garment, when I the lord am present, gleaming with the 13 glowing splendour of my power? He to-day, pierced in every limb by my arrows, which in their flight from my bow illumine the other regions of the sky, shall enter upon a long sleep."
- 14 Thereupon Viśvámitra having heard the king's speech was enraged: and, when that great Rishi was enraged, those 15 sciences perished in a moment. The king moreover, seeing Viśvámitra, rich in austerities, being terrified, suddenly trem-
 16 bled exceedingly like the leaf of the peepul tree.* When the Muni exclaimed, "wretch!" and "stand!"; then the king fall-17 ing prostrate in reverence addressed him:—"O adorable lord!
 • this is my duty! I have committed no fault! Deign not O Muni! to be angry with me, who am engaged in my duty.
 18 A king, conversant with his duties, must give gifts, and must afford protection, and lifting his bow must wage war, according to the Dharma-śāstras."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 19 "To whom, O king, must thou give gifts, whom must thou protect, and with whom must thou wage war? Speedily declare this, if thou fearest unrighteousness."

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 20 "I must always give gifts to brahmans principally, and to others who are straitened in their means; I must protect those in fear; I must make war with enemies."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 21 "If your highness, a king, duly regards the duties of kings—I am a brahman desirous of a reward, let the desired fee be given me."

* Ficus religiosa. The leaf, which varies from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches in length and almost the same in breadth, is ovate-cordate, and has a long slender apex (acumen) 1 to 2 inches long. It has a round flexible stalk 2 to 3 inches long, which is twisted so as to make the inner surface of the leaf face outwards from the branch. The leaf hangs downwards by the long stalk, with its inner surface, which is slightly concave, facing outwards, and thus catches the lightest breeze.

The birds spoke.

- 22 The Raja, having heard this speech with gladdened soul, deemed himself as it were born anew, and addressed the sage 23 of the Kauśika race: "Be it declared, adorable sir! what, free from doubt, I must give thee; consider it as already given, 24 albeit most difficult to be obtained, whether gold or money, son, wife, body, life, kingdom, city, good fortune—whatever is the desire of my own soul."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 25 "O king! this present has been accepted, which thou hast given: first, however, bestow the fee appertaining to the Rāja-súya sacrifice."

The Raja spoke.

- 26 "O brahman! I will indeed give your honour that fee. Choose, O chief of the dvijas, whatever present thou desirest."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 27 "Give me this earth, with its ocean, and with its mountains, villages and towns; and thy entire kingdom, O warrior, with 28 its multitude of chariots, horses, and elephants; also thy treasury and treasure; and whatever else thou possessest, excepting 29 thy wife, and son and body, O sinless one! and excepting thy virtue, which, O thou that knowest all the virtues, follows its possessor when he moves. What need for me to say more?
Let all this be granted me."

The birds spoke.

- 30 With gladdened mind the king, unperturbed in countenance, having heard the Rishi's speech, joining his hands respectfully replied, "So be it!"

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 31 "If all thy property is given me, thy kingdom, the earth, thy army, thy wealth,—whose is the lordship, O Rájarshi! when I the ascetic am seated in the kingdom?"

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 32 "At what time I have yielded up the earth to thee, O brahman! at that time thou, Sir, art the owner . how much more now the king."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 33 "If O king! the whole earth has been given me by thee, thou must deign to depart from the realm where I hold sway, 34 unfastening all thy ornaments, such as thy waist-band and every thing else, and clothing thyself with the bark of trees, together with thy wife and son."

The birds spokè.

- 35 Having said "So be it!" and having so done, the king started to go, in company with his wife Śaivyá and his young son.
 36 Then he addressed the king, having obstructed the road as he was moving—"Where wilt thou go, without giving me the fee appertaining to the Rája-súya sacrifice?"

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 37 "Adorable Sir! this kingdom has been given thee free from adversaries: these our three bodies, O Brahman! are all that remain to me this day."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 38 "Nevertheless thou must assuredly give me the sacrificial fee;
 a promise unfulfilled, especially to brahmans, proves injurious.
 39 As long as brahmans delight, O king! in the Rája-súya sacrifice, so long indeed must the fee for the Rája-súya sacrifice be 40 given. After making a promise, one must bestow the gift; and one must fight against assailants; so too the afflicted must be protected; thus hast thou already agreed."

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 41 "Adorable Sir, I have nought at present; I will give thee the fee after a while: and show me favour, O Brahmarshi!
 bearing in mind noble behaviour."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 42 "What length of time must I wait for thee, O guardian of men! Tell me speedily, or the fire of my curse shall consume thee."

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 43 "In a month will I give thee the fee-money, O Brahmarshi! At present I have no means; deign to grant me this permission."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 44 "Go, go, O noble king; observe thy duty; and may thy way be auspicious! May there be no enemies!"

The birds spoke.

- 45 Permitted to go, the king departed; his queen, who was 46 unused to walk afoot,* followed him. Seeing that most noble king departing from the city with his wife and son, the citizens raised a cry and followed the king, exclaiming—

- 47 "Alas, O master! why leavest thou us, who are afflicted with continual sufferings? Thou, O king, art devoted to righteousness, and thou art the benefactor of the citizens.
48 Lead us also, O Rajarshi! if thou regardest righteousness, Stay a moment, O king of monarchs! Our eyes as bees drink† 49 thy lotus-like mouth. When again shall we behold thee, who, when thou goest forth, art preceded and followed by kings?
50 Here is thy wife, holding her young son in her hand, following thee, before whom, when thou goest forth, go thy servants seated 51 on elephants! Here goes to-day walking afoot the king of monarchs, Hariś-c'andra! Alas, O king, what will thy 52 very youthful, beautiful-browed, soft-skinned, fine-nosed face become, when injured by the dust on the road? Stay, stay, 53 O best of kings, observe thy own duty. Mildness is a very noble virtue, especially among kshatriyas; what need have we of wife, what need of children, or of wealth, or of grain, 54 O master? Abandoning all this, we have become mere shadows of thee. Alas master! alas Mahārāja! alas, O lord!
55 why dost thou abandon us? Where thou art, there indeed will we be. That is joy, where thou indeed art. That is our city where thou art. That is Svarga where thou, our king, art."

- 56 Having thus heard the citizens' address the king, overwhelmed with grief, stood then in the road through very compassion for 57 them. Still Viśvámitra, seeing him distressed by the citizens' exclamations, approaching him, with eyes rolling in anger

58 and impatience, spoke: "Fie on thee, vile in thy conduct, false, crooked in thy speech! who also, after giving me thy 59 kingdom, wishest again to withdraw it." The king thus roughly accosted by him replied thus trembling, "I am going," and de-60 parted hastily drawing his wife in his hand. Thereupon the sage of the Kausika family suddenly belaboured with a wooden staff the very youthful toil-wearied wife, as the king was 61 drawing her along. Seeing her thus beaten, the king Harisc'andra, oppressed with pain, exclaimed "I am going;" nor did he utter aught else.

62 But then spoke five Viśve Devas full of pity, "This Viśvámitra is very wicked; what worlds will he obtain, who has 63 uprooted this best of sacrificers from his throne? By whose funeral ceremony further shall the soma juice expressed at the great sacrifice be purified, by drinking which we shall reach the exhilaration that is preceded by incantations?"

The birds spoke.

64 Having heard this their remark, the sage of the Kausika race, exceedingly enraged, cursed them—"Ye shall all assume human 65 form!" And propitiated by them, the great Muni added, "Al-66 though in human form, ye shall have no offspring. There shall be neither marriage of wives for you, nor hostility: freed 67 from love and anger ye shall become gods again." Thereupon those gods descended to the mansion of the Kurus with their own portions; they were born of the womb of Draupadi as the 68 five grandchildren of Pándu. Hence the five heroic Pándaveyas did not take to themselves wives, through the curse of that great Muni.

69 All this has been declared to thee with reference to the tale of the Pándaveyas. Thy four questions have been answered in song. What else dost thou wish to hear?

Viśvāmitra not satisfied demands further fees, and Hariś-c'andra in desperation sells his wife and his son to a brahman and himself to a c'andāla, and gives Viśvāmitra all the price—Hariś-c'andra earns his livelihood as the c'andāla's servant at a burning-ground in the most abject state for a year—Then he sees a vision of his future transmigrations with a promise of happiness ultimately—His son is bitten by a snake, and the queen brings the corpse to the burning-ground—They recognise each other and bewail their misfortunes—Both resolve to immolate themselves on their son's funeral pile; but the gods interpose and restore his son to life—Dharma explains that he had personated the c'andāla—Indra calls the king to Svarga, but he refuses to go without his faithful people—He, and his queen and people ascend to Svarga in perfect bliss.

Jaimini spoke.

- 1 Ye have declared this in order according to my questions : great is my curiosity regarding the story of Hariś-c'andra.
- 2 Ah ! passing great was the woe incurred by that magnanimous king ; I trust he obtained a happiness fully commensurate, O bráhmans !

The birds spoke.

- 3 Hearing Viśvāmitra's speech, the king moved on slowly, full of sorrow, followed by his wife Śaivyá with her young boy.
- 4 The king having reached the divine city* of Benares—the choice of Śiva who pronounced that it was not to be enjoyed
- 5 by men. Distressed with sorrow, he travelled afoot with his compliant wife. On entering the city, he saw Viśvāmitra
- 6 present. Seeing he had already arrived, Hariś-c'andra bowed reverently and, joining his hands respectfully, addressed the
- 7 great Muni :—" Here is my life, and this is my son, and this is my wife, O Muni ! Take that as the choicest arghya offering
- 8 with which thou shouldst quickly deal. Whatever else we should do, deign to excuse that."

* For parím read purím.

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 9 "Gone is the month, O Rájārshi !; let my fee be given me, if thy word regarding the Rája-súya sacrifice be remembered."

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 10 "O brahman, rich in fadeless austerities ! to-day the month will, in truth, be completed : await this half-day which remains, but not long."

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 11 "Be it so, Mahárájá ! I will come again : unless to-day thou shall make the gift, I will pronounce a curse on thee."

The birds spoke.

- 12 Thus having spoken the bráhmaṇ departed : and the Raja then took thought—"How shall I give him the fee which has 13 been promised ? Whence can I find powerful friends ? Whence can I get wealth at this moment ? Blameworthy is 14 my present : how can I escape going downward ? How much more am I abandoning life ! To what region shall I, who am nothing, go, if I perish without having performed my promise ?
15 I shall become a robber of bráhmans, a worm, a wicked man, the vilest of the vile ; or I shall become a slave—better indeed let me sell myself."

The birds spoke.

- 16 Then his wife in words broken with weeping answered the king, who was distressed, dejected, anxious, with downcast 17 face—"Leave off care, O Mahárájá ; preserve thy truthfulness ; a man destitute of truth should be avoided like a burning-18 ground. There is no higher righteousness, they say, for a man than this, namely, maintaining his truthfulness, O noble 19 man ! Oblations to consecrated fire, or study, or the whole circle of good deeds, such as liberality, &c. are fruitless in 20 him who speaks at random. Truthfulness is constantly declared in the Dharma-śástras to tend to the salvation of men of understanding ; and falsehood to the overthrow of men of 21 uneducated minds. A king named Kriti, after offering seven horse-sacrifices and a Rája-súya sacrifice, fell forthwith from 22 Svarga for falsehood. O king, I have given birth to a child—'

Thus having spoken she wept aloud. The king spoke as follows to her whose eyes were bathed in tears.

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 23 "Cease, lady, thy agitation ; here stands thy boy ; pray, speak what thou desirest to say, O thou who art graceful in thy gait!"

The queen spoke.

- 24 "O king, I have given birth to a child : the wives of good men bear fruit in their sons. Do thou therefore, being such a man, give me in exchange for wealth, and pay the brahman the fee."

The birds spoke.

- 25 Hearing this proposal, the king lost his senses ; and on re-26 gaining consciousness lamented, sorely grieved :—"Dire is this grief, O lady, that thou thus mentionest to me : is thy joyous 27 intercourse with me, wretch that I am, forgotten ? Ah ! alas ! how couldst thou suggest this, O sweet-smiler. Repugnant 28 is this plan : how can I execute it ?" Thus having spoken, the king, repeating the word "Shame ! shame !" fell to the 29 ground overwhelmed by faintness. Seeing the king Hariś-c'andra prostrate on the earth, the queen full of sorrow, uttered these piteous words :—

The queen spoke.

- 30 "Alas ! Mahārājā ! from whom has come this evil thought, that thou, who art accustomed to coverings made of the hair 31 of the spotted deer, hast fallen on the bare ground ? Here sleeps the king, my lord, on the ground,—he, by whom ten thousands of choice cattle and wealth were dispensed among 32 brahmans. Ah ! woe ! what has this king done to thee, O brahman, that he, the equal of Indra and Vishṇu, has been 33 reduced to a state of coma ?" Having soliloquised thus, she, beautiful-hipped, fell swooning, crushed by the intolerable 34 great weight of her husband's misfortunes. The child seeing his parents lying thus helpless on the ground, being excessively 35 sively hungry and very unhappy, spoke :—"Father, dear father, give me some food ; mother, mother, give me something to eat. I have become dreadfully hungry, and the tip of my tongue is growing parched."

The birds spoke.

36 At this interval arrived Viśvámitra great in austerities;
but, seeing Hariś-c'andra lying on the ground in a swoon, 37 he sprinkled the king with water and addressed him thus:—
"Rise up, rise up, O supreme king; give me the fee I desire.
38 A debtor's misery increases from day to day." Then being 39 refreshed with the snow-cold water, the king, recovering consciousness, and perceiving Viśvámitra, again fell into a swoon, 40 and the Muni grew angry. The brahman, making the king recover, spoke:—"Let my fee be given me, if thou regardest 41 righteousness. By truth the sun sheds warmth; in truth the earth stands firm; truth in speech is the highest righteousness: Svarga is based on truth. Also a hundred horse-sacrifices and truth are placed in the balance—truth verily 42 outweighs the hundred horse-sacrifices. Otherwise what motive is there for my speaking thus peaceably to thee, base 43 one, evil-intentioned, and cruel, false in speech? Since thou art powerful as king, let this my kindly feeling be heeded. If 44 O king, thou shalt not give me the fee to-day, when the sun reaches the Western mountain, then I will assuredly curse thee."

Having spoken thus the bráhmaṇ departed; and the king 46 remained, weak with terror, fugitive, vile, indigent, harassed by the malicious and the rich. His wife again spoke thus—47 "Let my proposal be complied with, lest consumed by the fire of his curse thou perish." But the king, thus urged 48 by his wife again and again, replied—"Lady, here without pity I proceed to sell thee; what even the malicious could not 49 do, that do I, if my voice be able to utter so hard a speech as this." Thereupon having so spoken to his wife, he went unnerved to the city and then, his throat and eyes impeded with tears, uttered this speech;—

The king spoke.

50 "Ho! ho! citizens, listen ye all to my word. Why do ye ask me, 'ho! who art thou?' I am mischievous, inhuman"

51 either a very cruel Rákshasa, or even more wicked than that 52 I, who will not yield up my life, am come to sell my wife. If any of you has need of the desire of my life as a slave-girl, let him speak quickly while I survive."

The birds spoke.

53 A certain aged bráhmaṇ approaching accosted the king—
 "Deliver the slave-girl to me; I am a purchaser, paying 54 ready money. I have no little wealth, and my wife is very young; she cannot perform the household duties; therefore 55 give me this girl. This wealth is proportionate to the skill, age, beauty and disposition of thy wife: take it; deliver me 56 the maiden." When thus addressed by the brahman, king Hariś-c'andra's mind was lacerated with grief; nor did he 57 make him any reply. Thereupon the brahman binding up the money in cash in the end of the king's back-cloth dress, 58 dragged off the queen, seizing her by the hair. But the child Rohitásya, who had a boy's side-locks of hair, and who was clutching her dress with his hand, wept on seeing his mother dragged away.

The queen spoke.

59 "Loose, loose me, noble Sir! while I take a look at my boy.
 A future view of him, kind Sir! will be difficult to get.
 60 See! come my child to me thy mother thus sold into slavery.
 Do not touch me, my royal child! I must not be touched by 61 thee now!" Then suddenly the boy seeing his mother dragged along, ran to her crying "Mother!" with tear-soiled eyes.
 62 The bráhmaṇ purchaser, seeing the child had approached, kicked him with his foot; the latter, however, exclaiming
 "Mother!" did not leave hold of his mother.

The queen spoke.

63 "Shew me favour, O master! and buy this boy. Although purchased, I shall not be a diligent servant to thee, Sir, 64 when separated from him. Do thou in this way beam favourably on me unfortunate; unite me with my child, as a cow with her calf."

The bráhmaṇ spoke.

65 "Take thou this wealth and give me the boy: the wages of a man and woman have been fixed by those conversant with the Dharma-śástras at a hundred, a thousand, and a hundred thousand pieces, and a price of ten millions by others."

The birds spoke.

66 Accordingly then he bound that money in the king's upper garment, and taking the boy bound him close together 67 with his mother. Seeing them both, his wife and son, led away, the king lamented sorely grieved, sighing deeply again 68 and again. "My wife whom neither the wind, nor the sun, nor the moon, nor the populace formerly gazed on, here she 69 is, fallen into bondage. Here is my boy, who is sprung from the Solar race, and whose hands and fingers are very young, 70 disposed of by sale. Shame on me, sorry fool that I am! Ah, my darling! ah, my child, my pet! my imprudent conduct, base man that I am, has brought me into thralldom to fate;
yet I am not dead, ah shame!"

The birds spoke.

71 While the king was thus lamenting, the bráhmaṇ taking them both disappeared hastily among trees, houses and other 72 high objects. Then Viśvámitra meeting the king, demanded the wealth; Hariś-c'andra delivered that money to him.
73 Considering those riches, procured by the sale of the wife, insufficient, Kauśika enraged addressed the sorrow-stricken 74 king. "O kshatriya, if thou deemest this a fitting sacrificial fee for me; then behold thou quickly my supreme might, 75 arising from austerities well performed here, and from stainless bráhmaṇhood, and from my terrible majesty, and from my perfect study."

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

76 "More will I give thee, adorable one; be pleased to wait some time; at present I have nought; my wife has been sold, and my young son."

Viśvámitra spoke.

77 "This fourth part that now remains of the day, O king, for that I must wait; nought more must I say to thee."

The birds spoke.

- 78 So, having uttered the harsh pitiless speech to the supreme king, the angry Kauśika took the money and quickly departed.
 79 When Viśvámitra had gone, the king, encompassed by a sea of fear and sorrow, after reflecting in every aspect, spoke aloud,
 80 with downcast face :—" Whatever man desires me for a slave, bought with money, let him speak quickly, while the sun yet shines."
 81 Then advanced hastily the god Dharma, wearing the form of a c'andála, foul-smelling, disfigured, uncouth, bearded,
 82 with projecting teeth, compassionate, dark in complexion, his belly pendulous, his eyes tawny and haggard, his pronunciation rude, and carrying a batch of birds, adorned with garlands taken from corpses, a skull in his hand, his face long, horrid to look at, talking much and often, surrounded by a pack of dogs, dreadful, a staff in his hand, hideous.

The c'andála spoke.

- 84 "I am an applicant to thee ; tell me quickly thy own hire, at which, whether little or much, thou art to be acquired."

The birds spoke.

- 85 There gazing at him, such as he was, cruel-eyed, very coarse, muttering, very bad in disposition, the king asked " Who art thou ?"

The c'andála spoke.

- 86 "I am a c'aṇḍála, known here in this greatest of cities as Pravíra, famed as the slayer of those condemned to death, the gatherer of blankets from corpses."

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 87 "I should not wish to become the despicable slave of a c'andála ; better to be consumed by the fire of the curse rather than to be thrall to a c'andála."

The birds spoke.

- 88 While he was so speaking, the great hermit Viśvámitra arrived, his eyes rolling with anger and wrath, and said this to the king :—

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 89 “This c'andála is ready to give thee no little wealth; why is not my full sacrificial fee paid me?”

Haris'-c'andra spoke.

- 90 “Adorable descendant of Kuśika! I know myself to be sprung from the Solar race; how, though desirous of wealth, shall I go into bondage to a c'andála?”

Viśvámitra spoke.

91. “If thou wilt not give me the c'andála's wealth, obtained in exchange for thyself, at the fixed time, I will assuredly curse thee.”

The birds spoke.

- 92 Thereupon the king Haris'-c'andra, his life bound up in his anxiety, overcome with agitation seized the Rishi's feet, 93 exclaiming—“Be thou gracious! I am a slave; I am in suffering; frightened am I; and I am specially thy votary: shew me favour, O Brahmarshi! Deplorable is association with 94 c'andálas. Instead of the balance of the money, I would be subject to thee indeed, O mighty Muni! thy agent in every matter, thy servant, obedient to thy will.”

Viśvámitra spoke.

- 95 “If your honour is my servant, then, given by me to the c'andála for a hundred millions of money, thou hast fallen into slavery.”

The birds spoke.

- 96 When he had so spoken, the low out-caste then, glad in mind, giving that pelf to Viśvámitra, bound the king and 97 led him, bewildered by blows of the staff, his senses utterly confused, grieved at his separation from his loved kindred, to his town.

- 98 Then king Haris'-c'andra, dwelling in the c'andála's town,

99 at morning, noon and evening sang this:—"My downcast girl seeing before her my downcast son, filled with grief, 100 remembers me; hoping 'the king will free us both, by giving, when he has amassed wealth, more wealth than this to the bráhmaṇ.' She, fawn-eyed, does not know that I 101 have done more wickedly. Loss of kingdom, abandonment of friends, sale of wife and son, and this c'aṇḍála-life that 102 I have sunk to:—alas! a succession of misfortunes." Dwelling in this condition, he remembered unceasingly his beloved son and his soul-engrossing wife; deprived of all his property, and abject.

103 Now for some time king Hariś-c'andra, as a servant to that man, became a gatherer of garments from dead bodies at the 104 burning-ground, and was instructed by the c'aṇḍála, who gathered garments from dead bodies—"Stay here day and 105 night on the look out for the arrival of corpses. This part is to be given to the king, and a sixth part is for the corpse, let three parts be for me, and two parts for thy wages."

106 Thus instructed he went to the mortuary house and to the southern quarter, where then stood in Benares the burning-107 ground, a place of horrible cries, frequented by hundreds of jackals, strewn with the garlands from corpses, foul-smelling, 108 reeking with smoke, thronged by Piśácas, Bhútas, Vetálas, Dákinis, and Yakshas, crowded with vultures and jackals, 109 encompassed by packs of dogs, thickly strewn with heaps of bones, full of dreadful odours; pervaded with the cries of the friends of the various dead persons and with a terrible 110 hubbub—"Ah! son!—friend!—ah! kinsman!—brother!— my child, dear to me now!—ah! husband!—sister!—mother!
 111 —ah! maternal uncle!—paternal grandfather!—maternal grandfather!—father!—grandson!—where art thou gone!
 —come, my kinsman!"; where was heard a great din of 112 persons uttering such cries as these:—a place filled with the 113 sputtering of burning flesh, marrow and fat. Black half-burnt corpses, their rows of teeth just bursting into view, grinned from amidst the fire, as if saying, 'This is the body's 114 final state!' Here the fire crackled along rows of bones of various ages ; and there was the sound of the wailing of the relations, which was caused by the merriment of the puk-115 kasas.* There is heard a very loud and frightful sound,— as if at the close of the age,—of Bhútas, Vetálas, Pisác'as, 116 Gaṇas and Rákshasas singing. Crowded with great heaps of buffaloes' ordure and cows' dung ; and surrounded with high piles of the ashes derived therefrom, mixed with bones ; 117 darkened by the confusion of the crows among the many offerings, garlands and lamps ; filled with many sounds, the 118 burning-ground resembles Naraka.† The burning-ground reverberated with the fire-pregnant, inauspicious yells of the she-jackals ; it was impenetrable by reason of the terrific cries ;

 • very dire‡ with the close contagion of fear ; and painful by reason of the sounds of lamentation.

119 The king arrived there, unhappy, ready to grieve : “ Ah servants, ministers, bráhmans ! Where has that my kingdom 120 gone, O Creator ? Ah Śaivyá ! ah my young son ! forsaking me, luckless one, through Viśvámitra's fault they both, mine 121 own relatives, have gone elsewhere.” There revolving thus in his mind over and over again the words of the c'andála, dirty, uncouth in every limb, his hair long, mal-odorous, bear-122 ing a flag, armed with a club, somewhat resembling Death, and running hither and thither, exclaiming “ This price has been 123 obtained for this corpse, and shall I get it ? This is mine, this is for the king, and this for the head c'andála ;”
 the king, while running in all directions, and while alive, 124 entered into another birth. Clothed in patched cloth made of old rags well fastened together ; his face, arms, belly and feet covered with ashes from funeral piles and with dust ; 125 his hands and fingers smeared with various kinds of fat, oil and marrow ; sighing ; intent on satisfying himself by 126 feeding on various corpses and water ;§ his head dressed with bands of garlands therefrom; he sleeps not either by day 127 or by night, frequently exclaiming "ah! alas!" In this manner passed twelve months as if a hundred.

One day that noble king wearied, separated from his kind-128 red, and uncouth in form, being overpowered by slumber, fell indeed into a dead sleep; and there on his pallet beheld a 129 great wonder:—Through the power of destiny, he had in another body by diligent occupation at the burning-ground 130 given the guru his fee, and there was immunity from the infliction of pain for twelve years. Then he saw himself conceived 131 in the womb of a pukkasa woman. Further the king, when in that condition, considered thus—"Immediately I am 132 born, I will verily practice the duty of liberality." Thereupon he was born. Then as a pukkasa boy he was always ready to perform the obsequies of the dead bodies in the 133 burning-ground. On his reaching his seventh year, a dead bráhmaṇ was brought to the burning ground by the relatives;
 then he perceived that the bráhmaṇ had been poor and 134 virtuous. But he, asking for his wage, despised the bráhmaṇs; those bráhmaṇs mentioned there what Viśvámitra had done,— 135 "Do thou a deed most sinful, and vicious, O evil-doer; Hariś-c'andra the king was formerly turned by Viśvámitra into 136 a pukkasa for breaking the slumber of a bráhmaṇ, by the destruction of his merit." When he did not have patience 137 with them, they then in anger cursed him—"Go forth with thou vilest of men to terrible Naraka." Immediately upon 138 these words, the king still in his sleep saw Yama's messengers, bearing nooses, terror-inspiring. He saw himself 139 then seized by them and led off by force. Sorely afflicted, exclaiming, "Alas now, O mother! O father!" he fell 140 into Naraka into a tub of oil. And he was torn asunder beneath by saws and the edges of razors, and suffered pain in dense 141 darkness, feeding on pus and blood. He saw his dead self, seven years old, in the form of a pukkasa. Day by day in 142 Naraka he is burnt and roasted in one place; he is afflicted and shaken in another place; he is killed and torn asunder in another place; in another he is made to melt away and to 143 blaze; in another place he is assailed with cold winds. He remained in Naraka one day, which was as long as a hundred years; so a hundred years there in Naraka are called by 144 the demons. Thereafter cast upon the earth he was born as a dog, eating filth and vomited matter, and enduring cold 145 and heat: in a month he died. Next he saw his body born as an ass, an elephant, a monkey, an ox, a goat, a cat, and a heron, a bull, a sheep, a bird, a worm, a fish, a tortoise, and 146 a wild boar, a porcupine, a cock, a parrot, a maina,* and motionless living objects, a snake and other corporeal beings.

 147 Day by day consumed with grief he saw the birth of one living being after another; a day was as a hundred years.
 148 A full hundred years thus passed with him there born among the lower creation. And the king saw himself born once again 149 in his own race. While in that state, he lost his kingdom in dice-playing; and his wife was carried off, and his son too; 150 and he sought the forest alone. There he saw a terrible ravenous lion approaching with open mouth, accompanied by a 151 young elephant†; and again he was devoured, while ready to bewail his wife, 'Ah S'aivyá! where art thou gone now, 152 forsaking me here in misery?' Again he saw his wife with her son imploring him, 'Rescue us O Haris'-c'andra! What 153 hast thou to do with dice-playing, my lord? Thy son has fallen to a lamentable condition, and so has thy wife S'aivyá.'
 Then he no longer saw them, though running about again and 154 again. And again he saw,—he the king was seated in

* S'áriká, a mainá. There are several kinds of mainas (or mynas). The best known are the Common maina Acridotheres tristis, which is a brown bird common throughout India, and the Nepal Hill maina Eulabes intermedia, which is a black bird found along the lower ranges of the Himálayas. Both are commonly caged and learn to talk, but the latter attains much higher proficiency. (Jerdon's Birds of India, Edn. Godwin-Austen, Vol. II, pp. 325 and 339). Prof Monier-Williams says S'áriká is Gracula religiosa or Turdus salica. The former name is an old name of the Southern Hill maina (E. religiosa) and of the Nepal Hill maina (E. intermedia). (Id., Vol. II, pp. 337, 339). I do not find the second name in Jerdon.

† Sarabha; or a fabulous animal with eight legs, stronger than a lion.

Svarga ; she poor thing was brought by force, with dishevelled 155 hair, stript of her garments, exclaiming 'Ah! alas! rescue me!' in repeated cries. Then again he saw there through 156 Yama's ordainment—the dwellers in the sky are calling out, 'Come hither O king! Yama has been addressed by Viśvá-157 mitra, O king, regarding thee.' Yama's servants, who bore nooses of serpents, having thus spoken, lead away the prince 158 by force. Yama related Viśvámitra's deed. At that point, however, his change which resulted from iniquity came to an end.
 These were all his states of being which were revealed in sleep ; 159 they were all experienced by him during twelve years. When the twelve years were spent, being brought forcibly by the 160 demons, he saw Yama in bodily shape. Yama addressed the king, This anger of the high-souled Viśvámitra is difficult 161 to be resisted. Kauśika will inflict even death on thy son.
 Go thou to the world of men, and undergo the remainder of thy suffering. When thou art gone there, O supreme king!
 162 thou shalt obtain happiness.' And when the twelve years expired, the king, at the end of his misery, fell from the sky, being thrust away by Yama's messengers.

163 And when fallen from Yama's world, he awoke through the agitation of fear, exclaiming, "Alas! woe is me!" thinking of the working of the corrosive substance in his wounds.

164 "In my sleep I have seen grievous woe, the end of which I do not perceive : but have twelve years, as I have seen in 165 my sleep, gone with me?" he inquired with agitation of the pukkasas standing there. "No" replied certain of the bystanders ; and others said exactly the same.

166 Then the king grieved at hearing this, sought the gods for refuge, ejaculating, "May the gods bestow blessings on me, 167 on S'aivyá and on my child. Adoration to great Dharma!
 Adoration to Kṛishṇa the creator, all-comprising, pure, 168 ancient, and immutable! Adoration to thee, O Vṛihaspati!
 and adoration to thee, Indra!"

169 Having uttered this prayer, the king employed himself in the pukkasas' occupation, in fixing the price of corpses, as if again dead in memory. Filthy, matted-haired, black,

170 armed with a club, despondent was the king. No son had he, nor wife indeed, in the track of his memory; ruined in energy was he through the loss of his kingdom; dwelling then in the burning-ground.

171 To that place came his queen, bewailing, bringing her son 172 dead, for the boy had been bitten by a snake. "Ah my darling! ah my son, my child!" thus she was oft exclaiming; emaciated, pallid, insane, her hair covered with dust.

The queen spoke.

173 "Alas O king! dost thou not see to-day on earth this thy child, whom thou didst formerly see playing about, now • bitten by a huge snake and dead?"

174 The king, listening to that her lamentation, hurried thither 175 thinking "here will be a dead man's blanket." But the king did not recognise as his wife her, who was weeping sorely, who worn with his long absence was like a woman in another 176 birth. The princess too seeing him, who formerly had beautiful locks, now with matted curls did not recognise the 177 king, who was like a withered tree. The king seeing the snake-bitten child, who was characterized with the kingly 178 marks, on the black cloth, fell into a reverie:—"Ah! alas!
 to what a state has this child born in the family of some king 179 been brought by malignant Death! For, since I have seen my child thus lying in his mother's lap, my child Rohitása 180 with his lotus-like eyes recurs to my memory. Such indeed would be my child, and of about this age, if dreadful Death has not made him his thrall."

The queen spoke.

181 "Ah my child! through disregard of some sin this great and terrible evil has befallen us, the end of which we do not 182 perceive. Ah, my lord king! how dost thou remain placidly in some place without consoling me who am miserable?
 183 Loss of kingdom, forsaking of friends, sale of wife and child—what has thou not done to the Rájars̥hi Haris'-c'andra, O creator?"

184 Hearing this her lament the fallen king, recognising his

185 loved wife and his dead son, exclaimed "Alas! this is indeed my very S'aivyá, this is my child!" and wept consumed 186 with sorrow, and fell into a swoon. She too recognising him fallen into that state, fainted with affliction and sank motionless to the ground.
 187 The king and queen both regaining consciousness together, wailed in deep suffering, oppressed with the load of anguish.

The king spoke.

188 "Alas my child! when I look on thy very young face, with its beautiful eyes, brows, nose and curls, is not my afflicted
 189 heart torn asunder? To whom, as he comes to me of himself sweetly babbling, 'Father, dear father,' shall I affectionately exclaim with an embrace, 'My child, my child'?
 190 By whose knees shall the yellow dust be brought that shall soil my upper garment, my lap and body? Born of my body and limbs, thou wast the delight of mind and heart to me, who, bad father that I am, sold thee, O my child, like a chattel.
 192 After snatching away my large kingdom entire, with its resources and wealth, Fate as a noxious serpent then bit my 193 child. Just gazing on the lotus-face of my son, who has been bitten by the serpent Fate, even I am now blinded 194 by the dire poison." Having thus spoken, incoherent through tears, he took the boy, and embracing him, fell motionless in a swoon.

The queen spoke.

195 "This tiger-like man is known truly by his voice; he has the moon-like mind of a wise man; it is Hariś-c'andra without doubt. And his nose is prominent in front and goes downwards; and like opening buds are the teeth of him, 196 the renowned, the high-souled. Wherefore has this king come to the burning-ground to-day?"

Ceasing her grief for her son, she looked at the prostrate 198 king. Agitated, surprised, afflicted, sorely oppressed on account of her husband and son, gazing earnestly, she then saw her husband's abominable staff fit for a low outcaste.

- 199 Thereupon the long-eyed lady fainted, and gradually regaining consciousness, spoke falteringly :—
- 200 “ Fie on thee, O Fate ! most doleful, unruly, abominated, who hast reduced this god-like king to the position of a low out-
- 201 caste. Though thou didst make him undergo loss of kingdom, forsaking of friends and the sale of wife and son, yet hast thou turned the king, after he was parted from us, into this
- 202 c'andála. Ah ! O king ! why dost thou not now raise me, who am thus afflicted, from the ground and tell me to mount
- 203 to thy couch ? I do not see this day thy regal umbrella, nor yet thy golden vase, thy chowrie or fan ; what is this revolution ? He, before whom formerly, when he moved, kings in
- the guise of servants freed the earth from dust with their
- 205 own upper garments,—such having been, he the supreme king now walks oppressed with grief in the burning-ground, which is thickly strewn with jars and pots, with skulls fast fixed therein ; where the hair of corpses is concealed by the
- 206 remains of sacrificial ceremonies and strings ; where the cavities of the dry ground are bedecked with oily exudations ; which is dreadful by reason of the mixing of the marrow and half-burnt bones with the ashes and charcoal ; where the
- 207 small birds have been scared away by the cries of the vultures and jackals ; which has spread gloom over the regions of the sky with the colour of the trails of smoke from
- 208 the funeral piles ; where the night-roaming demons are joyful through the delight of tasting carrion.”
- 209 Thus having spoken the princess embraced the king's neck and, bearing hundreds of woes and griefs, lamented with sorrowful voice,—

The queen spoke.

- 210 “ O king, is it sleep or waking truth ? Tell me Sir, this that thou art thinking of : my mind is bewildered indeed.
- 211 If this be so, O thou conversant with righteousness, there is no help in righteousness, nor in worship of bráhmans, gods
- 212 and others, nor in protecting the world ; there is no such thing as righteousness. Whence are there truth, and candour, and meekness, in that thou, the devotee of righteousness, hast been ousted from thy kingdom ?”

213 Hearing this her speech, sighing deeply he related in faltering accents to the slender-limbed lady, how he had 214 become a low outcaste. She also the timid lady wept very long, and sighing deeply, full of grief, told him how her son had met his death.

The king spoke.

215 “My darling, I choose not to undergo affliction for a long time, nor is my soul docile, O slender-limbed lady. Behold 216 my ill-fortune. If I shall enter the fire, with the permission of the c’aṇḍāla, I shall in another birth go again into 217 bondage to c’aṇḍālas. I shall fall into Naraka, as a worm-eating insect ; into Vaitarīṇī* which is slimy with much pus, 218 fat, blood, and sinews. Reaching the Asi-patra wood, I shall be frightfully cut to pieces ; or reaching Mañā-raurava 219 and Raurava I shall be burnt. Surrender of life is the shore for one sunk in the ocean of grief. I had just one son, who 220 was this boy, to continue my family. He too has sunk through the violence of the waters of my Fate, which are very strong. How shall I resign my life ? I am dependent 221 on others ; and in a strait. Or, does not a man afflicted with pain regard evil ? There is no such suffering in the brute 222 creation, nor in the Asi-patra forest. Whence is there such suffering in Vaitarīṇī as in the bereavement of a son ? I will 223 fall then with my son’s body into the blazing fire, O slender-limbed ! Thou must pardon my ill-deeds ; and do thou who hast my permission go to the bráhmaṇ’s house, O bright 224 smiler ! And hearken, O slender-limbed ! to my word with respectful mind. If one makes gifts, if one offers sacrifices, 225 if the gurus are satisfied, there may be union for me in another world with my son and with thee. But whence in this 226 world will there be this aim for me ? In company with thee
I shall speed happily on in the search for our son, which I shall make laughingly or somewhat secretly, O bright-smiler.

* The river of Naraka.

- 227 Thou must pardon at my request all that I have spoken ill;
 despise not that bráhmaṇ through pride that thou art a queen; thou must please him with thy utmost efforts, as if he were thy lord and god, O beautiful lady!"

The queen spoke.

- 228 "I also, O Rájārshi, unable to endure the burden of grief will assuredly enter the blazing fire with thee here this day."

The birds spoke.

- 229 Thereupon the king heaping up the funeral pile, placed his son thereon; and then associated with his wife he joined his 230 hands reverently, thinking of the Supreme Soul, Śiva, Nárāyaṇa Hari Vāsudeva, the ruler of the gods, who sits in the cave-like recesses of the heart, of Bráhmaṇ who is without beginning or end; of Kṛishṇa, yellow-clad, beautiful.

- 231 While he was thinking, Indra and all the gods, making 232 Dharma their leader, assembled in haste. Approaching spake they all—"Ho! O king! hearken, O lord! This is Bráh-233 man, visible to open sight, and the adorable Dharma himself; and here are all the Sádhyas,* the Maruts,† the Lokapálas,‡ with their vehicles, the Nágas,§ the Siddhas|| and the Gand-234 harvas,¶ and the Rudras and the two Áśvins,—these and and others, many in number, and also Viśvámitra, whom the 235 three worlds could not formerly make a friend. But Viśvámitra desires to proffer thee friendship and good."

He mounted, thereon he met Dharma, and Indra and Viśvámitra.

Dharma spoke.

- 236 "Be not rash, O king! I Dharma have visited thee, gratified with thy patience, self-command, truth and other virtues."

Indra spoke.

- 237 "O virtuous Hariś-c'andra! I Indra have approached nigh thee; the eternal worlds are won by thee and thy wife and 238 son! Accompanied by thy wife and son, ascend, O king! to the third heaven, which to others is very difficult of attainment, but which has been won by thine own deeds."

The birds spoke.

- 239 Then Indra, the lord, going to the funeral pile, poured down from the sky a shower of nectar that prevents sudden 240 death, and a very copious shower of flowers, accompanied with the sound of the heavenly drums, here and there on 241 that closely-gathered assemblage of gods. Then the highsouled king's son arose, very youthful in body, in per-242 fect health, placid in his organs and mind. And king Hariś-c'andra immediately embraced his son; and in possessing his wife regained his own Fortune. He was decked 243 with heavenly garlands; and was happy, completely satisfied in heart, and filled with supreme joy.
244 Indra at once re-addressed him. "Accompanied by thy wife and son, thou shalt gain supreme felicity. Ascend, O vir-tuous king, by the results of thy own actions!"

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 245 "O king of the gods! while unpermitted by my master the low outcaste, I will not, without having recompensed* him, ascend to the abode of the gods."

Dharma spoke.

- 246 "Perceiving this thy affliction that was to be, I myself descended as the low outcaste through an illusion of myself;
and I displayed that inconsiderate conduct."

Indra spoke.

- 247 Ascend, O Hariś-c'andra, to the supreme abode which is desired by all mankind on the earth, the abode of men holy in deed."

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

- 248 "O king of the gods, adoration to thee! hearken also to this my speech, that, filled with affection, I speak to thee whose 249 countenance is beautified through benignity. My subjects in the city of Kosalá* remain with minds sunk in my grief;

 how disregarding them shall I now ascend to heaven?
 250 The murder of a bráhmaṇ, the killing of a guru, the slaughter of cattle, and the slaying of women—equal to these has been pronounced the great sin incurred in the abandonment 251 of one's adherents. Neither in this world nor in the other do I see happiness for one who abandons an obsequious 252 and innocent adherent, who ought not to be abandoned. If they go to Svarga in company with me, O lord of the gods!
 then I too will go; or I will go even to Naraka with them."

Indra spoke.

253 "Many are their merits and sins, various and diverse.
 How wilt thou again attain to Svarga which will be enjoyed by multitudes?"

Hariś-c'andra spoke.

254 "O Indra, by the influence of the householders a king enjoys his kingdom, and sacrifices with great sacrifices, and works 255 meritorious deeds; and therefore by their influence have I performed everything; I will not forsake those benefactors 256 in the desire to gain Svarga. Therefore whatever, O lord of the gods, I have done well, whatever I have given in alms, whatever sacrifices or prayers I have made, let that be com-257 mon to them and us. For whatever fruit of my action must be eaten through long time, let that be for me and them together just a single day through thy favour!"

The birds spoke.

258 "So shall it be!" thus having spoken Indra, lord of the three worlds, and Dharma, and Viśvámitra, Gádhi's son, 259 became propitious in their minds. Indra went from Svarga to the earth, with a company of ten million heavenly chariots and addressed the people of Ayodhyá thus, "Ascend 260 ye to heaven." And having heard with affection that speech of Indra and the king's speech, and having brought gods also, the Munis, and the Siddhas, enthroned the king's son in the charming city of Ayodhyá, after enthroning the king.

 262 Then all the people, his glad and prosperous friends, with their children servants and wives, ascended to heaven with the king.
 263 Those people moved step by step from one heavenly chariot to another. Then king Hariś-c'andra also grew in gladness.
 264 The king, attaining unparalleled dignity with the heavenly chariots, sat on the figure of a city which was surrounded with ramparts and walls.
 265 Then beholding his prosperity, Uśanas, the eminent spiritual guide of the Daityas, conversant with the meaning and the truth of all the S'ástras, sang a verse there.

S'ukra (Uśanas) spoke.

- 266 "Like unto Hariś-c'andra there has been no king, nor shall there be. Whoever, when afflicted with his own sufferings 267 listens to those of others, may he obtain great happiness! May he who longs for Svarga gain Svarga; may he who longs for a son gain a son; may he who longs for a wife gain a wife; may 268 he who longs for a kingdom gain a kingdom! Ah, the majesty of patience! ah, the great fruit of liberality! since Hariś-c'andra has reached his city and has gained his sovereignty."

The birds spoke.

- 269 This whole story of the deeds of Hariś-c'andra has been declared to thee: hear the remainder of the discourse next, which was the cause of the decay of the earth, and the cause of that outcome, viz. the great battle of the Mainá* and Heron.†

 ginianus*, which is the old name. It is Jerdon's Bank Maina, Acridotheres gin-ginianus, which is common throughout Upper India, and burrows in the river banks (vol. II, p. 326). Jerdon gives salik (śáriká) as the general Bengali name for mainas; but I do not trace either of these two words in his book.

† Vaka. Prof. Monier-Williams called this bird Ardea nivida, but I do not find this name in Jerdon. Bak, bag, (Bengali) and baḡlá (Hindi) are the general modern names for various kinds of common herons, egrets and CANTO IX.

The Battle of the Mainá and the Heron.

Vaśishṭha, enraged with Viśvámitra for his cruelty to Hariś-c'andra, cursed him to become a heron, and Viśvámitra cursed Vaśishṭha to become a mainá—Both Munis as gigantic birds have a terrible fight, and are at length pacified by Brahmá.

The birds spoke.

When Hariś-c'andra had left his kingdom and had gone to the abode of the thirty gods, there came out from his residence in the water the glorious family priest, Vaśishṭha, the Muni, who dwelt at the Ganges, at the end of twelve years; and he heard the whole of the deeds of Viśvámitra, and also the downfall of the noble-dealing king Hariś-c'andra, and his association with the c'aṇḍála, and his sale of his wife and son. That most illustrious Muni having heard the story, being full of affection for the king, grew wrathful in his dignity against the Ṛishi Viśvámitra.

Vaśishṭha spoke.

“It was Viśvámitra who destroyed my hundred sons; yet on that occasion I was not so wroth as I am this day, on hearing that this king, who was high-souled, eminent, worshipful towards the gods and bráhmans, had been ousted from his kingdom. Since that king, truthful, tranquil, devoid of envy even towards an enemy, faultless also, upright in soul, vigilant, a relier on me, has been reduced to the last extremity together with his wife dependants and son, has been expelled from his kingdom by Viśvámitra, and has been greatly worsted, therefore that impious bráhmaṇ-hater, uprooted from among bitterns. The Large Egret (Herodias alba, Jerdon), the Smaller Egret (H. egrettoides), and the Little Egret (H. garzetta) are all white; the Cattle Egret (Buphus coromandus) and the Pond Heron, generally known as the Paddy-bird, (Ardeola leucoptera), which are most commonly called bag and baglá, have white bodies (Jerdon, vol. II, pp. 744-751).

the wise, blasted by my curse, the fool, shall be turned into a heron."*

The birds spoke.

- 10 Hearing the curse, the glorious Viśvámitra likewise, Kuśika's descendant, inflicted the counter-curse, "Do thou also 11 become a mainá."† Both those most illustrious sages were transformed into birds through their mutual curses, the glorious Vaśiṣṭha and Viśvámitra, Kuśika's descendant.
- 12 Both of them, boundless in might, allying themselves with other classes of beings, fought together, exceedingly exasperat-13 ed, great in strength and prowess. The Mainá increased in size to two thousand yojanas; as the Heron, O bráhmaṇ, 14 increased to three thousand and ninety. And then those two, of wide heroism, assailing each other with blows of 15 their wings, created sore fear among the creatures. The Heron, his eyes swollen with blood, lifting his wings beat the Mainá; and he also, stretching out his neck, struck the 16 Heron with his feet. Overthrown by the wind from their wings, mountains fell down on the earth; and struck by the 17 downfall of the mountains the earth quaked; and the earth, as it quaked, caused the waters of the seas to swell up, and reeled over on one side, turning towards the descent to Pátála.
- 18 Living beings perished, some by the fall of the mountains, others by the waters of the seas, others through the quaking 19 of the earth. Thus everything being terrified was turned into lamentation, bereft of consciousness; the world was greatly agitated, and its countries were thrown into confusion, 20 people exclaiming "Ah, my child! ah my beloved child! come, here I am fixed"—"ah my darling wife!"—"my beloved husband!"—"this rock is falling, escape quickly."
- 21 Then, when the world was thus distressed and averted in terror, surrounded by all the gods, advanced the fore-father, 22 the lord of the universe, and replied to both those combatants who were violently enraged—"Let this your strife cease, and

- let the worlds recover their stability !” Although they heard 23 the words of Brahmá, whose birth is inscrutable, yet both of them, filled with anger and fury still fought, and did not desist.
- 24 Thereupon the fore-father, the god, seeing the destruction of the worlds, and desiring the welfare of both of them, dis-25 sipated their brute-nature ; and the god, the lord of creation, addressed them both, clothed in their former bodies, Vaśishṭha and the noble descendant of Kuśika, the state of darkness having been dispelled :—
- 26 “ Stay thou, my beloved Vaśishṭha, and thou, most virtuous Kauśika, this contest that, while involved in the state of 27 darkness, ye desire to carry on. This outcome of the Rája-sūya sacrifice of king Hariś-c’andra, and this war between 28 you two, are causing the earth to waste away. Nor moreover does that best of the Kauśikas offend against that king, for since he has caused him to attain to Svarga, O bráhmaṇ ! he 29 occupies the position of a benefactor. Do ye both, the creators of obstacles to your austerities, who have fallen into subjection to lust and anger, cease ; for worthy are your prayers, and ample is your power.”
- 30 Thus admonished by him, both then grew ashamed, and 31 embracing lovingly forgave each other. Thereupon, hymned by the gods, Brahmá departed to his own world, and Vaśishṭha to his own place, and Kauśika also to his own hermitage.
- 32 Those mortals, who shall fittingly relate and who shall fittingly hear this battle of the Mainá and the Heron, and the 33 story of Hariś-c’andra, what they hear shall verily dispel their sins ; nor shall they ever encounter antagonistic duties.

CANTO X.

Conversation between a father and son.

Jaimini asks the Birds for instruction how living beings come into existence and die, and how the fœtus lives and develops—The Birds repeat the explanation that a wise young brahman Sumati, who was nick-named Jada because of his apparent stupidity, but who remembered his former existences, gave his father—He explains how death occurs, and describes the after-existences through which a living being passes according as it has lived well or ill—He describes incidentally the hell Raurava.*

Jaimini spoke.

- 1 Declare my doubt, when I enquire, O powerful bráhmaṇs,
- wherein the appearance and disappearance of living beings
- 2 consist. How is an animal produced? How too does it
- develop? How, again, is it placed when contained within the
- 3 womb, pressed upon by the limbs? How, again, when it has
- issued from the womb, does it grow? And how at the moment
- 4 of departure is it deprived of the sentient state? Every dead
- person also experiences the results of both his good and his bad
- deeds, and how then do those deeds bring about† their results to
- 5 him? Why does the fœtus not become digested there in the
- stomach, as if it were converted into a morsel of food? In the
- female's belly, where the various foods consumed are digested
- although highly indigestible, how is it that the little animal
- 6 is not digested there? Declare all this to me, free from
- doubtful terms; this very matter is a transcendant mystery,
- where men do err.

The birds spoke.

- 7 Unparalleled is this burdensome question that thou hast
- propounded to us; it is difficult to be imagined, touching as
- it does* the existence and death of all living beings. Listen to
- 8 it, Sir! as a son, most thoroughly righteous, named Sumati,‡
- once declared it to his father.

* See Canto XIV.

† For sampádayanti read sampádayatí (neuter, dual, present participle)?

‡ For Samatir read Sumatir.

9 A certain highly intelligent bráhmaṇ of Bhrigu's line ad-10 dressed his son Sumati who had undergone his initiation, and 11 who was tranquil, and in appearance stupid. "Study the Vedas, O Sumati, in order from the beginning, be zealous in 12 obedience to thy guru, make thy food of victuals collected by begging. After that taking upon thee the duties of a householder, and performing the chiefest sacrifices, beget the desired offspring. Next resort to the forest, and then living in the forest, my son, be a wandering ascetic,* free from family ties. Thus shalt thou attain that highest object of religious knowledge, the Supreme Being, reaching which thou shalt not grieve."

The birds spoke.

13 Thus frequently counselled, he through his stupidity never 14 replied: still the father again and again repeatedly admonished him affectionately. He thus frequently exhorted by his father, through paternal love, alluringly and in pleasant terms, spoke thus at length with a laugh:—

15 "Father! I have repeatedly studied this that thou enjoimest me to-day, the other Śástras also, and the various mechanical 16 arts. Ten thousand births and more have passed into my memory; disgusts and gratifications have sported in the 17 decay and the rise of my mind. I have seen partings and meetings among enemies, friends and wives; I have seen mothers of various kinds, and fathers of various kinds also.
 18 I have tasted joys and sorrows thousands of times. Many 19 kinsmen have I gained, and fathers of divers kinds. I have also dwelt in women's wombs, slimy with ordure and urine; and thousands of times have the pains of sicknesses also taken 20 grievous hold of me. Many sufferings have I endured in my stomach in childhood, and youth and old age: all those do 21 I remember. I have been begotten of bráhmans, kshatriyas and vaiśyas, and even súdras; and again of cattle and insects, 22 of deer and birds. I have been born moreover in the houses of kings' dependants, and of kings resplendent in battle, and 23 in thy dwelling also. I have been a servant and a slave frequently to men. I have been a master and a lord, and a 24 poor man as well. I have given blows, and I have received blows from others, and my own blows have procured me blows in return. Others have given me gifts, and I have given 25 gifts to others many a time. I have been gratified also by the deeds of father, mother, friend, brother, wife and other relatives. And often have I fallen into misery with my face 26 washed with tears. Whilst thus wandering, O father, in the crowded circle of mundane existence, I have gained this knowledge, which procures final emancipation from existence.

27 That being known, all this body of religious rites, called Ric' Yajus and Sáman, is worthless, and does not appear fit-28 tingly to me. Of what use consequently are the Vedas to me, who am mature in wisdom, satiated with the knowledge 29 of the gurus, void of desires, virtuous in soul? I will gain, O bráhmaṇ! the highest seat, that Supreme Soul, which is exempt from the qualities of the sixfold actions, pain, pleasure, 30 joy, and love. Hence, O father, I will abandon this well-known series of pains which is tainted by love, joy, fear, inquietude, anger, resentment and old age, and which is hampered with 31 hundreds of nooses in close contact ensnaring one's own self as game, and I will depart. Does not the duty enjoined by the three Vedas, which abounds in unrighteousness,* resemble the result of sin?"

The birds spoke.

32 Hearing that his declaration, which was interrupted by joy and surprise, the eminent father with gladsome mind addressed his son.

The father spoke.

33 "What is this thou sayest, my son? Whence arose thy wisdom? How came thy stupidity before, and thy awakening 34 now? Is this a curse-wrought change inflicted on thee by a Muni or god, since thy wisdom which was obscured has become manifest?"

* A pun on dharma and a-dharma. Prof. Monier-Williams gives trayá-dharma as masc. only.

The son spoke.

35 "Listen, father, how this happened to me, entailing pleasure and pain on me, and who I was in another birth, and what is beyond myself.

36 I was formerly a bráhmaṇ, my soul fixed on the Supreme Being; I attained the highest perfection in the considera-37 tion of the knowledge of the Supreme Being. While continually occupied in devotion, through constant application to study, through association with the good, through my own natural disposition, through deliberation, behaviour and 38 purification, while occupying myself in this indeed I experienced the sublimest joy at all times, and I gained the position of a spiritual guide, the most successful remover of 39 the doubts of disciples. A long while afterwards I attained absolute perfection; and my good disposition warped by 40 ignorance fell into calamity through carelessness. Beginning from the time of my departure I had no failure of memory, until a year had passed and had returned to my 41 recollection of my births. Being such, I, keeping my organs under control, will strive indeed, O father, by means of that 42 my former study, so to act that I may not have another existence. For this is the result of learning and liberality that I remember former existences; this indeed is not obtained, O father, by men who apply themselves to the duty enjoined 43 by the three Vedas. Being such I, from my former hermitage indeed, recurring to the duty of perfection, will attain to devotion to one object and will strive for the final emancipa-44 tion of my soul. Declare thou then, Sir! what is perplexing in thy heart: and to this extent let me, bringing the joy, discharge my debt."

The birds spoke.

45 Thereupon the father spoke to his son that speech of a man of faith, which relates to the perfection of mundane existence, and which we have been asked by thee, Sir.

The son spoke.

46 "Listen, O father, how I have often perceived the truth; the circle of mundane existence is ever young, the duration of

- 47 which is not known. I then tell thee the whole, with thy permission, O father, commencing from the period of departure, as no one else will tell thee.
- 48 "Hot moisture is excited in the body; it is set in motion by a strong vital air; blazing without fuel it pierces the sites of 49 the vital organs. And then the vital air, called Udána, passes upwards, impeding the downward course of the water and food consumed.
- 50 "Hence he, who has offered presents of water and has given 51 food and drink, obtains joy therefrom in adversity. He also, who has bestowed food with a mind purified by faith, is then 52 satisfied even without food. He, who has not spoken untruth, nor caused a breach of amity, a faithful believer, 53 meets a happy death. Men who have been intent on the worship of the gods and bráhmans, and who are unspiteful,* 54 fair, charitable, shamefast, die happily. He who would not forsake righteousness through lust, or anger or hatred, who acts up to his words and is gentle, meets a happy death.
- 55 Men who do not give away water, nor give away food, endure then, on the approach of death, burning thirst and hunger.
- 56 Those who give away fuel overcome cold; those who give away sandal overcome heat; and those who do not inflict dis-57 tress overcome the woeful life-ending pang. Those who cause error and ignorance suffer grievous terror; base men are op-58 pressed with intense pains. A false witness, a liar, and he who teaches evil, they all and also blasphemers of the Vedas die in delusion.
- 59 "Then Yama's officers, terrific, foul-smelling, carrying hammers and maces, hard-hearted, approach the false man.
- 60 When they meet his eyesight, trembling seizes him, and he bewails without ceasing his brother, mother, and children.
- 61 His voice seems thick, O father! and monotonous; and his sight wanders through terror; and his mouth grows dry with 62 his breathing; his breathing grows loud; his sight fails; next 63 he is pervaded with pains; then he quits the body. Preceded by the vital airs he assumes another body, similar to the former, produced by the actions of the former, intended for chastisement, born of no mother and father, like the previous one, with the periods of life and death conformable thereto.

* For anusúyavah read an-asúyavah.

64 "Thereupon Yama's messenger speedily binds him with cruel fetters; drags him, bewildered as he is with the blows 65 of his staff, to the southern region. And so, to some place which is rough with kuśa grass, thorns, ant-hills, stakes, and stones, where a fire is raging, which abounds in hundreds 66 of holes, and which is heated by the blazing sun, which is scorched by his rays, he is haled by Yama's emissaries, terrible 67 through their ghastly cries. Being dragged about by those fearful servants, being eaten by hundreds of she-jackals, he,
the evil-doer, proceeds by an awful road to Yama's abode.
68 Men who give umbrellas and shoes, and who bestow garments, those men pass along that road in ease; and so also do those 69 who give away food. Thus encountering afflictions, the man oppressed with sin is led in twelve days to the city of king Yama.

70 "While the body is being burnt, he experiences a great burning; also while it is being beaten, and while it is being 71 divided into pieces, terrible agony. While the body is being wetted a living being endures a very long pain, even while it is inhabiting another body, through the consequences of 72 its own acts. There the deceased feeds on the water that his relatives offer together with the sesamum seed and the cake 73 that they offer. The anointing with oil by relations, and the kneading of the limbs that they perform,—a living being is 74 nourished thereby, and by what his relations* eat. A living being does not encounter excessive affliction on the earth through his deceased relatives; and so when dead he is nourished by his relatives who make gifts.

75 "Being led off he sees his own abode for twelve days and he enjoys the water, cake &c. that are offered on the earth.
76 After twelve days, the man who is being carried off, next sees Yama's city, awful, made of iron, terrible in appearance.
77 Immediately he has gone there he beholds Yama, with fiery red eyes, like to a mass of broken collyrium ; in the midst of 78 Death, the destroyer Time and others ; his mouth gaping with projecting teeth, his countenance dreadful with frowns ; a lord, surrounded by hundreds of deformed, horrible and crooked 79 diseases ; busy in awarding punishment, with long arms, a noose in his hand, very formidable. Then the living being 80 takes the happy or miserable course decreed by him. But the false witness goes to Raurava, and the man who is untruthful. Listen while I describe the nature of that Raurava.

 81 “ Raurava* is in truth two thousand yojanas in size. Then there is a chasm, just knee-deep, very difficult to pass over :
 82 in it charcoal is heaped up and made level with the ground.
 It burns vehemently with its glowing surface of kindled 83 charcoal. In its midst Yama’s servitors cast the evil-doer.
 84 He runs about there, being burnt by the violent flame ; and at each step, his foot is wasted and consumed again and again ;
 day and night he continues on the move.
 85 “ When he has thus passed over a thousand yojanas he is released, and then enters another similar hell Niraya,† to 86 purge away his sins. Afterwards when he has passed through all the hells, the sinner enters the brute creation, among worms, insects and birds ; among carnivorous animals ; 87 among mosquitoes and such like. After having been born among elephants, trees and such like, among cattle, and among horses also ; and among other evil and noxious crea-88 tures ; he attains humanity, and is born a man, contemptible as a hunch-back or a dwarf ; among c’andálas, pukkakas and 89 such-like castes ; and then accompanied by the remainder of his sin and merit, he enters the castes in ascending order, 90 such as súdras, vaiśyas, kings and so on ; also the position of bráhmans, the gods and Indra. Sometimes in descending order, and thus evil-doers fall headlong into the hells.
 91 “ What happens to righteous-doers, listen while I declare that. They take the holy course decreed by Yama. Bands with various celestial garlands, bedecked with strings of pearls 93 and anklets and gay with music,* and heavenly chariots beyond compare go forth quickly to them. And when they descend therefrom, they are born in the family of 94 kings and other high-souled men: there observing upright conduct, they experience vigorous† pleasures, and afterwards 95 they go upwards; and otherwise, when they take the downward path, they become men as before.

“This has all been declared to thee, how a living being perishes. Next listen, O Brahmarshi, how the foetus begins.”

CANTO XI.

Conversation between the father and son (continued).

Sumati (Jaḍa) explains how living beings are conceived and born, and mentions the evils of all existence.

The son spoke.

1 “Now human impregnation‡ of women is a seed sown in darkness; immediately it is discharged it sets out from 2 Naraka or Svarga. Dominated thereby the two seeds attain firmness, O father! and next the character of a speck—of a 3 globule—of a ball of flesh. As there may be a minute seed in the ball of flesh, so it is called a germ. So the five limbs up-4 grow according to their parts; and the minor limbs also, the fingers, the eyes, the nose, the mouth, and the ears, grow out of the limbs; similarly the nails and other features grow out of 5 them. In the skin is developed the hair of the body, and afterwards the hair of the head. The womb verily increases 6 in size equally with it. Just as the cocoa-nut enlarges together with its shell, so it grows in size. The womb is situated with 7 its mouth downwards. But at the bottom of the womb the foetus develops, placing its hands on either side of the knees: and its thumbs are placed upon the knees, and its finger in 8 front of them; behind the knees are the eyes, and between

* For -śobhitāni read -śobhitā?

† Ugra; or noble.

‡ For nishkekam mānavam read nishkeko mānavah?

the knees is the nose ; and the buttocks rest on the heels ; the arms and legs lie outside.

9 “ In this way gradually grows the human being, when 10 contained in a woman’s womb: in the womb of other crea-11 tures, the position of the foetus corresponds to its form. The 12 gastric fluid* renders it firm. It lives on the food and drink 13 taken by its mother. Thus the gestation of a living creature is 14 meritorious, and constitutes a means of obtaining merit. Also 15 the cord, which is called Āpyānī, is fixed in its navel, and it 16 becomes fixed in the belly of women. As women’s food and 17 drink penetrate into their womb, the foetus increases in size, 18 its body being nourished thereby.

13 “ Numerous matters of its transmigrations occur to its 14 memory ; hence distressed on this side and on that it becomes 15 dispirited, thinking, ‘ Never again will I thus act, when once 16 I am delivered from this womb ; assuredly I will so strive 17 that I do not again undergo conception.’ Thus it meditates, 18 recollecting the hundreds of pains attending existence, which 19 have been experienced aforetime, and which spring from 20 destiny.

16 “ Afterwards in the course of time the foetus turns round 17 with its face downwards, since it is born in the ninth or tenth 18 month. While it is being expelled, it is pained by the wind 19 of the prajāpatis, and it is expelled wailing, being pained at 20 heart by its sufferings. And when expelled from the belly, it 21 falls into an intolerable swoon ; and it gains consciousness
 22 when it comes into contact with the air. Thereupon Vishnu’s 23 magical power, which effaces consciousness, assails it ; its soul being stupefied thereby, it loses its knowledge.

20 “ Thereafter the human being, bereft of knowledge, enters 21 on childhood ; and afterwards on boyhood, youth and mature 22 age ; and again the human being undergoes death, and so 23 birth. Hence he revolves in this round of mundane existence, like the jar and rope at a well.

22 “ Sometimes a man reaches Svarga, sometimes Niraya ; and 23 sometimes the dead man goes to Naraka and Svarga. Some-

* Agni ; or, the digestive faculty.

- times indeed re-born here, he obtains the consequences of his own actions; and sometimes the man who has consumed the consequences of his actions, passes at death with a very small remainder. And hence he is sometimes born here with a scanty stock of good and evil, having almost consumed them in heaven* and in hell,† O bráhmaṇ! In the hells there is this very great suffering that the dwellers in Svarga are visible thence, O father; and the denizens of hell rejoice,‡ as they are hurled down. Even in Svarga there is an unparalleled pain in that from the very time of ascension there this thought revolves in one's mind, 'I shall fall from hence': and from viewing the hells great suffering is felt; day and night one is cheerless, thinking 'I shall go this course.' One who is being born has great suffering in remaining in the womb; and after birth one has suffering in childhood and old age. The connexion also between desire envy and anger is grievous to bear in youth; and old age is almost all suffering; the heaviest suffering lies in death. Both for him who is borne off by Yama's messengers, and for him who is hurled down to the hells, there are again destined both conception, and birth, death and hell.
- 31 "So in this round of mundane existence creatures revolve about, like the jar and rope at the well; and having been bound with the fetters of nature, they are bound repeatedly.
- 32 No pleasure is there a whit, O father in this world crowded with hundreds of pains; why then should I in striving for emancipation from existence observe the three branches of religion?"

CANTO XII.

Jaḍa describes the Hells Mahá-raurava, Tamas, Nikrīntana, Apratishṭha, Asi-patra-vana, and Tapta-kumbha to his father.

The father spoke.

- 1 "Good, my son! thou hast declared the deepest obscurity of mundane existence, relying on the great fruit that grows from the bestowal of knowledge. Therein thou hast verily described the Rauravas as well as all the Narakas; tell me of them at length, O mighty in intellect!"

The son spoke.

3 "I have described to thee first the hell Raurava, now listen to the description of the hell named Mahá-raurava,* O father!
4 There for seven times five thousand yojanas all around the 5 earth is made of copper; beneath it† is fire. Heated by the heat thereof the whole region shines with a light equal to that of 6 the rising moon, most intensely severe to sight touch and the other sensations. There the evil-doer is deposited, bound hand and foot, by Yama's servants; he moves rolling about in the 7 midst. Preyed upon by crows, herons, wolves, and owls, scorpions, and mosquitoes, and vultures he is speedily drag-8 ged out into the road. Burnt and confounded, he exclaims repeatedly, "Father! Mother! Brother! Dear one!" Full of 9 fear he can get no repose. In this manner therefore emancipation from existence is attained to by violent men, who evil-minded have committed sin, in ten thousand times ten thousand years.

10 "Moreover there is another hell named Tamas;‡ it is bitterly cold naturally; it is as long as Mahá-raurava, and is enveloped 11 in darkness. There the men, afflicted with the cold, running about in the awful darkness, encounter one another and seek 12 refuge clasping one another. And their teeth adhere together, chattering with pain through the cold; there are also other 13 plagues the strongest of which are hunger and thirst. A cutting wind, laden with particles of snow, pierces their bones; pressed with hunger, they feed on the marrow and blood that 14 trickle down therefrom. Constantly licking, they whirl about in mutual contact. So there in Tamas very great affliction is 15 indeed endured by human beings, until, O most worthy bráhmaṇ! their sins are completely consumed.

"Next there is another notable hell, known as Nikṛintana.§ 16 In it potter's wheels revolve incessantly, O father! Human beings are mounted thereon and are cut by the string of Fate which is borne on the fingers of Yama's servant, from the sole of the foot to the head ; and these men do not lose their life thereby, most virtuous bráhmaṇ ! and their portions severed in hundreds reunite. In this way sinners are cut in sunder during thousands of years, until indeed the whole of their sins are consumed.

" Listen also while I speak of the hell A-pratishṭha, the occupants of which hell undergo intolerable pain. Those wheels are there indeed, and jar and well-ropes on the other side, which have been constituted causes of pain to men who engage in sin. Some human beings mounted on the wheels whirl around there ; for thousands of years no other condition is theirs ; and then another man is bound to the jar and well-rope, as the jar in the water. Human beings whirl around, continually spitting out blood, with blood pouring from their faces, and with eyes streaming with tears. They are visited with pains that are beyond endurance by living creatures.

" Hear also of another hell called Asi-patra-vana,* which has the ground covered with blazing fire for a thousand yojanas, where they are grievously scorched by the very fierce vehement beams of the sun. The living beings that inhabit the hell are ever falling down there. In the midst thereof appears a charming forest with moist leaves. The leaves there are sword-blades, O most virtuous bráhmaṇ ! Myriads† of powerful black dogs also bark there, with long muzzles, with large teeth, formidable as tigers. Then gazing at that forest before them, with its cool shades, the living beings hasten thither, oppressed with raging thirst, crying ' Ah mother ! ah dear one ! ' in deepest woe ; their feet burnt by the fire lambent on the ground. When they wend there, a wind blows, that hurls down the sword-leaves, and so casts the swords down upon them. Thereat they fall to the earth into a mass of blazing fire, which has pervaded the entire surface

- of the ground, and is constantly licking in other directions.
- 33 Thereupon the terrific dogs quickly rend many limbs from the bodies of those wailing ones. I have, described this Asi-patra-vana to thee, dear father !
- 34 “ Next learn of me about the very dreadful Tapta-kumbha.* On all sides heated pitchers are surrounded with the flames of fire, and are filled with oil iron and powder which boil over on to the heaps of blazing fire. Into them the workers of iniquity are cast head-long by Yama’s servants.† They are boiled, and foul the water with the marrow that oozes from their bursting limbs. Terrible vultures pulling them out fracture the eye-bones of their bursting skulls ; again they are dropped into the same pitchers by the impetuous birds ; again they become united with the liquefied heads, limbs, sinews, flesh, skin and bones, by means of the oil in the seething vessel. Then being quickly and vigorously stirred up by Yama’s servants with a spoon, the sinners are churned up in the whirling pool of copious oil. Such is the Tapta-kumbha that I have fully described to thee, O father !”

CANTO XIII.

Conversation between the father and son (continued).

Sumati relates an incident in one of the periods he spent in hell—King Vipās-c’it comes there and asks why, in spite of a righteous life, he was condemned there.

The son spoke.

- 1 Now I was born in a Vaiśya’s family in the seventh life that preceded my present one. Once upon a time I obstructed
- 2 the cattle at their drinking. In consequence of that act I was consigned to a very terrible hell, fearful with flames of
- 3 fire, infested with birds with iron beaks, muddy by reason of the streams of blood that flowed from limbs crushed by machines, pervaded with the sound of blood pouring down from sinners who are being cut asunder. When cast down

* Burning-pitcher.

† For yāmyaḥ read yāmyaiḥ.

- 4 there I spent a hundred years and more, scorched by the intense heat, and burning with thirst.
- 5 On a sudden a wind blew on me there, bringing gladness, deliciously cool, issuing from out of a pitcher of meal and sand.*
- 6 Through contact with it all the men were relieved of their torments, and I too gained a bliss supreme, such as the celestial beings enjoy in Svarga. And with eyes fixed in a wide gaze of joy, in wonder at what this was, we saw at hand a
- 7 peerless perfect man; and Yama's dire servant, staff in hand, like Indra's thunderbolt, was showing the path in front, and
- 8 a voice came saying "come hither!" Then that man seeing the hell filled with hundreds of tortures, moved with compassion, addressed that servant of Yama.

The man spoke.

- 10 "Ho! servant of Yama! say, what sin have I committed, for which I have incurred this deepest hell, frightful for its
- 11 torments? Known as Vipas'-c'it, I was born in the family of the Janakas, in the country of Videha, in very truth a guardian of men. I sacrificed with many sacrifices; I protected the earth with uprightness; nor did I let fighting rage; no
- 12 guest departed with averted countenance; nor did I offend the pitris, the gods, the rishis or my servants; nor did I covet other men's wives, or wealth, or aught else belonging to them.
- 13 At the moon's changes the pitris, on other lunar days the gods, voluntarily approached mankind† as cows a pool. The two religious duties, both sacrifice and meritorious work, perish inasmuch as the performers of domestic sacrifices depart
- 14 sighing with averted faces. The merit amassed in seven lives is dissipated by the sighing of the pitris; the sighing assuredly destroys the destiny that springs from three lives. Hence
- 15 I was ever indeed kindly disposed to what concerned the gods and the pitris; being such, how have I incurred this very terrible hell?"

CANTO XIV.

Yama's officer tells king Vipás-c'it why he was condemned to hell—He explains to him the nature and results of good and evil deeds generally, and mentions at great length the punishments awarded to various special sins.

The son spoke.

- 1 Thus interrogated then by that high-souled king in our hearing, Yama's officer, though dreadful, with modest speech replied.

Yama's officer spoke.

- 2 "Mahárájá! it is even as thou hast said, undoubtedly.
Nevertheless thou didst commit, Sir! a very trifling misdeed;
3 I will recall it to thy mind. The wife whom thou hadst, a princess of Vidarbha, named Pívari,—her season of aptitude for sexual intercourse was formerly rendered barren by thee, 4 who wast enamoured of the resplendent Kaikeyí; hence for the transgression in the matter of her season thou hast incur-5 red, Sir! a dreadful hell such as this. As the Fire expects the fall of the liquid butter at the time of the Homa oblation, even so does Brahmá expect the deposit of seed at the 6 approved season. A righteous man who disregarding that season, may become absorbed in objects of desire, would still incur sin by reason of the debt due to his ancestors and 7 would fall into hell. Such indeed was thy sin; naught else is found; come then! go, O king, to the enjoyment of thy meritorious acts."

The king spoke.

- 8 "I will go, O servant of the god, where thou shalt lead me.
Something I ask, deign to declare it to me aright. These 9 crows with adamant beaks are tearing out men's eyes; and these men are having their eyes renewed again and again.
10 And what deed have they done? Explain this abominable thing. Likewise they are tearing out the tongue from these

* The 'Stupid one,' Snamati's nickname.

- 11 other men as it is being reproduced anew. Why are these grievously afflicted men torn with a saw? Why are these other men, immersed in oil, boiled among meal and sand?
- 12 And these other men are dragged about by iron-beaked birds; say, of what kind are they, screaming with loud cries through the pain caused by the loosened bodily bands.
- 13 Pained by the wounds in every limb, why are these men, who have wrought iniquity, struck by the onslaught of the iron
- 14 beaks day and night. Tell me without reservation, through what maturing of their acts are these and other torments seen among sinners."

Yama's officer spoke.

- 15 "Since thou askest me, O king, concerning the rise of the fruits of sinful actions, I will tell thee that succinctly and
- 16 correctly. A man verily attains merit and demerit in regular order; and his sin or his merit diminishes as he consumes it.
- 17 But no human action, whether virtuous or sinful, quickly cleanses except by consumption. Diminution arises through
- 18 consumption. And he abandons merit and demerit through consuming it; hearken to me! From famine indeed to famine,
- 19 from affliction to affliction, from fear to fear go needy sinners, more dead than the dead. A manifold course do
- 20 creatures take through the fetters of their actions. From festival to festival, from Svarga to Svarga, from happiness to happiness go the faithful, and the peaceful, the rich, and the
- 21 doers of good. But sinners, when slain by sin, encounter perils from beasts of prey and elephants, terrors from snakes
- 22 and thieves; what surpasses this? Decked with fragrant garlands, clad in fine apparel, enjoying beautiful carriages dwellings and food, those who are praised ever go to sacred groves with their meritorious deeds.
- 23 "Thus men's merit and demerit are amassed in the sum of many hundreds of thousands of lives: they spring from the
- 24 germs of pleasure and pain. For as the seed, O king, awaits the water, so do merit and demerit await him who acts
- 25 otherwise than at the right time and place. A trifling sin committed by a man, when it reaches the place and time, inflicts the pain produced by a thorn, when the foot is planted 26 down heedlessly. Then it inflicts the acuter severe pain that is caused by pins and wedges, and likewise scarcely endurable 27 headaches and other pains. It causes the pains engendered by eating unwholesome things, by cold, heat, fatigue, inflammation and such like. Moreover sins have regard to one another 28 amid the confluence of their results. In this way heinous sins have regard to the deteriorated state of protracted illness, &c ; and they verily tend to the consequences produced by weapons, fire, calamity, pain, imprisonment, and so forth.

 29 A trifling good deed confers at once a pleasing fragrance, or 30 touch, or sound, taste, or shape ; more marked likewise after a long time, and great when arising at the proper period.
 And in this way pleasures and pains spring indeed out of good 31 and bad actions. A man stays here consuming the productions of numerous mundane existences. And the results of knowledge or ignorance are checked by race and country, 32 and remain there united merely by outward sign to the soul.

“ Never and nowhere doth the man exist who doeth not a 33 wicked or holy act in body, mind, or speech. Whatever a man receives, whether pain or pleasure, whether great or insigni-34 ficant, it produces a changed condition of the mind ; by so much either his virtue, or on the other hand his sin, gradually 35 diminishes by consumption, just like food that is being eaten.
 In this way these men, dwelling within hell, diminish their 36 awful heinous sins by torments day and night. Likewise, O king, they consume their virtues in the company of the im-37 mortals in Svarga with the songs and other joys of the Gandharvas, Siddhas and Apsarases. In the condition of a god, and a human being, and a brute creature, one con-38 sumes good or evil, arising from virtue or sin, and characterized by pleasure or pain.

“ What thou enquirest about of me, O king ! namely ‘ Of what particular sins are the tortures of wicked-doers the consequences ? ’ that I will declare to thee in full detail.

39 “ When vile covetous men have gazed on others’ wives and 40 on others’ goods with evil eye and evil mind, these birds with adamant beaks tear out their eyes; and they have their 41 eyes reproduced continually. Moreover during as many twinklings of the eyes as these men have committed the sin, so many thousands of years they undergo the eye-torture.

42 “Those men who have given instruction in wicked S’ástras, and those who have advised such instruction, for the purpose of 43 completely destroying the sight even of their enemies; those who have repeated the S’ástra improperly; those who have given utterance to an evil word; those who have blasphemed the Veda, the gods, the dvijas and their guru; for so 44 many years these very terrible birds with adamant beaks tear out those men’s very tongues as they are continually reproduced.

45 “Also base men, who have caused dissension among friends, or dissension between a father and his son and relations, between a sacrificer and a spiritual preceptor, between 46 a mother and her son who is her companion, and between wife and husband,—see! these men who are such are torn with a saw, O king!

47 “Also those who cause pain to others; and those who forbid joyousness; and those who deprive others of fans, breezy places, 48 sandal, and usír grass;* and base men who have inflicted suffering on innocent men at life’s end,—these participators in sin, who are such, are placed within meal and sand.

49 “Moreover the man who eats another’s s’ráddha, when invited by the other to a ceremony either to the gods or to the pitris, he is rent in twain by birds.

50 “But whoever lacerates the vitals of good men with wicked words, these birds unchecked continually strike him.

51 “And whoever indulges in backbiting, dissembling in speech, dissembling in mind, his tongue is assuredly torn in twain thus by sharp razors.

* Andropogon muricatus, Roxburgh; the modern khas-khas. The roots, when dry, and then gently moistened, emit a pleasant fragrance; they are employed to make large fans; and also screens, which are placed before doors and windows, and which being kept moist during the hot winds render the air that passes through them cool and fragrant (Roxb. p. 89).

- 52 “Whoever, puffed up, show contempt towards their parents and gurus—these men, who are such, are plunged head foremost into a pit reeking with pus, ordure and urine.
- 53 “Those who eat, while the gods, guests and living beings, dependants and visitors, and also the pitris, the fire and birds 54 are left unfed; those evil men feed on carrion and exudations, and they become Súc'i-mukha birds,* as large as mountains.
Behold! these are men of that kind.
- 55 “But those who feed a bráhmaṇ or a man of another caste in one company disagreeably on earth,—those men, like these persons, feed on ordure.
- 56 “Whoever eat their own food neglecting a man, who has gone forth in company with them, and who being destitute seeks wealth,—these men, who are such, feed on phlegm.
- 57 “Those men who, without washing their hands and mouth after meals, O king! have touched cattle, bráhmaṇs and the fire,—these hands of theirs placed in fire-pots are licked repeatedly.
- 58 “But those men who, without washing their hands and mouth after meals, have gazed longingly at the sun, moon and stars,—in their eyes Yama's servants place fire and augment it.
- 59 “Moreover whatever men have touched cattle, fire, their mother, a bráhmaṇ, their eldest brother, father, sister, 60 daughter-in-law, their gurus and the aged with their feet, they stand mid piles of charcoal, with their feet bound with red-hot iron fetters, enduring burning up to the knees.
- 61 “Whoever have eaten in an unhallowed manner milk, khichree, goat's flesh, and things offered as food to the gods,— 62 the eyes of those sinners, as they lie hurled to the ground gazing with starting eyes, are torn out, see! from their faces by Yama's servants with pincers.

* The dictionaries do not say what bird this is. I would suggest from the meaning of the word, that it means a Honey-Sucker (the commonest species of which is the Purple Honey-Sucker, Arachmechthra asiatica), or it may be the Hoopoe, Upupa epops, which also has a long slender beak (Jerdon, vol. I, pp. 370 & 390.)

- 63 “ And base men who have hearkened to blasphemy against gurus, the gods, and dvijas, and against the Vedas,—these 64 servants of Yama continually drive iron wedges, red as fire, into the ears, of such wicked men who rejoice in such things though they bewail the while.
- 65 “ Whoever, led by anger and covetousness, have broken up and destroyed beautiful rest-houses,* the abodes of gods and bráhmans, and assemblages in the temples of the gods,— 66 Yama’s exceedingly cruel servants continually flay the skins of those men from their body by means of these sharp instruments.
- 67 “ Whatever men have made water in the path of cattle, bráhmans, and the sun, these entrails of theirs are drawn out through the anus by crows.
- 68 “ Where a man after having given his daughter to some one, gives her to a second person, truly that man is thus divided into many portions, and swept along in a stream of burning corrosive.
- 69 “ Whatever man, moreover, engrossed in his own nourishment abandons his destitute children, dependants, wife and 70 other relatives in a famine or in a disturbance, he indeed in his hunger thus gets portions of his own flesh, which Yama’s servants cut off and put into his mouth.
- 71 “ Whoever through avarice abandons those who have sought protection and who are dependent on him for their livelihood, he indeed is thus tortured by Yama’s servants with tortures by means of machines.
- 72 “ Men who check good deeds all their lives long are ground with the grinding of rocks, as are these evil-doers.
- 73 “ Men who carry off pledges are bound with bands on all their limbs, and are devoured day and night by insects, scorpions, and ravens.
- 74 “ Wicked men who indulge in sexual intercourse by day, and men who defile others’ wives, are worn away by hunger, have their tongues dropping from their palates by reason of thirst, and are racked with pangs.

* Prapá, road-side sheds for accommodating travellers with water.

- 75 "Moreover, see the "seemul tree"* with its long iron thorns; mounted thereon the bodies of *sinner*s are pierced, and they are foul with the streams of blood that pour forth.
- 76 "See also, O tiger-like man! these defilers of others' wives, who are being destroyed by Yama's servants in the "mouse."†
- 77 "Whatever man, deposing his spiritual preceptor, stubbornly pursues his learning or art,—he verily, bearing thus a 78 rock on his head, undergoes affliction in the public way, suffering exceeding pain, emaciated with hunger day and night, his head quivering through the pain of his burden.
- 79 "Those who have discharged urine, phlegm or ordure in water,—they, such as these persons, have come to a hell stinking with phlegm ordure and urine.
- 80 "Pressed with hunger these men are devouring one another's flesh—these men formerly did not eat according to the rules of hospitality mutually.
- 81 "Those also who have discarded the Vedas and the fires, themselves kindling their own fires,—they, such as these persons, are repeatedly hurled down from the loftiest summit of a mountain.
- 82 "Those men who have married virgin widows and have grown old to the full extent of life,—these turned into worms are consumed by ants.
- 83 "By receiving favours from an outcaste,‡ by performing sacrifices for an outcaste, by constant attendance on an outcaste, a man ever reaches the condition of an insect that lives among stones.
- 84 "The man, who eats sweetmeats all by himself, while his relatives or his friends or a guest look on, eats a pile of burning charcoal.
- 85 "This man's back is continually devoured by fearful wolves, because, O king! he was a backbiter of people.

* Salmali, the Cotton or Silk-cotton tree, Bombax malabaricum (heptaphylla, Roxb.), the Bengali simul, the Hindustani semal. It is a large tree, common almost everywhere, with stout hard conical prickles (Hooker, vol. I, p. 349; Roxb., p. 514). Here it means a kind of instrument of torture.

† A kind of instrument of torture.

‡ See Canto XV. verse 1.

- 86 "Blind, moreover, deaf, dumb, this man roams about, sick with hunger—he, base man, was ungrateful to men who occupy themselves in conferring benefits.
- 87 "This man, who returns evil for good, working injury to his friends, very evil-minded, drops into Tapta-kumbha;
- 88 thereafter he will suffer grinding; then he will go to Karambha-báluká;* next he will undergo mechanical tortures; then Asi-patra-vana; and rending with saw-like leaves. After experiencing, too, division by the thread of Fate and manifold torments, how he will obtain expiation herefrom I know not.
- 90 "Corrupt Bráhmans, for having assailed one another when assembled at S'ráddhas, drink verily the moisture that exudes from every limb.
- 91 "A gold-stealer, a bráhmaṇ-slayer, a drinker of spirituous liquors, a defiler of his guru's bed, remain, being burnt in
- 92 blazing fire beneath, above, around, for very many thousands of years; thereafter they are re-born as men afflicted with
- 93 leprosy, consumption, sickness and other diseases. And when again dead, they enter hell; and when again born, they undergo a similar malady until the end of the kalpa, O king!
- 94 "A cow-slayer also goes to hell for a rather less period, namely, during three lives.
- "There is likewise a fixed ordinance regarding all minor sins.
- 95 "To what various grades of creatures, for what several definite sins, men go, when released from hell—listen to me while I recount that."

CANTO XV.

Conversation between the father and son—(Continued).

The exposition of sins and their punishments is continued, and Jaḍa concludes his story of king Vipāś-c'it—The king by his merit delivers all the inhabitants of hell and ascends to heaven.

Yama's officer spoke.

- 1 "For accepting anything of value from an outcaste,† let a dvija be born an ass: but let him who sacrifices for the outcaste become a worm, on his release from hell.

* See Canto XIII, verse 5.

† See Canto XIV. verse 83.

- 2 "But the dvija who has misbehaved towards his spiritual preceptor,* by coveting the latter's wife and the latter's property in his mind, undoubtedly becomes a dog.
- 3 "The man also who scorns his parents is born an ass; for reviling his mother and father he is born a mainá;† and he 4 who scorns his brother's wife becomes a pigeon; but for injuring her he becomes a tortoise.
- 5 "He who, while eating his brother's piṇḍa, does not pursue his brother's welfare, being overwhelmed with folly is indeed born after death a monkey.
- 6 "He who carries away a deposit is born a worm on his release from hell: And the detractor when released from hell 7 becomes a Rákshasa. And the man who destroys trust is born a fish.
- 8 "For carrying off through folly paddy, barley, sesa-

From both varieties an oil is expressed which is used in diet, and for various other purposes. (Hooker, vol. I, p. 156; Roxb., p. 497.)

9 and flax, or other crops, a man void of understanding is born a large-mouthed rat resembling an ichneumon.

“Moreover for improperly touching another’s wife he is 10 born a horrible wolf. And the foolish sinner who violates his brother’s wife becomes a dog, a jackal, a heron, a vulture, a 11 snake, and a bird of prey,* by degrees. And the sinner, who has violated his friend’s wife, his guru’s wife, and the king’s 12 wife, becomes a cock-cuckoo when released from hell. The man of lustful soul is born a hog.

“Let him who hinders sacrifice liberality and marriage a worm.

“He who obtains food, without giving some to the gods

from hell.

“And the súdra for approaching a bráhmaṇ-woman is born 16 a worm; for begetting offspring of her, let him become an insect living within wood. And a c’andála for the same sin is born a hog, a small worm, a diver.†

17 “A man ungrateful, base among men, who returns evil for good, when released from hell is born a small worm, an in-18 sect, a bird, a scorpion also, and a fish, a crow, a tortoise, then a pukasa.

19 “For slaying an unarmed man, a man is born an ass. The murderer of a woman also and a child-slayer are born worms.

“But for stealing victuals a man is born a fly.

thereto. For taking rice-food, he is born a cat, when quit

† Vic'i-káka. I do not find this in Prof. Monier-Williams' Dictionary. I would suggest that it is a Tern, most probably the Black-bellied Tern, Sterna javanica, which has a black and grey plumage and is found in every river in India. The Terns are commonly called gangá-chil or gáng-chil, i. e., the river-kite. (Jerdon, vol. II, pp. 834 and 840.)

¶ Tittiri, the Francolin or Meadow partridge, of which there are two species in India, (1) the Black partridge, Francolinus vulgaris (the modern titir or kala-titar) which is found throughout the whole of Northern India, and (2) the Painted partridge, F. pictus (also called kala-titar) which is found in Central and part of Southern India. (Jerdon, vol. II, pp. 558 and 561). The former is probably the bird meant here.

†† Krakara. Prof. Monier-Williams says this is Perdix sylvatica, but I do not find any such name in Jerdon. It is probably either the Grey partridge, Ortygornis ponticeriana, which is common throughout the greater part of India, or the Kyah partridge, O. gularis, which is found throughout Behar and Bengal. (Jerdon, vol. II, pp. 569, and 572.)

fine cloth are carried off, the sinner is born a parrot; and so too for taking a garment of goat's-hair or sheep's wool, and a linen and the stealer of a barken thing is born a pond-heron; for 30 taking paint and potherbs he is born a peacock. The man who carries off a red garment becomes a jīvanjīva pheasant;† for taking splendid perfumes let him become a musk-rat; and for 31 taking clothes a hare; for theft of fruit a man becomes a eu-nuch; for theft of wood, a wood-insect;‡ and a flower-stealer takes vegetables becomes a green pigeon;§ and one who takes water a pied-crested cuckoo.|| One who takes away land, after going to Raurava and the other very terrible hells, 33 becomes grass, a bush, a creeper, a climbing shrub, a reed and a tree by degrees; and the man afterwards, when his sins 34 have been diminished to insignificance, becomes a worm, an insect, and a grasshopper, a bird, an aquatic animal, a deer; and having attained the condition of kine, and despicable castes 35 such as c'aṇḍāla and pukkaśa, he becomes lame and blind, deaf, leprous, and afflicted with pulmonary consumption; he is seized with diseases affecting the mouth and the eyes and the 36 anus; and he becomes epileptic; he attains also the condition of a súdra. This truly is known to be the course of stealers of cattle and gold.

- 37 “And fierce men who steal learning, who fall short in their rewards to the guru; the man who makes another's wife his 38 own wife,—he becomes a eunuch, the foolish man, when escaped from the torments of hell.

40 the vitals of others, coarseness, and cruelty, paying court to other men's wives, perfidy in taking other people's property, 41 and contempt of the gods, dishonesty, fraud towards men, and avarice, manslaughter, and the continued performance 42 also of whatever things are forbidden;—one should know these to be the after-characteristics of those who are released from hell.

“Compassion towards all creatures, concord, aid to other 43 people, truth, speech directed towards the welfare of all creatures, inculcation of the authority of the Veda, veneration of gurus devarshis Siddhas and rishis, association with the 44 good, hospitality, study, friendship,—let the wise man understand these and whatever other things constitute the deeds 45 of truth and righteousness, to be the marks of sinless men who have quitted Svarga.

46 “This I have declared explicitly to thee, O king! concerning men, holy and wicked, who eat the fruits of their own actions. Come then, we go elsewhere. Thou hast now seen everything, for thou hast seen hell. Come then, let us go elsewhere.”

The son spoke.

47 Thereupon the king prepared to follow him; and then a cry went up from all the men that abode in torment, ‘Be 48 gracious, O king! stay but a moment, for the air that clings 49 to thy body gladdens our mind, and entirely dispels the burning and the sufferings and pains from our bodies, O tiger-like man! Be gracious, O king!’

50 On hearing this their entreaty, the king asked that servant 51 of Yama—“How do I afford gladness to these men? Have I done such a mighty deed of merit in the world of mortals, wherefrom falls this gladdening shower? Declare me that.”

Yama's officer spoke.

52 “Inasmuch as thy body was nourished with the food that remained, after the pitris the gods guests and servants were 53 satisfied, and since thy mind was attached to them, hence the air that clings to thy body brings gladness; the torment, O

- 54 king ! does not hurt the evil-doers. Whereas thou didst offer the horse-sacrifice and other sacrifices according to precept, hence from seeing thee Yama's engines weapons fires and 55 crows, which cause intense suffering, such as crushing cutting burning and so forth, grow mild, O king ! when counteracted by thy majesty."

The king spoke.

- 56 "Neither in Svarga nor in Brahma-loka do men experience such joy, methinks, as arises from conferring bliss on suffering 57 creatures. If, while I am present, torment does not hurt these men, here then, fair Sir, I will remain firm as a mountain."

Yama's officer spoke.

- 58 "Come, O king ; we proceed. Enjoy the delights won by thine own merit, casting aside here the torments of evil-doers."

The king spoke.

- 59 "For that reason* I will not go as long as these are in sore suffering. From my near-presence the denizens of hell grow 60 happy. Fie on the sickly protection-begging† life of that man, who shews no favour to one distressed, even though he be a 61 resolute foe ! Sacrifices, gifts, austerities do not work for the welfare of him, who has no thought for the succour of the 62 distressed. Whoever bears a cruel mind towards children, the sick and such like, and towards the aged also, I do not 63 hold him human ; he is truly a Rákshasa. But if these men have pain originating in hell, whether produced by the heat from fire, or produced by overpowering smells, and if they 64 have the intense pain arising from hunger and thirst that causes faintness, yet the grant of deliverance to them excels, 65 I consider, the joy of Svarga. If many sufferers shall obtain happiness, while I undergo pain, should I not in truth embrace it ? Go thou not therefore long."

* For tasmdt read asmút, (from hence) ?

† For śaraṇārthīnam read śaraṇārthanam (from arthand), since jīvanam is neuter ?

Yama's officer spoke.

- 66 "Here have both Dharma and Indra arrived to lead thee away. Thou must certainly depart from us: go therefore, O king!"

Dharma spoke.

- 67 "Fittingly worshipped by thee, I lead thee to Svarga; mount this heavenly chariot and linger not; let us go."

The king spoke.

- 68 "Men in thousands, O Dharma! suffer pain here in hell; and being in affliction they cry to me to save them; hence I depart not."

Indra spoke.

- 69 "These evil-doers have come to hell in consequence of their own deeds; thou also, O king, must go to Svarga in consequence of thy meritorious deed."

The king spoke.

- 70 "If thou dost know, thou, O Dharma, or thou, O Indra, S'ac'i's lord, how great indeed is my authority, then deign* to speak aright."

Dharma spoke.

- 71 "Just as drops of water in the sea, or as stars in the sky,
72 or as showers of rain, as the sands in the Ganges—just as these drops of water and other things are innumerable, O Mahá-rájá! even so thy merit is in truth beyond reckoning.
73 In thy evincing now this compassion here in the hells, the reckoning of that merit of thine has verily amounted to a hundred thousand. Then go, O king! enjoy then the abode 74 of the immortals; let these also consume away in hell the sin arising from their own actions!"

The king spoke.

- 75 "How shall men attain their desire in things connected with me, if in my presence these people gain no prosperity.
76 Hence, whatever good deeds I possess, O lord of the thirty gods! by means thereof let the sinners who are undergoing torment be delivered from hell!"

* For arhatha read arhatha?

Indra spoke.

- 77 "Thus hast thou, O king! gained a more exalted station :
see too these sinners delivered from hell !"

The son spoke.

- 78 Then fell there a shower of flowers upon that king, and Hari making him mount the heavenly chariot led him to the 79 heaven-world. Both I and the others, who were there, were released from the torments; thereafter we entered the other earthly existences, as determined by the results of our own actions.
80 Thus these hells have been reckoned up, O bráhmaṇ ! And for what particular sin to what particular kind of creature a 81 man descends, it has all been recounted to thee in detail, as I saw it of yore, having gained the accurate knowledge that springs from previous experience. What else do I tell thee next, noble sir ?

CANTO XVI.

Anasúyā's gain of a boon.

The father asks Jada for instruction on yoga or religious devotion—Jada begins a long exposition, which starts with a story of Anasúyā—A certain brahman was cursed by Māṇḍavya at night that he should die at sunrise, and his devoted wife restrained the sun from rising—All activity ceased, and the gods in alarm besought Atri's wife Anasúyā—At her exhortation the wife relents, the sun rises, and the bráhmaṇ dies, but is restored to life by Anasúyā—Anasúyā obtains from the gods the boon that Brahmá, Vishṇu and Śiva should be born her sons, and that she should attain yoga.

The father spoke.

- 1 Thou hast declared to me, O son, the established nature of mundane existence which should be shunned exceedingly, a nature which is immutable like the rope and bucket at a well.
2 I have thus then learnt it in its entirety such as it is. Say, what must I do in this thus-ordained mundane existence ?

The son spoke.

- 3 If, O father, thou dost believe my word implicitly, then 4 abandoning thy condition as a house-holder become a dis-5 tinguished hermit. Following that vocation according to 6 precept, forsaking thy fire and possessions, directing thy soul
 7 towards the Supreme Soul, indifferent in regard to the various 8 opposites,* relinquishing thy property, become a mendicant, 9 eating only every other meal, subdued in soul, unwearied,
 10 grown intent on religious devotion,† withdrawn from contact 11 with external things. Thereafter thou shalt attain to that religious devotion,—which is the cure for connexion with pain, the cause of final emancipation from existence, incomparable, unutterable, devoid of worldly attachments; through connexion with that devotion thou wilt never again have union with living beings.

The father spoke.

- 7 My son, tell me next of yoga, or religious devotion, the 8 cause of final emancipation from existence; by which I may 9 escape such suffering as this, when I am again born among 10 living beings. Since I am intent on attachments, and my soul 11 does not by reason of the bonds of mundane existence attain to religious devotion, being itself even devoid of religious devotion,‡ speak now of that religious devotion. Sprinkle with the water of thy words, which are cool with the water of the knowledge of Brahma, me whose body and mind are disordered with pain through the heat of the sun of mundane existence. Re-vivify with the draught of the nectar of thy words me, who am bitten by the black serpent of ignorance, who am in anguish from its venom, and dead. Hasting with the keys of the knowledge of approved goodness, liberate me, who am galled by the chains of selfishness in the matter of son, wife, home and land.

* Pleasure and pain, &c.

† Yoga.

‡ Or “devoid of means;” there seems to be a pun on the word yoga.

The son spoke.

- 12 Listen, dear father! how of yore the wise Dattátreya, when duly questioned, expounded the system of religious devotion at length to Alarka.*

The father spoke.

- 13 Whose son was Dattátreya? Again, how did he discourse about religious meditation? And who was the distinguished Alarka, who enquired concerning religious meditation?

The son spoke.

- 14 There was a certain Kausika bráhmaṇ in the town Pratishthána; he by reason of sins committed in other births was 15 diseased with leprosy. His wife used to honour him her husband, thus diseased, as a god, by anointing his feet, knead-16 ing his limbs, bathing, clothing, and feeding him, and by cleansing the flow of mucus, blood etcetera, and with atten-17 dance in private, and with affectionate conversation. Though always exceedingly venerated by that modest lady, he being harsh continually menaced her by reason of his excessively 18 fiery temper. Nevertheless his wife, bowing before him, used to esteem him a divinity;† nevertheless she used to esteem him, who was extremely loathful, as superior to all.

- 19 Being also of a constantly roaming disposition, the bráhmaṇ ordered his wife—"Do thou bring me to her dwelling. Pro-20 cure for me that courtesan whom I saw living in her house in the high-way, O religious one; she indeed dwells in my 21 heart. I saw the maiden at sunrise, and here is night come upon us. She does not depart from my heart, ever 22 since I saw her. If she, lovely in every limb, with large hips and swelling breasts and slender body, does not embrace 23 me, then thou wilt indeed behold me die. Beautiful is love among mankind; and she is courted by many; and I am unable to go; it appears perplexing to me."

- 24 Then having heard that speech of her husband who was sick with love, she his consort, sprung of a high family, very 25 virtuous, faithful to her husband, gathered a compact retinue, and took abundance of money, and bearing her husband on 26 her shoulder, moved on, slow in her gait, along the high road, in the cloud-covered night, while the sky was revealed by the fitful lightning; for the bráhmaṇ lady was desirous of doing her husband pleasure.

27 And on the road, the bráhmaṇ, while borne on his wife's shoulder, through fear of thieves in the darkness pushed 28 away Māṇḍavya, who was no thief and who was afflicted with grievous pain, being impaled on a stake. Enraged at the 29 brush with a foot, Māṇḍavya addressed him—"He, who has with his foot pushed me away who am thus exceedingly afflicted, he sinful in soul, base among men, has gotten a 30 miserable condition. At sunrise, helpless, he shall be bereft of life assuredly: at the sight of the sun indeed he shall 31 perish." Thereupon his wife hearing that most cruel curse, exclaimed distressed—"The sun verily shall not arise!"

32 Then the sun failed to rise, and there was continual night for many lengths of day. Thereupon the gods grew afraid, 33 fearing "How indeed should not all this universe pass into dissolution, when the Vedas are not uttered, and when it is deprived of oblations with fire and of the Svadhá and Sváhá?
 34 Without the ordinance of day and night, there is an end of months and seasons: and again from the cessation of these south and north are not known in the sun's half yearly course.
 35 And without knowledge of the half yearly course where would be time, such as the year? Without the year no other know-36 ledge of time exists. By reason of the utterance of that devoted wife, the sun rises not: without the sun's rising, bathing giving of gifts and the other actions can not indeed 37 exist; nor indeed does the fire spread, and sacrifices are seen to cease; nor indeed do we get satisfaction without the homa 38 sacrifice. Mortals satisfy us with the appropriate shares of the sacrifices: we favour mortals with rain for the perfect-39 ing of their grain and other crops. When plants have ripened, mortals sacrifice to us with sacrifices; worshipped in 40 their sacrifices &c., we bestow on them their desires. For we pour rain downwards, and mortals make their rain ascend; for we rain with showers of water, men with showers of clarified butter. And evil-minded men, who do not give us the periodical sacrifices,* being greedy eat themselves our share of the sacrifice. We defile the water, the sun, fire and the winds, and the earth for the destruction of those mischievous sinners. Through partaking of bad water &c., very dire portents work towards the death of those doers of evil deeds. But to those high-souled men, who after delighting us consume the remainder themselves, let us allot the blissful worlds. Therefore all this universe of a truth does not exist, unless these things increase and endure. How indeed may the days be liberated?"—so conversed the gods with one another.

Having heard the speech of these assembled gods who were fearful of the destruction of the sacrifices, the god Brahmá spoke, "Majesty is subdued by majesty indeed, and austerities also by austerities, O ye immortals! Hearken therefore to my advice. Through the might of the faithful wife the sun does not rise, and from his not rising loss befalls mortals and you. Hence do ye, through desire that the sun should rise, propitiate Atri's faithful wife Anasúyá who is rich in austerities."

The son spoke.

She, propitiated by them when they resorted to her, said "Let your wish be asked for." The gods petitioned for day, saying "Let it be as before!"

Anasúyá spoke.

"The might of a faithful wife may not be lost in any wise. Hence while honouring that good lady, I will liberate the day, O ye gods! that day and night may again exist, and that that good lady's own husband shall not perish."

The son spoke.

Thus having addressed the gods, she the beautiful went to her temple, and being asked by that lady regarding the welfare and righteousness of her husband, spoke.

* Nitya-naimitikí; see Canto XXX.

Anasúyá spoke.

54 "Perchance thou rejoicest, O blessed lady, at the sight of thy husband's countenance! Perchance too thou esteemest thy 55 husband far above all the gods! Through obedience indeed to my husband I have gained a great reward; through the obtainment of the results of every wish obstacles have been 56 removed. Five debts a man must ever discharge, O virtuous lady. Thus, he must amass wealth according to the duties 57 of his own caste: and he must next apply the wealth gained to a fitting object according to the precepts: he should always live full of compassion, observing truth, candour, austerities 58 and liberality: and he must daily perform the ceremonies prescribed by the S'ástras and free from anger and enmity, 59 with faith preceding, according to his ability. A man with great pain gradually obtains the worlds specially allotted to his own caste, such as that of the Prajá-patis and other worlds, 60 O virtuous lady. So women by obedience to their husbands obtain half of the entire merit painfully earned by their 61 husbands. There is no separate sacrifice for women, nor śráddha, nor fasting: for by obedience to their husbands 62 indeed they reach these desired worlds. Therefore, O vir-tuous and exalted lady, let thy mind ever be turned towards obedience to thy husband, since a husband is a wife's supreme 63 bliss. Whatever worship the husband may offer by right ceremonies to the gods, and whatever to the pitris and guests, even one half of that does the wife, whose mind is centred on him alone, enjoy by very obedience to her husband."

The son spoke.

64 Having heard that her speech, the lady saluted Atri's wife Anasúyá respectfully in return, and replied thus to her—65 "Happy am I, favoured am I, and regarded by the gods am I, since thou, O lady blessed by nature, again increasest my 66 faith. I know this—none among women has a condition equal with her husband, and love for him tends to her benefit

- 67 in this world and the next; through her husband's favour both here and after death, O illustrious lady, a woman gains 68 happiness; for a husband is a woman's deity. Do thou, being such a woman, O exalted lady, tell me who have reached thy temple, what I, a noble* woman, must do, or what my noble husband must do, O beauteous one!"

Anasúyá spoke.

- 69 "Indra and these gods in distress have approached me;
 they are searching for the day and night, the virtuous acts prescribed for which have been discarded in consequence of 70 thy speech. They beg for the natural uninterrupted continuance of day and night: I am come for that object, and 71 do thou listen to this my speech. Through the absence of day there is the absence of all sacrificial ceremonies; through the absence of these the gods do not get their nourishment, 72 O ascetic lady. Through the destruction of day also all work is cut short; from the destruction thereof the world 73 will perish through drought. Therefore if thou desirest to deliver this world from calamity, be gracious, O virtuous lady, to the worlds; let the sun run his course as before."

The bráhmaṇ lady spoke.

- 74 "Māṇḍavya exceedingly furious, O illustrious lady, has cursed my lord, saying 'at sunrise thou shalt meet thy doom!'"

Anasúyá spoke.

- 75 "If, however, it pleases thee, O lady, then at thy word I will make thee even a new husband, in form the same as before.
 76 For I must in every way propitiate the majesty of faithful wives, O high-born lady—thus I do thee honour."

The son spoke.

- 77 On her saying 'be it so!' the ascetic lady Anasúyá then summoned the sun, raising up the arghya oblation, at mid-78 night on the tenth night. Then the adorable sun, in appearance ruddy as the full-blown lotus flower, with wide 79 disc, rose aloft above the mighty mountain. Forthwith indeed her husband was bereft of life and fell on the ground ; and she caught him as he fell.

Anasúyá spoke.

- 80 "Be not dejected, O lady ; behold my power. Thou hast succeeded through thy obedience to thy husband.
81 What further need hast thou of austerities ? Since I have nowhere seen another man equal to thy husband, in form, 82 in disposition, in intellect, with sweetness of speech and other adornments, in very truth let this bráhmaṇ, freed 83 from sickness, young again, obtain life in company with his wife for a hundred autumns. Since I see no other deity the 84 equal of thy husband, in very truth let this bráhmaṇ regain his life in sound health. Since thy* effort is constantly directed to propitiate thy husband by deed mind and word, let this dvija then come to life."

The son spoke.

- 85 Then the bráhmaṇ arose, free from illness, young again, with his own lustre illuminating the dwelling, as it were an 86 ever-youthful god. Then there fell a shower of flowers, accompanied with the strains of heavenly instruments and other musical instruments. And the gods were delighted and said to Anasúyá.

The gods spoke.

- 87 "Choose a boon, O blessed lady. Inasmuch as thou hast accomplished a great matter for the gods, therefore the gods will grant thee a boon, O ascetic lady."

Anasúyá spoke.

- 88 "If ye gods headed by Brahmá, being favourable, will grant 89 me a boon, and if ye deem me worthy of a boon, then let Brahmá, Vishnu, and Śiva become sons to me, and let me in company with my husband attain religious devotion, to the end that I may be delivered from affliction."
90 "Be it so," exclaimed Brahmá, Vishnu, Śiva and the other gods to her ; and they departed, duly honouring the ascetic lady.

CANTO XVII.

The Birth of Dattátreya.

The Prajá-pati Atri begot three sons by his wife Anasúyá, namely, Soma, Dattátreya, and Durvásas, who were incarnations of portions of Brahmá, Vishṇu and Śiva respectively—Their offices are described—Dattatreya, assembling young Munis about himself, tested their loyalty, by living immersed in a lake and by revelling in sensual pleasures.

The son spoke.

1 Then after many days' time the adorable Atri, the second 2 son of Brahmá, looked upon his wife Anasúyá. Her, bathed after menstruation, very lovely in body, seductive and perfect in form, free from blame, the love-possessed Muni enjoyed mentally.

3 But while he contemplated her, a powerful wind through and above brought the change that was produced in her.
4 The ten regions of the sky seized the white-lustred form of Brahmá, as it fell all around, in the form of Soma, charac-5 terized by passion. That mental Soma was begotten in her as the son of the prajā-pati Atri, the life and possessor of 6 every excellence. Magnanimous Vishṇu being pleased begot of her Dattátreya, the bráhmaṇ, in whom goodness predomi-7 nated, by production from his own body. Dattátreya was he called; he sucked Anasúyá's breast: he was Vishṇu indeed 8 incarnate; he was Atri's second son. He issued from his mother's womb seven days afterwards, being enraged on seeing that the haughty king of the Haihayas was near and 9 was offending Atri, being angry he at once desired to burn up the Haihaya. Filled with indignation at the long pains and toil of his residence in the womb, a portion of Śiva 10 was born as Durvásas, in whom darkness predominated.
Thus three sons were born of her, being portions of Brahmá, Śiva and Vishṇu.

11 Brahmá became Soma, Vishṇu was born as Dattátreya, Śiva was born as Durvásas, through the boon granted by the 12 gods. The prajā-pati Soma, ever causing creepers and medicinal plants and mankind to grow with his cool rays, abides 13 in Svarga. Dattátreya protects offspring from destruction by the malignant Daityas : and Vishnu's portion must also be 14 known as the benefactor of the docile. Durvásas, the adorable birthless god, destroys the scorner ; assuming a formidable 15 body, he is haughty in look mind and speech. The adorable prajā-pati, the son of Atri again created the Soma plant.*

 Dattátreya also, being Vishnu, enjoyed objects of sense while 16 engaged in profound meditation. Durvásas, deeming his father and mother to be the chiefest object of devotion, assuming the form known as 'frantic,' roamed about the earth.
 17 Surrounded by the sons of Munis, the lordly yogi Dattátreya also, desirous of obtaining exemption from all attachments, 18 long immersed himself in a lake. Nevertheless those youths, resorting to the bank of the lake, did not forsake him, who 19 was magnanimous and exceedingly benign. When after a hundred heavenly years were ended, all those youthful Munis, through affection for him, still forsook not the bank of the 20 lake, the Muni, taking his noble wife clothed in heavenly raiment, beautiful and plump in form, arose from the water, 21 thinking, "If these sons of Munis shall forsake me because of the presence of a woman, then I will remain free from all 22 attachments." When nevertheless the sons of the Munis did not forsake him, he next drank intoxicating liquors in com-23 pany with his wife. Thereupon they did not forsake him, though he was engrossed in drinking spirituous liquor in company with his wife, and though he was rendered impure by addiction to singing, musical instruments and such like, 24 and also by intercourse with his wife ; deeming that the highsouled Muni when with her was detached from religious rites.
 The lord of yogis, although drinking spirituous liquor, incurred 25 no fault. Dwelling like Mátariśvan within the abodes of c'aṇḍálas, drinking strong drink he, skilled in yoga, the lord of yogís, attended by his wife, performed austerities, being meditated on by yogís who longed for deliverance from mundane existence.

CANTO XVIII.

Garga's speech.

Arjuna the son of Kṛita-vírya, on succeeding to his kingdom, resolves to rule worthily—His minister Garga advises him to propitiate the Muni Dattátreya—And narrates how, when the Daityas and Dánavas had conquered the gods, the gods by Vṛihaspati's counsel propitiated Dattátreya, who, being an incarnation of Viṣṇu, was enjoying himself with Lakshmi; and how, when the demons penetrated to Dattátreya's hermitage and seized Lakshmi, they were destroyed by Dattátreya.

The son spoke.

- 1 Once upon a time Arjuna, the son of Kṛita-vírya, when 2 Kṛita-vírya had departed to heaven, being invited by the 3 ministers and family priest and by the citizens to be in-4 augurated as king, spoke thus—

- 5 “ It is not I will wield regal sway, which surpasses hell, O
 6 ministers, if I leave that foolishly unaccomplished, for the sake
 7 of which taxes are levied. Merchants, giving the twelfth part 8 of their wares to the king, travel on the road protected from 9 robbers by the watchmen. And the herdsmen and husbandmen 10 giving the sixth part of the ghee, buttermilk and other pro-11 duce, enjoy the rest. If the merchants gave a larger portion 12 than that out of all their wares and other property, then 13 that would tend to the destruction of the sacrifices and pious 14 works of the extortionate king who took it. If people who 15 follow that and other livelihoods are protected by others, 16 hell is surely the lot of a king who takes the sixth part as his 17 revenue. This has been decreed by men of old as the perma-
 18 nent income of a king. When a king fails to afford protection 19 from thieves, that is the same as theft; and it would be sin in 20 a king. Therefore if, by performing austerities, he has gained

- 9 the coveted position of a yogí, he is the only king who possesses power to protect the earth. Therefore I indeed will be a weapon-bearer in the earth, worthy of honour, endowed with prosperity ; I will not make myself a participator in sin."

The son spoke.

- 10 Understanding that his resolve, standing among the ministers spoke the leading Muni, Garga by name, mighty in intellect, advanced in age.
- 11 " If thus thou desirest to act, rightly to govern the kingdom, then hearken to my speech and act, O royal scion !
- 12 Propitiate, O king, Dattátreya, the illustrious, who made his abode once in a bucket, who protects the three worlds,
- 13 who is busied in religious devotion, who is illustrious, who looks impartially everywhere, who is a portion of Vishnu, the
- 14 upholder of the world, incarnate on earth. By propitiating him the thousand-eyed Indra gained his abode, which had been seized by the evil-minded Daityas, and slew the sons of Diti."

Arjuna spoke.

- 15 " How did the gods propitiate majestic Dattátreya ? And how did Indra regain his godhead, of which he had been deprived by the Daityas ?"

Garga spoke.

- 16 " There was a very fierce contest between the gods and Dánavas. The lord of the Daityas was Jambha, and the leader
- 17 of the gods was Sac'í's spouse. And while they fought a heavenly year elapsed. Then the gods were worsted, the
- 18 Daityas were victorious. The gods led by Vipra-c'itti were vanquished by the Dánavas : they strove to flee, being dispirited at the victory of their enemies. Desirous of compass-
- 19 ing the slaughter of the army of Daityas, accompanied by the Bálikhilyas* and Rishis, they approached Vṛihaspati and
- 20 took counsel. Vṛihaspati said, ' Deign to gratify with your faith Dattátreya, Atri's high-souled son, the ascetic, who is
- 21 occupied in improper practices. He the boon-giver will grant

* Read 'Bala-khilyas' ? These are divine personages of the size of the thumb.

you a boon for the destruction of the Daityas; then, O gods, shall ye and your friends slay the Daityas and Dánavas.'

- 22 " Thus exhorted the gods then went to Dattátreya's hermitage, and they beheld the high-souled Muni, attended by 23 Lakshmi, hymned by Gandharvas, and engrossed in quaffing spirituous liquor. Approaching they expressed in words their salutations to him, which were the means of accomplishing 24 their objects. And the heaven-dwellers lauded him; they offered him food, viands, garlands and other presents; when he stood, they stood near; when he moved, they moved; when 25 he reposed on his seat, they ~~worshipped~~ worshipped him with heads down-bent. Dattátreya addressed the prostrate gods, 'What desire ye of me, that ye do me this obeisance?'

" The gods spoke.

- 26 ' The Dánavas, headed by Jambha, have attacked and seized upon the earth the atmosphere and the third world, O tiger-like Muni, and our shares of the sacrifices entirely. Employ 27 thou thy wit to their destruction and our deliverance, O sinless one! Through thy favour do we desire to regain the three worlds which they now possess.'

" Dattátreya spoke.

- 28 ' I am drinking strong drink, I have remnants of food in my mouth, nor have I subdued my senses. How is it, O gods, ye seek for victory over your enemies even from me?'

" The gods spoke.

- 29 ' Thou art sinless, O lord of the world; no stain hast thou, into whose heart, purified by the ablution of learning, has entered the light of knowledge.'

" Dattátreya spoke.

- 30 ' True is this, O gods! all learning have I, who am impartial in view: but by reason of association with this woman I 31 am now impure after eating. For commerce with women when continually pursued tends to depravity.'

" Thus addressed, the gods then spoke again.

“The gods spoke.

32 ‘This woman, O sinless bráhmaṇ! is the mother of the world; she is not depraved, even like the sun’s halo of rays, which touches the dvija and the c’aṇḍála alike.’

Garga spoke.

33 “Thus accosted by the gods, Dattátreya then with a smile spoke thus to all the thirty gods;—‘If this be your opinion, then summon all the Asuras to battle, O most virtuous gods, and bring them here before my view—delay ye not—in order that the glory of their strength may be consumed by the fire of my glance, and that they may all perish from my sight.’

36 “The valiant Daityas, summoned to battle by the gods in compliance with that his advice, advanced with fury against the troops of the gods. The gods being slaughtered by the Daityas were quickly demoralised by fear; they fled in a body, seeking protection, to Dattátreya’s hermitage. Even there the Daityas penetrated, driving forward the heaven-dwellers, and saw the high-souled mighty Dattátreya; and seated at his left side his wife, Lakshmi, loved by all the worlds, beauteous, her shape most graceful, her countenance like the moon, her eyes lustrous as the blue water-lily,* her hips large and breasts full, uttering melodious speech, adorned with every womanly virtue. Seeing her before them, the Daityas, seized with longing, could not bear the intense love with fortitude; and pined in mind to carry her off. Desisting from the gods, but desirous of seizing the lady, they were shattered in vigour, being bewitched by that sin. Then compact together they spoke—‘If only this jewel of womankind in the three worlds might be our prize, successful then should we all be—this is our engrossing thought. We are resolved therefore, let us all, foes of the gods, raise her up, place her in the palki, and bear her to our abode.’

45 “Thereupon possessed with longing and thus mutually exhorted, afflicted by love, the united Daityas and Dánavas raised up his virtuous wife, mounted her in the palki, and placing the palki on their heads set off for their own homes.

* Nilotpala, the blue water-lily, see note † page 29.

- 47 Thereon Dattátreya smiling spoke thus to the gods—' Bravo ! ye prosper ! Here is Lakshmi borne on the heads of the Daityas. She has passed beyond the seven stations, she will reach another, a new one.'

" The gods spoke.

- 48 ' Say, O lord of the world, in what stations has she her abode ; and what result of a man's does she bestow or destroy ?'

" Dattátreya spoke.

- 49 ' When stationed on the foot of men, Lakshmi bestows a habitation ; and when stationed on the thigh, clothing and 50 manifold wealth ; and when taking her position in the pudenda, a wife ; when resting in the bosom, she grants offspring ; when stationed in the heart, she fulfils the thoughts 51 of men. Lakshmi, is the best fortune of fortunate men.
When resting on the neck, she adorns the neck with loved relatives and wives, and close contact with those who are 52 absent. When abiding in the countenance, the sea-born god- dess bestows beauty fashioned according to her word, real 53 command also, and poetic fire. When mounted on the head, she forsakes the man and thence resorts to another abode. And here, mounted on their head, she will now desert these Dai- 54 tyas. Therefore seize your arms and slay these foes of the gods ; nor fear them greatly ; I have rendered them impotent ;
and through touching another's wife their merit is consumed, their might is broken.

Garga spoke.

- 55 " Thereupon those enemies of the gods, being slain by divers weapons and their heads being assailed by Lakshmi, perished—56 thus have we heard. And Lakshmi, flying up, reached the great Muni Dattátreya, being hymned by all the gods who 57 were filled with joy at the slaughter of the Daityas. Thereupon the gods, prostrating themselves before the wise Dattá-treya, gained as before the uppermost heaven, being freed from 58 affliction. Likewise do thou also, O king ! if thou wishest to obtain matchless sovereignty according to thy desire, straightway propitiate him."

CANTO XIX.

The Episode of Dattátreya.

King Arjuna, taking Garga's advice, propitiates Dattátreya, who grants him the boon that he should reign righteously, prosperously and gloriously—Arjuna is then installed in his kingdom, and his reign is described—The blessedness of worshipping Vishnu, who is Dattátreya, expounded—The story of Alarka is then begun.

The son spoke.

Having heard the Rishi speak thus, king Arjuna, Kṛitavírya's son, proceeded to Dattátreya's hermitage and worshipped him with faith; by kneading his feet and other services, and by offering honey and other delicacies, and by bringing garlands, sandal, and other perfumes, water, fruit &c.; also with preparations of rice, and by removing the Rishi's fragments of food. Pleased therewith the Muni addressed the king in the very same way, as he had formerly addressed the gods.

"Ever indeed am I an object of reproach for my enjoyment of spirituous liquor and other bodily pleasures, and an object of reproach for this enjoyment in that I have my wife here by my side.* Deign thou not thus to obstruct me who am unable to benefit thee; O conciliate one who is able."

Thus the Muni addressed him; and Arjuna Kártavírya, recalling that speech of Garga's, replied then, bowing before him.

Arjuna spoke.

"Why dost thou beguile me, my lord, resorting to thy illusory devices. Sinless thou art, and this bráhmaṇ lady is the path of all existence."

Thus invoked, the benign bráhmaṇ answered him, the illustrious Kártavírya, the subduer of the earth.

"Choose thou a boon; since thou hast declared my secret, I have felt thereby intense gratification in thee to-day, O king. And the men who shall worship me with perfumes, garlands and such like, with offerings also of meat and strong

- drink, and with sweetmeats accompanied with clarified butter, 11 —and who shall worship me and Lakshmi with songs also and the worship of bráhmans, and with lute, flute, conchs and other 12 gladsome musical instruments ;—to them I will give supreme gratification, children, wives, wealth and other blessings, and I 13 will ward off the violent blows of scorners. Do thou then choose the choice boon that thy mind desires : my face is very gracious to thee through thy declaration of my secret name.”

Kártavírya spoke.

- 14 “ If my lord thou art gracious, then grant me supreme prosperity, whereby I may protect my people and may not incur 15 iniquity. I desire to have knowledge in the customs of others, irresistibility in fight, and the dexterity of a thousand arms.
 16 May my paths be unimpeded on hill, in air, in water, and on land, and in all the hells ! And may my death come from a 17 superior man ! And let me have moreover a guide to the right path when I stray from the path : and may my guests* be worthy of praise in the imperishable bestowal of wealth !
 18 And let there be freedom from impoverishment in my country with repeated recollection of me ! May my faith in thee be ever in truth unwavering !”

Dattátreya spoke.

- 19 “ Thou shalt receive all those boons in the matters that thou hast specified ; and through my favour thou shalt become a universal monarch.”

Jaḍa spoke.

- 20 Thereon Arjuna prostrated himself before Dattátreya. And having convened his subjects, he duly received his inaugura-21 tion. Then he the Haihaya, established in his kingdom, having received supreme prosperity from Dattátreya, owning 22 exceeding power, made proclamation ;—‘ Henceforth whoever besides me shall lay hold of a weapon, I shall put him to death 23 as a robber or as one bent on injuring others.’ After this order had been issued, there was no man that bore arms in 24 that country, except that valiant tiger-warrior. He it was who was the guardian of the villages, and he the guardian of the cattle. He it was who was the guardian of the 25 fields and the protector of the dvijas. He also was the guardian of ascetics, and the guardian of caravans; the guardian of those who were sinking amid the fears of robbers, 26 rogues, fire, arms and so forth, as in the sea, and of those who were involved in other calamities; he was the destroyer of hostile warriors. He it was who was ever remembered as 27 the upholder of mankind. And there was exemption from impoverishment, while he ruled as king. He offered many 28 sacrifices, complete with gifts and fees. He also practised austerities. He performed exploits in battles.

Having seen his prosperity and exceeding honour, the Muni Angiras spoke.

29 “Assuredly kings will not follow in Kártavírya’s steps, either with sacrifices, alms-giving, or austerities, or with high exploits in battle.”

30 On the very day when the king received prosperity from 31 Dattátreya, he performed sacrifice to Dattátreya. And there all his subjects having seen the king’s supreme prosperity that day offered up sacrifices with devout attention.

32 Such is this magnanimity of the wise Dattátreya, who is Vishṇu, the guru of all things movable and immov-33 able, endless, high-souled. In the Puráṇas are narrated the manifestations of the bearer of the bow Śárṅga, who is endless, 34 inscrutable, the bearer of the conch discus and club. Whatever man ponders on his highest form, happy is he, and he 35 may soon pass over mundane existence. ‘Ho! I am ever in truth easy of reach by faith even to Vaishṇavas,’—how is it that a man should not have recourse to him, whose are these 36 very words? For the destruction of unrighteousness, and for the practice of righteousness, the god, who is without beginning and without end, preserves the stability of nature.

37 Moreover I tell thee of Alarka* also, the famous birth.

* Read Alarkam for Anarkam.

And thus has been related the union between the high-souled Rájārshi Alarka, who was faithful to his father, and Dattátreya.

The Story of Kuvalayáśva.

King Śatru-jit's son Rīta-dhvaja receives into intimate friendship two Nága princes in the guise of bráhmans—They live with him by day, and spend the nights in Rasátala—They extol him to their father, and relate his story as follows—Rīta-dhvaja sets out to succour the bráhman Gdāva against a Daitya Pátāla-ketu, with the aid of a wondrous horse named Kuvalaya.

Jaḍa spoke.

- 1 There was formerly a valorous king named Śatru-jit, in
- 2 whose sacrifices Indra was pleased by receiving the soma
- 3 juice. His son was a valiant destroyer of his foes; the peer
- 4 of Vṛihaspati, Indra and the Áśvins in intellect, prowess and
- 5 beauty. The king's son was continually surrounded by young
- 6 princes, who were his equals in age, intellect, virtue, prowess
- 7 and behaviour. He was sometimes resolved on investigating
- 8 the whole Śástra literature; at other times engrossed* with
- poetry, dialogue, singing and the drama. Moreover he enjoyed
- himself* both with gambling pastimes, and in the discipline of
- all kinds of weapons: he was intent on the study of elephants,
- horses, and chariots suitable for war.† The king's son en-
- joyed himself in company with the young princes, being
- absorbed in pleasure by day and night alike. But while they
- sported there, numbers of young bráhmans, young princes
- and young vaiśyas of the same age came to enjoy themselves
- affectionately.
- Now after a time two young Nágas, the sons of Áśvatara,‡

- 9 visited the surface of the earth from the Nága-world. Disguised in form as bráhmans, youthful, handsome, those two,
in company with the young princes and the other dvijas, 10 remained there linked in friendship, occupied with various amusements. And all those young princes and the young 11 bráhmans and vaiśyas, and those two young Nága princes engaged in bathing, kneading the limbs &c., adorned themselves with garments and perfumes, and occupied themselves 12 with the business of kings.* As day after day went by, the two young Nágas enjoyed themselves, being bound by affection 13 for the king's son. And the king's son received the highest pleasure from those two, by various amusements, and by jests, 14 conversation, &c. Apart from those two he neither ate, nor bathed, nor drank sweet drinks; he did not disport himself, nor take up his weapons to improve his accomplishments.
15 And those two, spending the night in Rasátala,† mainly occupied in sighing in the absence of that high-souled prince, visited him day after day.
- 16 “With whom do ye both, my sons, find supreme affection in the mortal-world?” thus inquired their father of both 17 those young Nágas. “Whilst I have seen you both many days here in Pátála, I ever behold you both with kindly countenances by day and night.”

Jada spoke.

- 18 Thus questioned by their father himself, the two illustrious sons of the Nága king falling prostrate, with hands reverently joined, replied.

The sons spoke.

- 19 “It is the son of Satru-jit, dear father, famed by name as Rita-dhvaja, shapely, upright in conduct, a hero, proud, kind being ravished by attendance on him, affection for him and pleasure with him, finds no delight in the Nága-world or the air-world.* By separation from him chill Pátála does not tend to warm us, dear father; through union with him the sun by day tends to gladden us."

The father spoke.

"He is the happy son of a holy father, whose excellencies such accomplished persons as ye are thus celebrate even in his absence. There are evil-dispositioned men learned in the Śástras; there are good-dispositioned men who are fools: but I esteem him, my sons, the happier who equally possesses knowledge of Śástras and a good disposition. A father has indeed a son in that son, whose friends always declare his friendly qualities, and whose enemies his valour, among the good. Perchance ye have preferred a request to him as a benefactor: he has done something to satisfy your mind, my children. Happy is he! The life of each high-born one has been well lived, when petitioners to him turn not away, and the petition of his friends is not powerless. In my house whatever gold and other metals, jewels, animals for riding, and seats there are, and whatever else imparts delight; that should be given him without hesitation. Fie on the life of that man, who, while failing to make a return to beneficent friends, believes that he really lives! The wise man who, cloud-like, showers benefits on his circle of friends and injury on his foes,—men wish him prosperity."

The sons spoke.

"What might any one do for that successful man, whose petitioners are all always honoured in his house with the grant of all their desires. The jewels that are in his house, whence can we have them in Pátála? And whence his animals for riding, his seats, and carriages, ornaments and clothing? The knowledge that he has, is found nowhere else. Even for the wise he is, dear father, the ablest remover of all doubts. One thing he has done, and that in our opinion was impossible of accomplishment, except by Brahmá, Vishṇu,* S'iva, and the other lords."†

The father spoke.

- 35 "Nevertheless I wish to hear what was his highest deed, whether it be impossible or possible of accomplishment. Is 36 anything impossible to the wise? Men who have determination attain to the position of the gods, lordship over the immortals, and the position of being worshipped by them, or 37 any other coveted arduous thing. There is nothing unknown, or inaccessible, or unobtainable, either in heaven or here, to strenuous men who have brought their mind, organs
38 and soul under control. An ant by walking travels thousands of yojanas; even Garuḍa, if he does not move, does not move 39 a single foot. Where is the surface of the earth, and where is the site of the polar star? Yet Dhruva the son of king 40 Uttána-páda, a denizen of the earth, reached it. Relate then how the good young prince did his feat, that ye may discharge your indebtedness, my sons!"

The sons spoke.

- 41 "The high-souled prince has told us this feat he did before, dear father; that he spent his youth, being noted for his good conduct.
42 "But formerly, dear father, a certain bráhmaṇ, the wise Gálava, bringing a magnificent steed, approached Satru-jit; and replied to the king—'A certain vile Daitya, an evil-doer, 43 O king, springing up, is destroying my hermitage without cause day and night, assuming the several forms of a lion, an elephant, and forest-roving beasts, and of other small-bodied
44 animals. When I am absorbed in profound meditation and deep contemplation, and intent on vows of silence, he raises 45 obstacles so that my mind wavers. Thou art able instantly to burn him with the fire of thy anger, but not we. Do I desire that austerities arduously acquired should be squan-

 48 demon, I heaved a sigh, being distressed by him, and exced-49 ingly depressed in mind. Thereupon this horse fell forth-50 with from the sky itself, and a voice from no corporeal being 51 exclaimed—hearken to it, O lord of men !—“ Unwearied the 52 noble steed can traverse the whole circle of the earth with 53 the sun. He has been produced for thee. Nor is his 54 course stayed in Pátála, in the sky or in water ; nor does he 55 succumb when moving in every direction, or even among the 56 mountains. Since he will traverse the whole circle of the 57 earth unwearied, he will become famed in the world under the name Kuvalaya. And the base sinful Dánava, who day and night torments thee, him shall slay, O bráhman, the king named Śatru-jit mounted on this horse ; and his son Rita-dhvaja getting this jewel of a steed shall attain to fame by means of him.”
 I now have met with thee : do thou, O king, ward off that obstrucer of my austerities, for a king is interested therein.
 Therefore I have told thee, O king, of this gem of a horse : do thou command thy son, so that righteousness may not perish.’
 “ At his word the king, righteous in soul, mounting his son Rita-dhvaja, who had performed a solemn ceremony, on that gem of a horse, sent him away then with Gálava. And the Muni, taking him, departed to his own hermitage-home.”

CANTO XXI.

Kuvalayáśva's marriage with Madálasá.

*Rita-dhvaja, called also Kuvalayáśva, wounds and pursues the Daitya Pátála-ketu.—In the pursuit he falls through a chasm into Pátála and reaches the city Purandara-pura—There he meets Madá-lasá, (daughter of the Gandharva king Visvávasu,) whom Pátála-ketu had carried off—He marries her with the help of her companion Kuṇḍalá, who then admonishes them on the blessings of marriage—
 He kills the Daityas who oppose him, and brings her home to his father, who praises and blesses him.*

The father spoke.

1 “ Relate my sons what the king's son did after he departed in company with Gálava ; your story is a surprising one.”

The sons spoke.

- 2 “The king’s son, residing in Gálava’s pleasant hermitage, subdued every obstacle to the reciters of the Veda.
- 3 “The base Dánava, infected with frenzy and arrogance, did not know the prince Kuvalayásva who was dwelling in Gála-4 va’s hermitage. Then assuming the form of a hog, he approached to outrage the bráhmaṇ Gálava, who was busied in 5 the evening service. On an out-cry by the Muni’s disciples, the king’s son hastily mounting the horse pursued the boar, 6 shooting arrows at him; and drawing his mighty bow, that was decorated with pretty designs, he struck the boar with an 7 arrow shaped like the half-moon. Wounded by the iron arrow, the wild beast, intent on its own speedy escape, set off 8 for the large forest dense with mountain trees. The horse followed him impetuously, swift as thought, being urged on by the king’s son who was obeying his father’s command.
- 9 After traversing thousands of yojanas with speed the quick-10 paced boar fell into an open chasm in the earth. Immediately after him, the king’s son also, on his horse, fell into the great 11 chasm, which was enveloped in crass darkness. Then the beast was lost to the sight of the king’s son therein; and he saw Pátála clearly there, but not that animal.
- 12 “Next he saw the city called Purandara-pura filled with hundreds of golden palaces, embellished with ramparts.
- 13 Entering it, he beheld no man there in the city, and as he wandered about he next saw there a woman hastening along.
- 14 He questioned her, the slender-limbed, ‘Why or on whose account are you proceeding?’ The noble lady replied not a 15 word and ascended into the palace. And the king’s son fastening up his horse on one side followed her indeed, being wide-eyed with amazement but fearless.
- 16 “Then he saw reclining on a very spacious couch, all made 17 of gold, a solitary maiden, full of love, as it were Rati;—her face like the clear moon, her eye-brows beautiful, large-hipped and full-breasted, scarlet-lipped,* slender-bodied, her eyes

18 like the blue water-lily, her nails red-tipped, black-complexioned, soft-skinned, her hands and feet copper-coloured, her thighs round and tapering, her teeth beautiful, her locks dark-blue fine and strong.

19 "On seeing her, lovely in every limb, as it were a creeper on the body of the god of Love, the king's son thought her the 20 deity of Rasátala. And the beauteous maiden immediately she saw him, with his dark blue wavy hair, and well-developed thighs shoulders and arms, deemed him the god of Love.
21 And she rose up, the noble lady, feeling an agitation in her mind. The slender one was overcome at once by bashfulness, 22 astonishment and dejection. 'Who is this that has come?
Is he a god, or a Yaksha, or a Gandharva, or a Nága, or a Vidyádharma, or a man accomplished in virtuous deeds and 23 love?' Thinking thus, and sighing often, she seated herself on the ground and then the fascinating-eyed lady swooned 24 away. The king's son, being also smitten by the arrow of 25 Love, revived her, saying 'Do not fear.' And then that maiden, whom the high-souled prince saw before, being dis-26 tressed took a fan and fanned her. After reviving her, the maiden, on being questioned by him, somewhat bashfully made 27 known the cause of her friend's fainting. And the noble lady related to the king's son in detail all the cause of the fainting, which occurred at the sight of him; and also her story as the other lady had told it.

"The lady spoke.

28 'The king of the Gandharvas is named Visvávasu, and this 29 is his beautiful-browed daughter called Madálasá. The son of Vajra-ketu, a fierce Dánava, the cleaver of his foes, was 30 named Pátála-ketu, a dweller within Pátála. He, raising an illusion of darkness, carried off this maiden when she was in her garden, unattended by me, and brought her here, the 31 villain. On the coming thirteenth day of the lunar fortnight, it was foretold, an Asura shall carry her off; but he does not deserve the lovely-limbed maiden, any more than a sudra 32 deserves to hear the Veda. And when the day was over,

 Surabhi said to the maiden who was ready to kill herself, 33 "This base Danava shall not get thee. He who shall pierce him, when he* reaches the world of mortals, with arrows, 34 that one, O noble lady, shall shortly be thy husband." And I am her prudent companion, Kundalá by name, the daughter of Vindhya-ván, and the wife of Pushkara-málin, O warrior.
 35 My husband having been killed by Sumbha, I am wandering, in fulfilment of a vow, from one place of pilgrimage to another 36 by a divine course, ready for another world. Patala-ketu, evil-souled, when he had assumed a wild boar's form was pierced by some one with an arrow, to secure the deliverance 37 of the Munis. And I having really followed him, have returned in haste: it is indeed true, the base Dánava has been smitten by some one.
 38 'And this lady fell into a swoon: hear what is the cause.
 The maiden is full of affection for thee even at first sight, O 39 pride-inspirer! who resembllest the sons of the Devas, distinguished for gracious speech and other virtues. And she is allotted as wife to the other, who has wounded the Dánava.
 40 For this reason she fell into the deep swoon, and all her life the slender-limbed maiden will indeed experience suffering.
 41 On thee is fixed her heart, O enamoured hero; and she will have no other† husband all her life long. Hence is her suffer-42 ing. Even so was Surabhi's prophecy. But I have come here, my lord, through affection for her, experiencing grief; for there is in truth no difference between one's friend's body and 43 one's own. If this lovely lady gets an approved hero for her husband, then assuredly may I engage in austerities with a 44 mind at ease. But who art thou? and wherefore hast thou come here, O high-minded hero? Art thou a Deva, or Daitya, 45 Gandharva, Nága, or Kinnara? For not here can men come, nor is human body such as thine. Declare thou that, even as I have spoken truthfully.'

* The Danava.

"Kūvalayásva spoke.

46 'What thou askest me, O lady skilled in holy law, who I am and why I have come, hear that, O lady bright of under-47 standing! I tell it thee from the beginning. Son of king Śatru-jit, I was despatched by my father, O beauteous one!
I reached Gálava's hermitage for the purpose of protecting 48 the Muni. And while I was affording protection to the Munis who observe the holy law, there came one, disguised in hog-49 like form, to hamper them. Pierced by me with an arrow, shaped like the half-moon, he rushed away with great speed: 50 mounted on horseback I pursued him. Suddenly I fell as in play into a chasm, and my horse also. Thus mounted on 51 horseback, wandering alone in darkness, I met with light, and saw thee lady; and when questioned, thou gavest me no 52 answer whatever. And following thee I entered this splendid palace. Thus I have related this truly. No Deva am I, 53 or Dánava, nor Nága, nor Gandharva or Kinnara, O sweet-smiling one. The Devas and the rest are all objects of veneration to me, O Kuṇḍalá. I am a man; thou must not be afraid of this at any time.'

The sons spoke.

54 "Gladdened thereby, the noble maiden, gazing dully through bashfulness on the noble countenance of her friend, uttered 55 no word. And again the friend, being gladdened, answered him, after saying to her, 'Truly has he related it, O maiden obedient to Surabhi's word!'

"Kuṇḍalá spoke.

56 'O hero, unvarnished truth is the word thou hast spoken; and her heart, perceiving it no otherwise, will gain com-57 posure. Surpassing beauty indeed clothes the moon, and light clothes the sun: prosperity attends the happy man, fortitude the resolute man, and patience the great man.
58 Thou indeed hast assuredly slain that wicked base Dánava:
how shall Surabhi, the mother of cattle, speak falsely?
59 Therefore happy verily is this maiden and blessed with good fortune, in gaining union with thee. Perform, O hero, the needful ceremony, celebrated according to rule.'

The sons spoke.

60 " 'I am ready to comply,' thus spoke the king's son to her,
O father. And she thought of him, the large-thighed* hero, 61 the chief of his race. And he taking fuel and kúsa grass, accepted her immediately, through affection for Madálasá and 62 through respect for Kuṇḍalá. Kindling fire, he sacrificed, being conversant with the mantras, and caused the blessed maiden to take part in the marriage ceremony. And as he 63 had come, he departed then, being a wise man, to his own hermitage-abode for the purpose of practising austerities.

" And the companion† said to the maiden 'My wishes are 64 fulfilled, O lovely-faced one. Now that I have seen thee, resplendent in beauty, wedded to this husband, I will perform 65 matchless austerities, with a mind at ease; and, having my sins washed away in the waters of the sacred pilgrimage-places, I shall not again become such as I am now."

" And then bending courteously she addressed the king's son, being desirous to go, yet shaken in her speech through love for her friend.

" Kuṇḍalá spoke.

66 'No counsel should be given even by men to such as thou art, O man of boundless understanding! and much less there-67 fore by women; hence I offer thee no counsel. But yet thou hast caused me also to confide in thee with a mind drawn by love towards this slender-waisted one: I will remind thee, O 68 foe-queller. Verily a husband must ever cherish and protect his wife. A wife is her husband's help-meet unto the com-

 70 wife and husband are controlled by each other, then all the three combine, religion, wealth and love. How without a wife 71 does a man attain to religion or wealth or love, my lord? In her the three are set. So also without a husband a wife is powerless to fulfil religion and the other duties. This three-72 fold group resides in wedded life. Men cannot perform the worship of the gods, pitris and dependants and of guests, with-73 out a wife, O prince! And riches, although acquired by men, although brought to their own home, waste away without a 74 wife, or even where a worthless wife dwells. But there is indeed no love for him without a wife,—this is clearly evident.
 By community of the wedded pair in their duties he may 75 attain to the three duties. A man satisfies the pitris with children; and guests with preparations of food; likewise the immortal gods with worship; as a man he satisfies a virtuous 76 wife. Moreover for a woman there is no religion, love, wealth or offspring without a husband. Hence this three-77 fold group rests upon wedded life. This have I spoken to you both; and I go as I have wished. Prosper thou with her in riches, children, happiness and long life.'

The sons spoke.

78 "Having spoken thus, she embraced her friend and bowed to the prince; and she departed by a divine course according to her own purpose.
 79 "And Śatru-jit's son, being desirous to depart from Pátāla, mounted her on the horse but was perceived by Danu's off-80 spring. Thereon they suddenly shouted out, 'She is being carried off, she is being carried far away, the pearl among 81 maidens, whom Pátāla-ketu brought from heaven. Besides he has won the might of the Dánavas, the iron-staff, the sword, the club, the spear, the bow, together with Pátāla-ketu.' 82 'Stand, stand!' thus exclaiming, the Dánava chiefs then 83 rained* a shower of arrows and spears on the king's son. And Śatru-jit's son, excelling in valour, split their weapons with 84 a multitude of arrows, laughing as if in sport. In a moment the surface of Pátála was covered with the swords, lances, spears and arrows, which were split by the multitudes of 85 Rita-dhvaja's arrows. Then taking up Tvasht̥ri's weapon he hurled it against the Dánavas; thereby all those Dánavas 86 together with Pátála-ketu were turned into heaps of bones bursting with the excessive heat from blazing rings of fire, just as the oceans were burnt up when the fire of Kapila fell on them.

87 "Then the prince, seated on horseback, after slaying the chiefs of the Asuras, came to his father's city with that pearl 88 of women; and prostrating himself he recounted everything to his father, both the visit to Pátála, and the meeting 89 with Kuṇḍalá, and the meeting with Madálasá, and the conflict with the Dánavas, and their slaughter with the weapon, and the return.

90 "His father, having thus heard the exploits of his graceful-minded son, was both filled with affection and embracing his 91 son spoke thus—'I have been delivered by thee, O son, worthy, magnanimous, who hast saved from their fears the 92 Munis who follow true religion. The fame handed down by my ancestors has been further augmented by me: thou, O 93 son, mighty in valour, hast multiplied it. Now he, who does not diminish the glory, wealth or heroism which his father 94 has acquired, is known as an ordinary man. But whoever strikes out by his own might fresh heroism still, exceeding his 95 father's heroism, the wise call him great among men. Whoever lessens the wealth and heroism and glory acquired by 96 his father, the wise call him base among men. I then had accomplished even as thou hast the bráhmaṇ's deliverance.
And the visit to Pátála that thou madest, and the destruction 97 of the Asuras that thou didst effect, even this, my child, is in excess, hence thou art great among men. Therefore thou 98 art fortunate, my boy. I indeed in getting thee, such a son as this, excelling in virtues, am to be praised even by righteous men. That man does not, I hold, gain the affec-99 tion of adopted sons, who does not surpass his son in wisdom, liberality and valour. Fie on the birth of him who 100 is known in the world through his father! He who attains fame through a son, his birth is the birth of a nobly born man.

 The fortunate man is known by reason of himself; the 101 ordinary man by reason of his father and grandfather; the base man attains distinction through his mother's relations and his mother. Therefore, my son, prosper thou in riches and 102 heroism and in happiness. And never let this daughter of the Gandharva be parted from thee.'

"Thus he was addressed by his father kindly again and 103 again in various sort; and after an embrace he was permitted to depart with his wife to his own residence. He lived there 104 joyfully in the society of his wife in his father's city, and also elsewhere in gardens, woods, and mountain-tops. And she,
 the lovely, the beautiful-waisted, having prostrated herself before the feet of her parents-in-law, thereafter morning by morning enjoyed herself in companionship with him."

CANTO XXII.

The story of Kuvalayášva (continued): Madálasá's death.

Pátála-ketu's brother Tála-ketu, in the guise of a Muni dwelling on the bank of the Yamuná, induces Kuvalayášva to guard his hermitage, on the pretext that he had certain ceremonies to perform in the water—Disappearing within the water he goes to the palace and reports that Kuvalayášva had died in battle with the Daityas—Madálasá dies through grief, and the king and queen utter their lamentations, and perform the prince's obsequies—Tála-ketu then returns to the hermitage and releases the prince.

The sons spoke.

1 "Many days afterwards the king again addressed his son,
 'Mounting this horse go quickly to rescue the bráhmans, 2 and patrol the earth, morning by morning, day by day, for the bráhmans' freedom from molestation must always be 3 sought after. There are evil-behaved Dánavas in hundreds, born in wickedness; do thou so act that the Munis may ex-

4 perience no obstacle from them.' Then the king's son did as he was directed by his father. After traversing the whole 5 earth, the king's son did obeisance to his father's feet in the forenoon, as each day came round; and then during the rest of the day he enjoyed himself with her, the slenderwaisted one.

6 "One day, however, while moving about, he saw Pátála-ketu's younger brother Tála-ketu, who had fixed his hermitage 7 on the bank of the Yamuná. The wily Dánava had assumed a Muni's shape. Bearing the previous enmity in mind, he 8 accosted the king's son--'O royal prince! I accost thee, do thou then accomplish my request if thou art willing: nor must thou refuse my petition, thou that art true to thy promise!
 9 I will offer a sacrifice to Dharma, and the oblations also must be made. The funeral piles must be put up there, since 10 they have not yet ascended into the air. Hence give me,
 O hero! this thy own ornament that is about thy neck 11 for gold, and guard thou my hermitage, until I praise within the water the god Varuna, the lord of marine animals, with the mantras prescribed by the Vedas for Varuna's 12 worship, which cause creatures to thrive, and in haste return.' To him as he spoke thus the prince did obeisance 13 and then gave his neck-ornament, and replied to him, 'Go sir! with a mind at ease; I will stay in this very spot near thy hermitage according to thy command, Sir! until thy 14 coming again. No man shall cause thee molestation here while I stay. And do thou in perfect confidence, without hurry, O bráhmaṇ, accomplish thy purpose.'

15 "Being thus addressed by him, he then plunged into the water in the river, while the prince guarded the other's magic-16 raised hermitage. And Tála-ketu went from that river to the prince's town, and spoke thus in the presence of Madálasá and other persons.

"Tála-ketu spoke.

17 'The hero, Kuvalayáśva, while guarding the ascetics close to my hermitage, fighting with a certain wicked Daitya

18 and striking down the bráhmans' foes in the conflict with all his might, was pierced in the breast with a spear by the 19 wicked Daitya who resorted to magic. While dying he gave me this neck-ornament; and súdra ascetics gave him 20 to the fire in the wood. And the frightened horse which uttered distressed neighings, with tearful eyes, was led off 21 by that cruel Dánava. This beheld I, malicious, evil-doer.
 Whatever should forthwith be done in this matter, let it be 22 done without delay. And take this neck-ornament as a consolation to your hearts, for we ascetics may not have anything to do with gold.'

The sons spoke.

23 "Having so spoken, he left it on the ground and departed as he had come. And those people afflicted with grief, fell 24 down, ill with fainting. Immediately recovering consciousness all those royal handmaids, and the queens and the king 25 lamented sorely distressed. But Madálasá seeing that his neck-ornament, and hearing that her husband was slain, quickly yielded up her dear life.

26 "Thereon a great cry arose in the houses of the citizens, 27 even as there was in the king's own house. And the king beholding Madálasá bereft of her husband and dead, made answer to all the people, having recovered his composure 28 after due reflection. 'Ye should not weep, nor I, I perceive, when one considers the fleetingness of even all relations.
 29 Why do I bewail my son? Why do I bewail my daughter-in-law? I think after due reflection, that neither should be 30 bewailed, since events happen as they are fated. Why should my son, who in obedience to me has met death when engaged in guarding the dvijas according to my command, 31 be bewailed by the intelligent? Assuredly if my son has quitted his body on account of those dvijas, will not that body, 32 to which he resorts, cause him to rise higher? And how is it possible that this high-born lady, thus faithful to her husband, should be bewailed? For women have no deity besides a hus-33 band. For she would have to be thus bewailed by us, and her relatives, and other compassionate persons, if she were 34 separated from her husband. But this noble lady, who on hearing of the death of her husband has immediately follow-35 ed her husband, should not for this reason be bewailed by the wise. Those women should be bewailed, who are separated from their husbands; those should not be bewailed who have died with them: but this grateful wife has not expe-36 rienced separation from her husband. Verily what woman in both the worlds would think her husband human, who gives her all happinesses both in this world and the next?

 37 Neither should he be bewailed, nor yet this lady, nor I, nor his mother. We were all rescued by him who resigns his life 38 for the sake of the bráhmans. For my high-souled son, by relinquishing his body which was half consumed, has freed himself from his debt to the bráhmans, to me, to religion.
 39 Though losing his life in war, he did not surrender his mother's honour, the spotless fame of my family, or his own heroism.'

40 "Then Kuvalayásva's mother, having heard of her son's death, looked upon her husband and, immediately after her husband, spoke similarly.

"The mother spoke.

41 'Not such gratification did my mother or my sister get,
 O king! as I have felt in hearing that my son has been slain 42 while protecting the Muni. Those who die, sighing, in great distress, afflicted with illness, while their relatives lament,—their mother has brought forth children in vain.
 43 Those who, while fearlessly fighting in battle to guard cattle and dvijas, perish crushed with arrows, they indeed are 44 really men in the world. He who turns not his back on sup-pliants, friends, and enemies, in him his father has a real 45 son, and in him his mother has given birth to a hero. A woman's pain of conception reacues, I think, its success at the time when her son either vanquishes his foes or is slain in battle.'

The sons spoke.

46 "Then the king bestowed the funeral obsequies on his son and daughter: and having gone forth bathed and offered the water to his son.

47 "And Tāla-ketu also, having issued from the Yamuná's water, spoke this honied speech respectfully to the king's 48 son. 'Depart, O prince; thou hast caused me to be successful. While thou hast remained stationary here, the long 49 wished-for business, and the sacrificial acts to Varuṇa the high-souled lord of the ocean, all that I have completed, as I had desired.'

50 "The king's son did him reverence and departed to his father's city, mounting on that steed which sped along like Garuḍa and the wind."

CANTO XXIII.

Kuvalayáśva's visit to Pátála.

Kuvalayáśva, returning home, learnt what had happened—He mourns his loss, and shunning women lives a cheerful life—The Nága king Áśvatara, hearing this story, engages in austerities and extols Sarasvatí—Sarasvatí, propitiated by him, restores him his companion Kambala, and gives them both perfect skill in poetry and music—Both propitiate S'iva, who at their request gives Áśvatara Madálasá as his daughter, restored to life as before—At Áśvatara's suggestion, his sons invite Kuvalayáśva to their palace in Pátála and introduce him to their father—Áśvatara asks Kuvalayáśva to relate his story.

The sons spoke.

1 The king's son reaching then his own city in haste, desirous to salute his parents' feet respectfully, and eager to see Madá-2 lasá, beheld some people of the city downcast, with joyless countenances, and then again astonished with joyful faces: 3 and other people with wide-open eyes, exclaiming "Hurrah!
hurrah!" embracing one another, filled with the utmost 4 curious interest. "Long mayest thou live O most fortunate prince! Thy adversaries are slain; gladden thy parents' mind and ours also, which is relieved of anxiety.

5 Surrounded before and behind by the citizens who were crying out thus, his joy forthwith aroused, he entered his

6 father's palace. And his father and mother and other rela-7 tions embraced him, and then invoked on him auspicious bless-8 ings, saying "Long mayest thou live!" Thereupon having 9 done obeisance, surprised at what this might mean, he ques-10 tioned his father; and he duly explained it to him.

11 On hearing that his wife Madálasá, the darling of his heart, 12 was dead, and seeing his parents before him, he fell into the 13 midst of a sea of shame and grief. He thought, "The maiden, 14 on hearing I was dead, gave up life, the virtuous one: fie on 15 me harsh-minded that I am! Malignant am I, worthless am 16 I, that I live most pitiless, when deprived of that deer-eyed 17 one who encountered death for my sake!" Again he thought, 18 having firmly composed his mind, banishing hastily the rising 19 distraction, and breathing hard outwards and inwards, feeling 20 undone.

21 "If I abandon life because she has died on my account, 22 what benefit shall I confer on her? Yet this would be praise-
 23 worthy in women's opinion. Or if being downcast I weep, 24 repeatedly exclaiming 'ah! my beloved,' still this would not 25 be praiseworthy in us; for we are men assuredly. Frigid with 26 grief, downcast, ungarlanded, uncleansed, I shall then become 27 an object of contumely to my adversaries. I must cut off my 28 enemies, and obey the king, my father. And how then can I 29 resign my life which is dependant on him? But here, I con-30 sider, I must renounce pleasure with woman, and yet that 31 renunciation does not tend to benefit the slender-limbed one.
 32 Nevertheless in every way I must practise harmlessness, which 33 works neither benefit nor injury. This is little for me to do 34 on her account who resigned her life on mine."

The sons spoke.

18 Having thus resolved, Rita-dhvaja then performed the 19 ceremony of offering water, and immediately afterwards per-20 formed the obsequies; and he spoke again.

Rita-dhvaja spoke.

19 "If she, Madálasá, the slender-limbed, were not my wife, I 20 would not have another companion in this life. Besides 21 that fawn-eyed daughter of the Gandharva, I will not love

21 any woman—so have I spoken in truth. Having given up that wife, who observed true religion, whose gait was like the elephant's, I will not assent to any woman—this have I declared in truth.

The sons spoke.

22 And having renounced, dear father, all the delights of woman, bereft of her, he continued to sport in company with his peers, his equals in age, in the perfection of his good dis-23 position. This was his supreme deed, dear father. Who is able to do that which is exceedingly difficult of accomplishment by the gods, how much more so by others ?

Jaḍa spoke.

24 Having heard their speech, their father became dissatisfied ; and after reflecting the Nága king addressed his two sons, as if in ridicule.

The Nága king Áśvatara spoke.

25 "If men, deeming a thing impossible, will put forth no effort 26 in the deed, from the loss of exertion there ensues loss. Let a man undertake a deed, without squandering his own manhood ; the accomplishment of a deed depends on fate and on 27 manhood. Therefore I will so strive, my sons, henceforth—let me so practise austerities diligently,—that this may in time be accomplished."

Jaḍa spoke.

28 Having spoken thus, the Nága king went to Plakshávatara-raṇa,* the place of pilgrimage on the Himavat mountain, and 29 practised most arduous austerities. And then he praised the goddess Sarasvatí there with his invocations, fixing his mind on her, restricting his food, performing the three prescribed ablutions.†

Áśvatara spoke.

30 "Desirous of propitiating the resplendent goddess Jagad-dhátrí Sarasvatí, who is sprung from Brahmá, I will praise 31 her, bowing my head before her. Good and bad, O goddess,

Jada spoke.

- 48 Thereupon, being praised thus, the goddess Sarasvatī, who is Vishnu’s tongue, answered the high-souled Nāga Aśvatara.

Sarasvatī spoke:

- 49 “I grant thee a boon, O Nāga king, brother of Kambala; speak therefore: I will give thee what is revolving in thy mind.”

Aśvatara spoke.

- 50 “Give thou me, O goddess, Kambala indeed my former companion, and bestow on us both a conversance with all sounds.”

Sarasvatī spoke.

- 51 “The seven musical notes,* the seven modes in the musical scale,† O most noble Nāga! the seven songs also,‡ and the

* Svara, a “musical note.” There are 7 svaras, viz., śaḍja, riṣabha, gāndhāra, madhyama, pañcāma, dhaivata, and nishāda; and they are designated by their initial sounds, sa, ri, ga, ma, pa, dha, and ni: but the arrangement varies, and Prof. Monier-Williams in his dictionary places nishāda first, śaḍja fourth, and pañcāma seventh. Those 7 svaras compose the “musical scale,” grāma (Beng. saptak). The interval between each consecutive pair of notes is divided into several ‘lesser notes’ called śruti; thus there are 4 between sa and ri, 3 between ri and ga, 2 between ga and ma, 4 between ma and pa, 4 between pa and dha, 3 between dha and ni, and 2 between ni and sa in the higher octave—that is 22 śrutis in all. The svaras correspond to the ‘natural notes,’ and the śrutis to the ‘sharps and flats’ in European music. (Raja Sourindro Mohun Tagore’s Sangīta-sāra-saṅgraha, pp. 22—24, where the names of the śrutis are given; and his Victoria-gīti-mālā in Bengali, Introduction.)

† Grāma-rāga. I do not find this in the dictionary. Does it mean the “series of musical scales” that can be formed by taking each of the notes (svara) as the ‘key’ note? Thus there would be 7 scales, as there are 7 notes. But Raja S. M. Tagore calls this svara-grām (Beng.), and he says that only 3 such scales were common in early times, viz., those with śaḍja, gāndhāra and madhyama as key notes (Victoria-gīti-mālā, Introduction, p. 2).

‡ Gītaka. I do not know what the seven songs are.

52 same number of modulations,* so also the forty-nine musical times,† and the three octaves‡—all these thou and also Kam-53 bala shalt sing, O sinless one! Thou shalt know more yet through my favour, O Nāga king. I have given thee the four kinds of quater-verse,§ the three sorts of musical tunes,|| the 54 three kinds of musical movement,¶ also the three pauses in

* Múrc'haná. This seems to be "running up or down the scale;" it is defined thus—

Kramāt svarānām saptdādam ārohaś c'āvarohanam
Múrc'hanetyuc'yate grāma-traye tāh sapta sapta c'a.

As there are 7 scales obtained by taking any of the 7 notes as the key note, there would be 7 múrc'hanás; and this applies to the 3 octaves (grāma-traya), so that there are 21 múrc'hanás altogether (Sangita-sāra-sangraha, p. 30, where their names are given). But in his Bengali Treatise Raja S. M. Tagore explains múrc'haná to be the "passing uninterruptedly from one note (svara) to another, and in the process sounding all the intermediate notes and lesser notes (s'ruti)." This corresponds to 'slurring.' With this meaning the number of possible múrc'hanás is almost indefinite.

† Tāla, the "division of time in music." It consists of three things, kāla, the duration of time, kriyā, the clapping of the hands (accentuation), and māna, the interval between the clappings. It seems to correspond to the 'bar' and the 'kinds of time' in European music. European music has only 3 kinds of time, Common, Triple and Compound, each with a few subdivisions; but in Hindu music there is the utmost variety. I do not know what the 49 tālas here meant are; but Raja S. M. Tagore gives two lists of des't-tālas, one enumerating 120, and the other 72.

‡ Grāma, the "octave." Hindu music uses only three octaves, which are called nimna (Beng. udará), madhya (mudará) and uc'c'a (tára).

§ Pada.

|| Tāla. This seems to refer to the classification of the tālas, viz., śuddha, śālan.ga (or śālan.ka or śāлага, v. r.) and san-kr̥ṇa, (Raja S. M. Tagore's Sangita-sāra-sangraha, p. 201); but this classification is also applied to the rāgas (see his Victoria-gīti-mālā, Introduction, p. 9.). The śuddha are explained to be the famous kinds complete in themselves; the śālanga are those produced by a mixture of two simple ones; and the san-kr̥ṇa those produced by a mixture of many simple ones.

¶ Laya, "musical speed." The 3 kinds are druta, quick, madhya, mean, and vilambita, slow; the druta being twice as fast as the madhya, and the madhya twice as fast as the vilambita. Laya does not take account of prosodial time. This corresponds to "the movement" in European music.

music,* and the four-fold todya.† This thou shalt know through 55 my favour O Nága king, and what lies further. What is contained within this and dependant thereon, measured in vowels and consonants—all that I have given to thee and 56 Kambala. I have not so given it to any other on the earth or in Pátála, O Nága: and ye shall be the teachers of all this in Pátála and in heaven and on earth also, ye two Nágas !”

Jāḍa spoke.

57 Having spoken thus, the lotus-eyed goddess Sarasvatí, the tongue of all, then disappeared at once from the Nága's view.
 58 And then, as it all happened to those two Nágas, there was begotten in both the fullest knowledge in versification, musical time, musical notes, &c.
 59 Then the two Nágas, observing musical time on the lute-strings, being desirous of propitiating with seven songs the 60 lord who dwells on the peaks of Kailása and Himálaya, the god Śiva, who destroyed Kāma's body, both exerted 61 themselves to the utmost, with voice and tone combined, being assiduous morning, night, noon and the two twilights. The bull-bannered god, being long praised by them both, was 62 gratified with their song, and said to both, “Choose ye a boon.” Thereon Aśvatara with his brother doing reverence 63 made request to Śiva, the blue-throated, Umá's lord,—
 “If thou, O adorable three-eyed god of the gods, art pleased 64 with us, then grant us this boon according to our desire ;

* Yati, “a break in the laya” (laya-pravṛtti-niyama), ‘a rest’ in music. The 3 kinds are saṁá, sroto-gatá, and go-puc'c'há. The saṁá may occur at the beginning, in the middle, or at the end of the laya, and in each of the 3 kinds of laya. The sroto-gatá occurs apparently when the time quickens (accelerando) after the rest, that is when the laya changes from vilambita to madhya, or from madhya to druta, or from vilambita or madhya to druta. The go-puc'c'há occurs apparently when the time becomes slower (rallentando, ritardando) after the rest, that is when the laya changes from druta to madhya, or from madhya to vilambita.

† Todya. I do not find this word in the dictionary. Does it mean ‘drum-music?’

let Kuvalayásva's deceased wife, Madálasá, O god, at once 65 become my daughter of the same age as when she died, remembering her life as before, endowed with the selfsame beauty, as a devotee, and the mother of Yoga; let her be born in my house, O S'iva."

S'iva spoke.

66 "As thou hast spoken, most noble Nága, it shall all happen through my favour, in very truth. Hearken also to this, O 67 Nága. But when the śráddha is reached, thou shouldst eat the middle piṇḍa by thyself, most noble Nága, being pure, and 68 having thy mind subdued; and then, when that is eaten, the happy lady shall rise out of thy middle hood, the same in 69 form as when she died. And having pondered on this thy desire, do thou perform the libation to the pitris; immediate-70 ly she, the fine-browed, the auspicious, shall rise out of thy breathing middle hood, the same in form as when she died."

71 Having heard this, both then adored S'iva, and returned, full of contentment, to Rasátala. And so the Nága, Kam-72 bala's younger brother, performed the śráddha, and also duly ate the middle piṇḍa; and, while he pondered on that 73 his desire, the slender-waisted lady was produced* at once, in the selfsame form, out of his breathing middle hood.
 74 And the Nága told that to no one: he kept her, the lovely-teethed one, concealed by his women in the inner apartments.

75 And the two sons of the Nága king pursuing pleasure day by day, played† with Ṛita-dhvaja like the immortals. But 76 one day the Nága king, being intoxicated, spoke to his sons, "Why indeed do ye not do as I told you before? The king's 77 son is your benefactor in my opinion; why do ye not confer a benefit on him, the pride-inspirer? Thereupon they both, being thus admonished by their kindly-affectioned father, 78 went to their friend's city, and enjoyed themselves with the wise prince. Then both, after having held some other 79 talk with Kuvalayásva, invited him respectfully to come to their house. The king's son said to them, "Is not this your 81 riches or jewels, let that be given you, O young dvijas, if ye have friendly regard for me. Am I cheated by such a cruel fate as 82 this, that ye do not evince any sense of ownership in my house? If ye must do me kindness, if I am to receive favour 83 from you, then consider my wealth and home as your own.

 84 Whatever is yours is mine, mine is your own. Believe ye this in truth. My life has gone out into you. Never again must ye speak of separate propeity, O virtuous dvijas: 85 since ye are devoted to my favour, I have adjured you by my heart affectionately."

Thereupon both the young Nágas, their faces beaming with 86 affection, replied to the king's son, somewhat feigning anger.
 "Rita-dhvaja, without doubt, we must not think in our mind 87 in this matter otherwise than thou hast now spoken. But our high-souled father has himself repeatedly said this—"I 88 wish to see that Kuvalayásva.'" Thereon Kuvalayásva rising from his seat of honour, prostrated himself on the ground, saying, "Be it as your dear father says."

Kuvalayásva spoke.

89 "Happy am I! Most rich in merit am I! Who else is there like me, that your father shews an earnest mind to see me?
 90 Rise ye therefore, let us go: not even for a moment do I wish to transgress his command here. I swear by his feet!"

Jaḍa spoke.

91 Having spoken thus the king's son went with them both,
 and issuing from the city reached the holy river Gomatī.
 92 They passed through it, the Nága princes and the king's son:
 and the king's son thought their home lay on the other side 93 of the river. And drawing him thence, they led the prince to Pátála; and in Pátála he beheld them both as young 94 Nágas, lustrous* with the gems in their hoods, displaying the svastika marks. Gazing with eyes wide open with amazement at them both, who were most handsomely formed,

* Read kritoddyotan for kṛitoddyotan.

95 and smiling he spoke kindly—"Bravo! most noble dvijas!"
 96 And they told him of their father, the Nága king, Áśvatara by name, peaceful, worthy of honour by the heaven-dwellers.
 97 Then the king's son saw charming Pátála; which was adorned with Nágas, young adult and old, and also with 98 Nága maidens, who were playing here and there, and who wore beautiful ear-rings and necklaces, as the sky is decked with stars; and elsewhere resounding with drums, small drums, 99 and musical instruments, mingled with the strains of singing, which kept time with the sounds of lutes and pipes; filled 100 with hundreds of charming houses. Gazing about on Pátála Śatru-jit's son the foe-queller, walked about accompanied by those two Nágas his friends.
 101 Then they all entered the Nága king's residence, and they saw the high-souled Nága king seated, clad in heavenly garlands and raiment, adorned with gems and ear-rings, re-102 splendent with superb pearl-necklaces, decorated with armlets, blessed with good fortune, on a throne all of gold, the frame of 103 which was overlaid with a multitude of gems coral and lapis lazuli.

They showed the king to him saying "That is our father;" 104 and they introduced him to their father, saying "This is the hero Kuvalayáśva." Then Rīta-dhvaja bowed at the feet of 105 the Nága king. Raising him up by force, the Nága king embraced him warmly, and kissing him on the head he 106 said "Long mayest thou live, and destroying all thy foes, be submissive to thy father. My son thy virtues have been 107 mentioned even in thy absence, happy that thou art; thy rare virtues have been reported to me by my two sons.
 108 Mayest thou indeed prosper thereby in mind, speech, body and behaviour: the life of a virtuous man is praise-worthy;
 a worthless man although alive is dead. A virtuous man, while accomplishing his own good, brings complete satisfac-109 tion to his parents, anguish into the hearts of his enemies, and confidence among the populace. The gods, the pitṛis, 110 bráhmans, friends, suppliants, the maimed and others, and his relatives also desire a long life for the virtuous man.

The life of virtuous men, who eschew abuse, who are compassionate towards those in trouble, who are the refuge of those in calamity, abounds in good fruit."

Jaḍa spoke.

- 111 Having spoken thus to that hero, the Nāga next addressed his two sons thus, being desirous to do honour to Kuva-112 layáśva. "When we have finished our ablutions and all the other proceedings in due order, when we have drunk wine and enjoyed other pleasures, when we have feasted up to our 113 desire, we shall then with joyful minds spend a short time with Kuvalayáśva in hearing the story of the success of 114 his heart's festival." And atru-jit's son assented in silence to that speech. Accordingly the lofty-minded king of the Nāgas did as he had proposed.
- 115 The great king of the Nāgas, true to his word, assembling with his own sons and the king's son, filled with joy, feasted on foods and wines, up to fitting bounds, self-possessed and enjoying pleasure.

CANTO XXIV.

The Recovery of Madálasá.

The Nāga king Ásvatara asks Kuvalayáśva what gift he can confer on him—Kuvalayáśva replies he needs nothing, and is sufficiently gratified by the king's favour—The king urges him and at his sons' suggestion the prince asks to see Madálasá even in illusion—The king brings her in as an illusion, and afterwards restores her to Kuvalayáśva.

Jaḍa spoke.

- 1 His two sons and the king's son respectfully attended the 2 high souled king of the Nāgas, after he had banquetted. The high-souled Nāga manifested kindly regard towards his sons' 3 friend with suitable conversation, and said, "Declare, Sir, what pleasure I must do thee who hast entered my house:

- cast away hesitation towards me as a son would towards his father. Whether silver or gold, raiment, carriages, or seats, or whatever thou dost highly appreciate that is hard to be got—ask that of me.”

Kuvalayášva spoke.

- “Through thy favour, illustrious Sir! gold and other wealth are in my father's house; I have no need of any such thing at all now. While my father rules this earth for thousands of years and thou also rulest Pátála, my mind is not expectant in solicitation. They are both possessed of Svarga and are very rich in merit, who from their youth possess, in their father's lifetime, a mere particle* of wealth amidst his krores of wealth, friends equally-educated, and a body free from sickness. My father† holds the wealth; have I not youth? When wealth is wanting, men's minds become prone to petitions. When I have it in full measure, how shall my tongue make petition? Those who need not think whether they have any riches at home or not, happy are they, sheltered in the shadow of the tree of their father's arm. But those, who even from childhood losing their father have had the care of a family, they have in my opinion, through the ruin of their taste for happiness, been tricked by the Creator. We therefore through thy favour always give willingly to supplicants the hoards of money, gems and other wealth left by our fathers. I have everything then here, since I have touched thy feet with my crest-jewel, since I have touched thy body.”

Jaḍa spoke.

- Being answered thus in a modest speech, the noble Nága replied kindly to the young prince, the benefactor of his sons.

The Nága spoke.

- “If it be not thy mind to receive of me gems, gold or other gift; whatever else may please thy mind, mention thou it. I will give it thee.”

* Wealth as small as the point of a blade of grass.

† Read janitrá for janitá.

Kuvalayásva spoke.

16 “My lord, through thy favour, I whom thou dost ask have 17 everything at home: it has been gained especially through 18 sight of thee. And herein I am successful, and my life has 19 been rewarded, that I a mortal have embraced thy body who 20 art divine; that the dust of thy feet has found a seat on 21 my head. What indeed have I not gained thereby, O Nága 22 king? But if thou needs must give me the boon that I 23 desire, then let not the faculty of working righteousness 24 depart from my heart. Gold, gems, jewels and such like,
 25 carriages, houses, seats, women, food and drink, and children, 26 and tasteful garlands and ointments,—both these various 27 objects of desire, and also vocal and instrumental music and 28 whatever other music there be—all this I hold to be the fruit
 29 of the tree of good works. Therefore a man must start 30 from the root thereof; he must exert himself, while ruling his spirit; nothing in the world is hard of attainment to those who adhere to good works.”

Aśvatara spoke.

23 “So shall thy mind be, O wise man, relying on righteous-
 24 ness; and truly all this is the fruit of righteousness as thou 25 hast said. Nevertheless thou must certainly take, now that 26 thou hast entered my house, what thou thinkest hard to be 27 gained in the human world.”

Jada spoke.

25 Having heard this his speech, the young prince then 26 looked at the faces of the Nága king's sons. Thereupon both those heroes prostrating themselves told their father clearly all the young prince's thoughts.

The sons spoke.

27 “When this prince's beloved wife heard that he was slain, 28 she forsook her dear life, being deceived by a certain cruel, 29 bad-minded Dánava, who shewed his enmity. She was the 30 daughter of the Gandharva king; she was named Madálasá.
 Then he, mindful of the past, made this vow, dear father,
 ‘No other shall be my wife save Madálasá.’ This hero Ritadhvaja longs, dear father, to behold her, lovely-limbed : if this may be done, let it be done."

Aśvatara spoke.

- 31 "Such magical power as that belongs to one who is exempt from such gross elements. How can this be except as a dream or as an illusion proceeding from Sāmbhara ?"*

Jaḍa spoke.

- 32 Then S'atru-jit's son prostrated himself before the high-souled Nāga king and replied, being touched with affection 33 and modesty. "If thou show† me now, dear father, Madālasā even in illusion, I hold that thou hast done me the greatest favour."

Aśvatara spoke.

- 34 "Look thou here then, my son, if thou wouldst see the illusion. I must show thee favour ; a visitor at one's house, though a child, is master."

Jaḍa spoke.

- 35 The Nāga king led in Madālasā who was concealed in the house, and next he uttered some gibberish distinctly in order 36 to bewilder them. And then he showed the young prince the beauteous lady, saying, "Is she or is she not, O prince, thy wife Mādalasā ?"

Jaḍa spoke.

- 37 Then, seeing the slender one, he lost his reticence that very moment ; he moved towards her, uttering the word "Beloved !" And the Nāga Aśvatara hasting held him off.

Aśvatara spoke.

- 38 "It is illusion, my son ! touch her not ! I told thee so at first. The illusion quickly vanishes when touched or otherwise meddled with."
39 Thereupon he fell to the ground, overwhelmed by a faint ; and exclaiming "Ah Beloved !" he thought of his noble 40 wife. "Alas for the love of this king towards my steadfast mind, whereby I have been thus overthrown without the

- 41 weapons of foes. She was shown as an illusion, though it was clearly no illusion at all by reason of the action of air, water and fire, earth and ether."

Jada spoke.

- 42 Then the Nága reviving Kuvalayásva, related to him the whole story of her recovery from death and all else that had 43 happened. Thereat rejoicing he took again his loved one, and after doing obeisance to the Nága departed in great splendour, mounted on the horse, to his own city, having attained* the object of his thoughts.

CANTO XXV.

The story of Kuvalayásva and Madálasá (continued).

Kuvalayásva, returning home, lives in perfect happiness with Madá-lasá—He succeeds his father Satru-jit—A son is born to them, Vi-krán-ta—Madálasá prattles to the infant.

Jada spoke.

- 1 Reaching then his city he narrated the whole story fully to his parents, how he had regained his slender-limbed one who 2 had died. And the beautiful, slender-limbed lady bowed at the feet of her father and mother-in-law, and did honour as 3 before to her kindred with obeisance, embraces and such 4 greetings, according to propriety, and their ages. Then the citizens held a great festival there in the city.

- And Rita-dhvaja long enjoyed himself with his beautiful-5 waisted wife, both among mountain torrents, and on river sand-banks, and amid pleasant woods, and in groves. She also, longing to consume her merit by the delights of love, 6 enjoyed herself with him, her greatly-beloved, in pleasant places.

- 7 A long time afterwards the king Satru-jit, having ruled the earth worthily, underwent the law of Death. Then the citinoble in conduct and action.

While he duly protected his subjects as if they were his 9 own sons, Madālasā gave birth to her first-born son. The 10 father gave that clever child the name Vi-krānta. The retainers were pleased thereat and Madālasā laughed. Madālasā spoke to her infant boy in the way of prattle,* as he lay on his back crying not unmelodiously.

11 "Perfect art thou, darling, nor has thy name been given thee now in mere fancy. This very body of thine is composed of the five elements, not indeed for this reason dost thou cry 12 —wherefore then? Nor indeed does your highness (this title is thy birth-right) cry because thou art a king's son. Doubtful are the various good and bad qualities, that are connected 13 with the elements, in all thy organs. Since in a man here the elements, extremely weak, increase by the means of the elements, namely, by means of the food and water and other nutriments given, of what hast thou no gain, of what hast 14 thou no loss? Do not grow infatuated at this thy bodice which is already decaying, and in that thy body; thy body is given thee by good and bad deeds; the bodice is fastened on thee by persons infatuated with pride and other pas- 15 sions. Do thou greatly esteem each aggregate of elements—some one aggregate as a dear father, some other as a child, some other as a mother, some other as a loved wife, some other 16 as thy own property, some other as not thy own. A man beguiled in mind thinks that evils tend to assuage evils, that enjoyments tend to happiness. Again the unwise man, greatly beguiled in mind, thinks that these very evils are pleasures.

CANTO XXVI.

The Education of his Sons.*

Two other sons are born, Subáhu and Satru-mardana—A fourth son is born whom Madálasá names Alarka—She criticizes these names—The king objects to her way of educating them, and wishes them to be brought up as kshatriyas—She prattles to Alarka.

Jada spoke.

- 1 Now the queen trained up that son, as he grew day by day,
- 2 to unselfish thought by talking and other means. As he regularly gained strength, as he gained his father's intelligence, even so he acquired knowledge of himself through his
- 3 mother's talk. So the youth, instructed by her from his birth, having understanding and being unselfish, did not turn his mind towards family life.
- 4 A second son was born to her. His father named him.
- 5 When he said "This is Su-báhu," Madálasá laughed. Him also when a child she spoke to with prattle and other talk the same as before, and thus he, having a good intellect, acquired knowledge from his childhood.
- 6 When the king named the third-born son Satru-mardana, she the beautiful-browed laughed again very long thereat.
- 7 The slender-limbed mother similarly instructed him also from childhood. Devoid of desire he performed ceremonies, but not anything beneficial.
- 8 Now the king, when desirous of naming the fourth son, saw Madálasá, well-behaved as she was, laughing slightly: the king, somewhat eagerly curious, spoke to her as she was laughing.

The king spoke.

- 9 "Tell me the cause of your laughter, at the very time when the name is being given. Vi-kránta, Su-báhu and the other 10 Śatru-mardana,—the names given by me are I think fine, suited to the kshatriya kindred, and indicative of heroism 11 and majesty. If these are not good, lady,—if you think this in your mind,—then do thou give a name to this my fourth son."

Madálasá spoke.

- 12 "I must obey thy command, Mahá-rájá, as thou tellest me; 13 so I will give a name to thy fourth son. 'Alarka'! Learned in religion he shall acquire fame in the world, and this thy youngest son shall have understanding." 14 On hearing that name given the son by the mother, the king, laughing at 'Alarka' as inappropriate, said—

The king spoke.

- 15 "This name that thou hast given to my son, beauteous lady,—why hast thou given such an inappropriate one? What is its meaning, O Madálasá?"

Madálasá spoke.

- 16 "This is my fancy, Mahá-rájá; I have given it as being practical. So do thou listen, O king, to the meaninglessness 17 of the names given by thee. Since wise men speak of a pervading soul; and 'kránti' is described as the course which passes 18 from one place to another place; since the soul is all-per- vading in that it is ubiquitous and does not move about;
therefore this appellation Vi-kránta, 'passed beyond,' appears 19 to me meaningless. The appellation Su-báhu, 'fine-armed,' given to thy second son, that too is meaningless because the 20 soul is incorporeal, O king. The name that thou hast given the third son, Ari-mardana, 'foe-crusher,' I think that too is 21 inappropriate; and listen to the reason as regards it. Since there is only one soul in all bodies, who then, O king, is regarded as its enemy in this world, or who as its friend?

22 Creatures are crushed by creatures; how can the incorpo-23 real be crushed? This fancy is meaningless because of the separate existence of anger and the other passions. If a bad name is fixed upon because of mutual dealing, why dost thou think there is no meaning in the name Alarka? ”*

Jada spoke.

24 Being thus excellently addressed by the queen, the king, having great understanding, assented to his loved wife who 25 spoke correctly. And the fine-browed lady spoke to that son, just as to the elder sons, what would arouse the intellect.
 26 The king said to her. “Why dost thou deal thus, O foolish one, with the temperament of my child, by giving him a mis-27 chievous education as thou didst before to my other sons. If thou shouldst do what pleases me, if my word should be ac-28 cepted, then restrain this son within the path of activity. So the path of action will not lead to utter destruction, O lady; and so the piṇḍa offering to the pitris will not cease, O virtuous 29 one. The pitris dwell in the Deva-loka, they are also born as brutes, they become men likewise, and they reside within the 30 class of elements. By offering the piṇḍa and water a man, busied in the ceremonies, ever nourishes them, O fine-browed 31 one, both the righteous and the unrighteous, those worn out with hunger, those harassed by thirst; he nourishes the gods likewise and guests. The gods, mankind, the pitris, departed 32 spirits, goblins, and guhyakas, birds, worms and insects live upon man indeed. Therefore, O slender-limbed, cause my son 33 to acquire thoroughly the whole duty of kshatriyas, as regards this life and life in the next world.”

The queen Madālasá, being thus admonished by her hus-34 band, apoke to her son Alarka, with prattling words.
 “Thrive my son! rejoice my husband’s mind with thy deeds, 35 in order to benefit friends and destroy enemies. Happy art thou, my son, who alone, with never an enemy, wilt long protect the earth: from protecting it mayest thou have full enjoyment of happiness, and from righteousness thou shalt bráhmans at the holy festivals! Mayest thou fulfil the longing among thy kinsmen! Mayest thou think kindly in thy heart for another! Mayest thou restrain thy mind from the wives 37 of others! Please continually the gods with numerous sacrifices, and the dvijas who resort to thee with wealth. And thou shalt long satisfy women with unparalleled affections, and 38 thy foes with battles, O hero! As a child gladden the mind of thy kinsmen; and as a boy the mind of thy teacher by observance of his commands; as a young man gladden the mind of women who are the ornament of high families; as an old 39 man the mind of the hermits in the forest. Exercising thy sovereignty mayest thou gladden thy friends! Guarding the good, mayest thou offer up sacrifices, darling! Destroying the wicked and thy enemies in battle, mayest thou meet thy death, my child, on behalf of cattle and bráhmans!"

CANTO XXVII.

The Education of the Sons (continued).

Madálasá instructs Alarka in a king's duties—Enforcing especially the necessity for self-control, prudence and maintenance of the laws.

Jaḍa spoke.

- 1 Now being talked to in this way by his mother every day, 2 the child Alarka grew in age and intelligence. Then this son of Rita-dhvaja, on reaching boyhood, received investiture with the sacred thread, and being intelligent did obeisance to 3 his mother and said, "What I ought to do now for happiness in this world and the next world, tell all that to me who am bowing respectfully before thee?"

Madálasá spoke.

- 4 "My child, a king inaugurated in his kingdom must in the first place conciliate his subjects, without obstructing his own 5 duty. Eschewing the seven vices, which are radically injurious, he must guard himself from his adversaries without de-

- 6 parting from good counsel. Just as a man meets destruction in eight ways from a fine-wheeled chariot, so undoubtedly does even a king without departing from good counsel.
- 7 And let him recognise the bad and good ministers through his enemies' faults; and he must strenuously trace out his
- 8 enemy's spies by spies. But a king must not confide in friends, acquaintances, or relatives; let a king trust even in
- 9 an unfriendly person, if so obliged by his affairs. A king must himself be conversant with the stationary, prosperous and deteriorating conditions of state policy, be familiar with the merits of the six measures of military policy,* and not be enslaved by desire.
- 10 "A king must first subdue himself, and his ministers, then his dependants, and afterwards his citizens; then let him,
- 11 fight against his enemies. But he who, without having indeed conquered these, desires to conquer his adversaries, he, with his own self unsubdued and with unsubdued ministers,†
- 12 is killed by his enemies' party. A king must therefore, my son, first conquer desire and the other passions; for when they are conquered, victory is his assuredly; vanquished by
- 13 them, a king perishes. Desire, and anger, and covetousness, intoxication and pride, joy also, and enemies—these in truth
- 14 tend to destroy kings. Let him restrain himself, recollecting how Pāṇḍu himself was killed when engrossed in love:
- 15 and how Anuhráda‡ killed his own son through anger; and how Aila§ was killed through covetousness; how Vena|| was killed by dvijas through intoxication: how Anáyus¶ son Bali
- 16 was killed through pride; Puranjaya through joy. Recollecting how, when these were conquered, high-souled Marutta vanquished all, let a king cast out these his own faults.

Madálasá's Exhortation.

Madálasá enunciates to Alarka the special duties of the four castes—and of the four periods of a bráhmaṇ's life—and the duties common to those four castes and periods, which must be strenuously maintained.

Jada spoke.

- 1 Having listened to that his mother's exhortation, Alarka also further questioned his mother both about the duties of the four classes, and about the duties appertaining to the four periods of a bráhmaṇ's life.

Alarka spoke.

- 2 "Thou hast expounded, gracious lady, this the duty relating to the system of kingly government. I wish to hear that duty which concerns the four classes and the four periods of a bráhmaṇ's life."

Madálasá spoke.

- 3 "A bráhmaṇ's duty is held to be threefold—liberality, study, sacrifice. There is no other fourth duty. His duty is regardless of his position. Irreproachable sacrificial and educational occupations, and the acceptance of gifts from the purified—this is fitly proclaimed his threefold means of livelihood

 8 obedience likewise to dvijas, nourishing them, buying and selling. These are said to be the duties of the four classes.

“Hear also the connexions among the four periods of a bráhma-
 9 man's life. A man who has not erred from the duty of his own class gains perfect felicity : he goes to hell after death, 10 if he has served what is forbidden. And as long indeed as a dvija is not invested with the sacred thread, so long, my son, he acts, speaks and eats unrestrainedly.

11 “When duly invested with the sacred thread, he becomes a brahma-c'árin in his guru's house, and he should dwell there.
 12 I relate his duty ; hear it of me. Private study, attendance on fire, bathing, and wandering about for alms, and always eating that food after informing his guru and obtaining 13 permission from him. He should be diligent in the guru's business ; there should be thorough evoking of his affection ; and when summoned by him, he should read intently, his mind
 14 withdrawn from everything else. After acquiring one, two or all the Vedas from his guru's mouth, he is authorized to give the 15 guru his fee with words of eulogy. But let him enter on the griha-stha period when desirous of the period of family life ; or, by his own wish, on the vána-prastha period and on the 16 fourth period. Or let the dvija await his decease there in the guru's house, obedient to the guru's son if the guru be 17 dead, or to the guru's disciple, if there be no son. Obedient, free from self-conceit, let him pass through the period of a brahma-c'árin.

“Next when he has desisted therefrom, through desire for 18 a griha-stha's status, let him then rightly marry a wife, sprung from the family of a different* Rishi, his equal, free from sickness, not deformed, for the sake of a griha-stha's 19 status. And having gained money by his own toil, let him duly please the pitris, gods and guests by faith ; and also nourish 20 those who resort to him, his dependants and children, and his female relatives, and the afflicted, the blind, and the outcast, the birds and the cattle,* to the utmost of his power 21 with gifts of food. This is the duty of a griha-stha ; sexual intercourse also at the proper season : but he should not, to the utmost of his power, neglect the performance of the five 22 sacrifices. And let the man himself, being zealous to the best of his power, together with his dependants, eat the remains of the food consumed by the pitris, the gods, the guests and paternal kinsmen.

23 “ Now I have declared this griha-stha period distinctly. I describe to thee the duty of the vána-prastha : be it heard.
 24 Having seen the succession of his offspring, and the stoop of his body, let the wise man enter upon the vána-prastha period, 25 for the purpose of purifying his soul. In it there is the enjoyment of the forest, and attraction by penances, sleeping on the ground, sacred study, ceremonies for the pitris 26 gods and guests, the homa oblation, the three daily ablu-tions,† the wearing matted hair and a bark dress, and diligence in meditation unceasingly, the use of forest unguents.
 27 This is the vána-prastha period, for the purification of sin, and beneficial to the soul. But after that comes another, the last, period of the bhikshu.

28 “ But hear from me the nature of the fourth period, which with its peculiar duties has been described, my darling, by 29 high-souled men conversant with its duties.‡ Renunciation of every association, sacred study, abstinence from anger, control over the senses, no long dwelling in one habitation, 30 abstaining from undertakings, and eating food obtained by begging once a day, also desire for the awakening of know-31 ledge of the soul, and gazing at the soul. Now I have acquainted thee with this duty in the fourth period.

“ Hear from me the common duty of the other classes and of

- 32 the periods of life. Truthfulness, purity and harmlessness, freedom from envy, and patience, mercy, generosity,* and contentment is the eighth virtue.
- 33 "These duties have been succinctly described to thee concerning the classes and the periods of life: and a man should
- 34 stand wholly within these his own peculiar duties. And the man, who, overstepping his own duty named according to his own class or period of life, should behave otherwise,
- 35 should be punished by the king. And the king who overlooks men, who after forsaking their own duties commit sin,
- 36 loses his pious acts. Therefore a king must vigorously punish all the classes that behave contrary to their special duties, and he must keep them within their own occupations."

Madālasā explains to Alarka the position of a griha-stha—and personifies as a cow, the Vedas, pious acts, the words of the good and the words svāhā, svadhā, vashat and hanta—She describes the bali offering, and utsarga oblation—the duties of a griha-stha to guests—the śrāddha—and further duties to guests—She pronounces a blessing on the griha-stha state—and quotes a song by Atri on it.

Alarka spoke.

- 1 "And what men must do who are engaged in the griha-stha period; and what becomes confined in the absence of action,
- 2 and what increases by action; and what is beneficial to men; and what a good man should avoid at home; and how things are done—declare that accurately to me who ask."

Madālasā spoke.

- 3 "My child, a man on assuming the griha-stha status, thereby nourishes all this earth and conquers the worlds he longs for.
- 4 The pitṛis, the Munis, the gods, living things, and mankind,

* For akārpyanyam read akārpnyam?

- and worms, insects, and flying creatures, birds, cattle, and
- 5 Asuras subsist upon the griha-stha, and derive satisfaction from him; and gaze indeed at his countenance, wondering, 'Will he give us anything?'
- 6 "The support of everything is this cow, my child, which consists of the three Vedas, in which the universe is established,
- 7 and which is believed to be the cause of the universe. Her back is the Rig-Veda; her loins the Yajur-Veda; her face and neck the Sáma-Veda; and her horns are pious acts; her
- 8 hair the excellent words of the good; her ordure and urine are tranquillity and prosperity; she is supported on feet which are the four classes; she is the sustenance of the worlds; being
- 9 imperishable she does not wane. The word sváhá,* and the word svadhá,† and the word vashaṭ, my son, and the other
- 10 word hanta are her‡ four teats. The gods drink of the teat which is the word sváhá; and the pitṛis of that consisting of svadhá; and the Munis of that which is the word
- 11 vashaṭ; the gods, living things and Asuras, and mankind drink constantly of the teat which is the word hanta. Thus this cow consisting of the three Vedas, my child, fattens
- 12 them. And the man, who grievously sinning causes their destruction, sinks into the hell Tamas,§ the hell Andha-
- 13 támisra|| and the hell Támisra.¶ And the man, who gives this cow drink with his own children and with the immortals and other objects of worship at the proper time, attains Svarga.
- 14 "Therefore, my son, a man must nourish the gods, rishis, and pitṛis and men and living things daily, even as his own
- 15 body. Therefore having bathed and become clean he should, composed in mind, delight the gods, rishis and pitṛis, and the
- 16 prajā-pati also with water at the proper time. And a man having worshipped the gods with the fragrant flowers of the great-flowered jasmine, should next delight Agni; and the offering to Brahmá and the Viśva-devas inside the house, and 18 to Dhanvantari to the north-east; let him offer the bali eastward to Indra, southwards to Yama, and the bali west-19 wards to Varuṇa, and northwards to Soma. And let him also give the bali to Dhātṛi and Vidhātṛi at the house-door, and let him give it to Aryaman outside and all around the houses.

 20 Let him offer the bali to night-walking goblins in the air, and let him scatter it to the pitṛis, standing with his face south-21 ward. Then the griha-stha, being intent and having his mind well composed, should take the water and cast it, as a wise 22 man, into those places for those several deities, that they may rinse out their mouths.

“Having thus performed in his house the family-bali, the 23 pure griha-stha should perform the utsarga oblation respectfully for the nourishment of living things. And let him scatter it on the ground both for the dogs, and low-caste men 24 and the birds; for certainly this offering to the Viśva-devas is declared to be one for evening and morning.

“And then he, as a wise man, having rinsed out his mouth, 25 should look towards the door the eighth part of a muhūrta, whether a guest is to be seen. He should honour the guest, who has arrived there, with rice and other food and with 26 water and with fragrant flowers and other presents, according to his power. He should not treat as a guest a friend, nor a 27 fellow-villager, nor one who bears the name of an unknown family, nor one who has arrived at that time. Men call 28 a brāhman who has arrived, hungry, wearied, supplicating, indigent, a guest; he should be honoured by the wise according to their power. A learned man should not inquire 29 his lineage or conduct, nor his private study; he should esteem him, whether handsome or unhandsome in appearance, as a prajā-pati. For since he stays but a transitory time, he is 30 therefore called an a-tithi, ‘a guest.’ When he is satisfied, the griha-stha is released from the debt which arises from hospitality. The guilty man, who without giving to the guest him-31 self eats, he incurs only sin and feeds on ordure in another life.
 The guest transferring his misdeeds to that man, from whose 32 house he turns back with broken hopes, and taking that man's merit, goes off. Moreover a man should honour a guest re-33 spectfully according to his power with gifts of water and vegetables, or with just what he is himself eating.

“ And he should daily perform the śráddha with rice and 34 other food and with water with regard to the pitris and bráh- mans ; or he should feed a bráhman. Taking up an *agra of 35 the rice, he should present it to a bráhman : and he should give an alms to wandering bráhmans who ask. The alms should be the size of a mouthful, the agra four mouthfuls.
 36 Bráhmans call the agra four times a hanta-kára.† But without giving food, or a hantakára, an agra or an alms, 37 according to his substance, he must not himself eat. And he should eat, after he has done reverence to guests, friends, 38 paternal kinsmen, relatives, and petitioners, the maimed, and children and old men and the sick.

“ If a man consumed with hunger, or another who is destitute 39 wants food, he should be fed by a householder who has adequate‡ substance. Whatever kinsman is dispirited when he 40 reaches a prosperous kinsman, the latter gets the sin that has been done by the dispirited man. And the precept must be observed at evening, and he should do reverence to the guest 41 who has arrived there after sunset, accordingly to his ability, with a bed, a seat and food.

“ Thus a weight is placed on the shoulder of one who 42 undertakes family life. Vidhátṛi, and the gods, and the pitris, the great Rishis, all shower bliss on him, and so also 43 do guests and relatives : and the herds of cattle and the flocks of birds, and the minute insects that exist besides, are satisfied.

44 And Atri himself used to sing songs on this subject, noble one !
 Hear those, O noble one ! that appertain to the griha-stha period— ‘ Having done reverence to the gods, and the pitris 45 and guests, relatives likewise, and female relations, and, gurus also, the griha-stha who has substance should scatter

 46 and birds: for he should certainly perform this offering to the Viśva-devas evening and day. And he should not himself eat flesh, rice and vegetables and whatever may have been prepared in the house, which he may not scatter according to the precept.’”

CANTO XXX.

Madūlasā explains to Alarka the ceremonies to be performed by a griha-stha, which are of three kinds, continual, occasional and periodical—She explains the occasional śrāddha, which is celebrated for men and women.

Madūlasā spoke.

- 1 “Now what the griha-stha's ceremonies are, the continual,
 and the occasional, and the periodical, listen thereto, my son.
- 2 “The continual are comprised in the five sacrifices,* these that I have described to thee: and the occasional are the others, such as the ceremony on the birth of a son, and so
- 3 forth. The periodical† are recognisable by the learned as the sacrifices at the moon's changes, the śrāddha and others.
- “Here‡ I will tell thee of the occasional śrāddha celebration,
- 4 of the birth-ceremony that should be performed similarly by men on the birth of a son; and everything duly related in order that should be done at marriages and on other occasions.
- 5 And in this the Nāndī-mukha pitṛis§ must be worshipped; and he should give the piṇḍas mixed with curds and contain-
- 6 ing barley, facing northward or eastward, with composed mind making the oblation. Some men like it with the offer-

7 ing to the Viśva-devas omitted. And in this ceremony the dvijas must be arranged in pairs, and must be worshipped in dextral circumambulation. This is the occasional ceremony during growth, and the other is the funeral obsequies.

8 “And the śráddha for a single deceased person should be performed on the day of the death; listen to that. And it should be performed omitting the offering to the gods, and 9 with a single vessel. And the oblations-with-fire* should not be made in the fire without the ceremonies. And he should 10 give one piṇḍa to the deceased person near the fragments of food, and sesamum-seed and water on the right, accompanying them with the recollection of that person’s name. ‘May he 11 be exempt from decay,’ let the celebrant say, and ‘may enjoyment be his,’ let the others delighted say, at the place where the bráhmans are dismissed. Men must do this every month 12 for a year. Now at the expiration of the year, or whenever the ceremony is performed by men, the śráddha for deceased sapiṇḍas must be performed for him also: so the rule is 13 stated; and that must be without the offering to the gods, and accompanied with a single argha offering in a single vessel. And that ceremony must not be performed there in 14 the fire without offering the oblations-with-fire: and on the right there, he should feed the single dvijas.

“And there is another distinction, consisting in an extra 15 ceremony every month; do thou listen attentive to me, as I tell thee of it, while it is being described. He should fill four vessels there with sesamum-seed, perfume and water, 16 three for the pitris, one for the deceased person, my son.
And he should scatter the arghya-oblation in the three vessels, and in the deceased’s vessel,† uttering the words ‘Ye 17 samáná’ &c., he should perform the rest as before.

“This śráddha for a single deceased person is ordained 18 precisely the same for women also. The śráddha for deceased sapiṇḍas does not exist for them, if they have no son. The śráddha for a single deceased person must be performed

* Ávāhana.

† Read preta-pátre for preta-pátram?

19 every year for a woman by the men, duly on the day of her death, as has been here mentioned for men.

“But if there are no sons, the sapinḍas; if they are wanting, the sahodakas,* and those who may be the mother’s sapinḍas and those who may be the mother’s sahodakas, should duly perform this ceremony for a man who has no son, and for one who has begotten only a daughter. The daughters and their children should in this way perform the ceremony for the maternal grandfather. But those who are designated as the sons of two such persons should worship their maternal and paternal grandfathers fittingly with the occasional śráddhas.

“When all these relatives are wanting, the women should perform the ceremony without the mantras for their husbands; when they too are wanting, the king should cause the ceremony to be performed by a member of his own family, and the cremation and all the other ceremonies to be performed properly by men of that caste; for the king indeed is kinsman to all the classes.

“Thus these continual and occasional ceremonies have been described to thee, my child. Hear the other periodical ceremony appertaining to the śráddha. The new moon is just the cause there, and the time is the moon’s waning: the fixed time indicates the constancy of that ceremony.”

CANTO XXXI.

Description of the Párvana Śráddha.

Madálasá mentions the seven sapinḍa ancestors, and the lepa-bhujas, and the remoter ancestors—She explains how the celebrant of the śráddha nourishes them all—She enumerates the times for the śráddha, and the persons who should and who should not be invited to it—She describes how the śráddha should be performed.

Madálasá spoke.

1 “After the performance of the śráddha to deceased sapinḍas, he who is the father’s great-grandfather passes to the class of

* The samáuodakas.

those who feed on the lepa,* having lost his share in the piṇḍa 2 offered to the pitris. He, who is the fourth there-above among those who feed on the lepa bestowed by the deceased's son, ceases to eat thereof and obtains the satisfaction that is freed from the relationship.

3 “The father, and grandfather, and also the great-grandfather—these truly must be known as the three males who 4 are related by the piṇḍa.† And those who are related by the lepa are said to be the three others reckoning upwards from the grandfather's grandfather: and the celebrant is 5 the seventh among them. Such have Munis declared this seven-ancestral relationship to be, reckoning from the celebrant upwards. And there-above are those beyond participation in the lepa.

6 “Next are classed all the other ancestors, both those who dwell in Naraka, and those who have become animals, and those who reside within living creatures and other things.

7 “By what several means the celebrant, while performing the śrāddha rightly, nourishes all those ancestors, hear that, my child.

8 “Now truly those ancestors who have become piśac'as obtain satisfaction from the food that men scatter on the ground.
 9 Those ancestors, my son, who have become trees, receive satisfaction from the water that drips from the bathing garment 10 on the ground. But the drops of water, that fall from the limbs on the ground, minister nourishment to those ancestors in 11 the family who have attained divinity. And when the piṇḍas are taken up, the particles of food that fall on the earth,—those ancestors in the family who have become animals 12 gain nourishment therefrom. The children moreover in the family who, being capable of performing religious ceremonies but not having undergone the purificatory rites, are burnt on their death, they in their distress subsist on the 13 scattering of the food and the water used in scouring. And the water, both that which is used by bráhmans for rinsing out the mouth after meals, and that which is used by them for sprinkling the feet,—the other ancestors likewise gain satisfaction indeed therefrom. So whatever water and food is scattered by the celebrant and by those dvijas, whether it be unsullied or fragmentary, that, my child, in the family of those who duly perform the śráddhas, nourishes the other ancestors who have been born among the several creations. With the śráddhas, which men perform with ill-gotten wealth, are satisfied those ancestors who have been born as c'aṇḍálas, pukkaśas and other men of degraded castes.

“Thus many here derive nourishment, my child, through their relations who perform the śráddhas, by means of the casting away of food and drops of water. Therefore a man should perform the śráddha in faith according to rule even with vegetables: no one perishes in the family of one who performs the śráddha.

“I will mention the periodic times for it; and learn of me by what rule men perform it.

“The śráddha must necessarily be performed on the night of the new moon, at the moon's waning every month, and on the eighth days* also.

“Learn of me the voluntary seasons. On the arrival of a distinguished bráhmaṇ, on an eclipse of the sun or moon, at the solstice, at the equinox, at the sun's passage from one sign into another, and on the occasion of a portent,† my son, on acquiring property worthy of a śráddha, and on seeing a bad dream, and at occultations of the constellation or planet under which one is born, one should perform the śráddha according to one's inclination.

“A distinguished bráhmaṇ learned in the Veda, a yogí, one who knows the Veda, one who has mastered the Jyeshtha-sáman, one who has thrice kindled the fire Nác'íketa, one who knows the three verses which begun with 'madhu,'‡ one

 37 have arrived at his house, with a welcome; and with the pavitra in hand he should seat those, who have rinsed out their mouths, on seats. In the case of the pitris the number of brāhmanas should be uneven, and in the case of the Gods*
 38 even; or, according to the circumstances of the celebrant, there should be one brāhman for the pitris and one for the Gods. In like manner for the maternal ancestors the number of brāhmanas should be uneven or only one. The brāhmanas intended 39 for the Viśva-devas may be identical on the side of the pitris and maternal ancestors; but some other men desire that they should be distinct. He should place the brāhmanas intended for the Gods with their faces toward the east, and those for 58 devika mantras. Let him say "May they be pleased!" "Hail to you, O Viśve devas." And on those brāhmans, saying, "Be it 59 so!" he should request their benedictions. He should dismiss them, addressing them pleasantly and prostrating himself in faith; and he should attend them as far as the door, and he 60 should return, a gladdened man. Then he should perform the continual ceremony, and should also feed guests. And some very good men wish for a continual ceremony to the 61 pitris, and others do not wish it for the pitris. He should perform the remainder as the first part: some think 'not with a separate cooking vessel,' some prefer it repeated exactly 62 in the same order.* Then the celebrant should eat that rice in company with his servants and others.

Thus should the man skilled in religious law perform com-63 posedly the śrāddha to the pitris, or so as satisfaction accrues to the brāhmans. There are three pure things in a śrāddha, 64 sesamum-seed,† sacrificial grass, and the sesamum-plant;‡ and they say these, (O princely brāhman,) are to be avoided, 65 anger, journeying, haste. A silver vessel is also commended at śrāddhas, my son. Now silver is for use, for looking at and for giving away; for when the offering to the pitris is milked out in a silver vessel, the pitris give ear to the earth;§ hence the pitris desire silver, which increases their affection.

CANTO XXXII.

The ordinance of the Śrāddha.

Madālasā explains what kinds of food please the pitṛis at śrāddhas and for what periods—what kinds are to be avoided—what sites should be avoided for the ceremony—what men and animals should be excluded—and what defilements must be avoided—Yogīs must have priority at the śrāddha—ancient songs are to be sung—and what benefits accrue from the performance.

Madālasā spoke.

- 1 Next hear, my son, with faith this* that I say,—what is to be avoided in order to please the pitṛis, or what conduces to their pleasure.
- 2 The pitṛis are satisfied with clarified butter and rice for a month. The paternal grandfathers receive satisfaction with
- 3 fish-meat for two months. Venison should be known to satisfy the pitṛis for three months; and the flesh of hares
- 4 nourishes the pitṛis for four months; birds' flesh satisfies them for five months; hog's flesh for six months; goat's flesh for
- 5 seven months; and flesh of the black antelope† for eight months; flesh of the ruru deer gives them satisfaction for nine months, without doubt; flesh of the gayal‡ gives them
- 6 satisfaction for ten months. Moreover sheep's flesh§ satisfies the pitṛis for eleven months; and milk of kine or anything
- 7 made of milk satisfies them a year. Flesh of the rhinoceros, flesh of the red-goat, the dark tulsi plant,|| and honey, and 15 and wealth that has been obtained unlawfully as the purchase-price of a bride is forbidden in this ceremony. And water that is bad-smelling and frothy, and very scanty, and 17 be avoided always in the ceremony to the pitris. All milk from deer, sheep, camels, and from animals that have uncloven hoofs, from buffaloes, and from the yak, and cow's 18 milk that is not more than ten days old,§ and what has been brought to a person who has asked for it on account of 19 the pitris,—such milk must be always avoided by the good in the śráddha ceremony.

And in this ceremony ground must be avoided that is swarming with insects, that is rough, and that has been 20 scorched by fire, and that is hot with the words of enemies and wicked men, and that is foul-smelling.

Men who disgrace their family or who injure their family by 21 separating themselves from the śráddha, naked men and criminals may destroy the ceremony to the pitris with their glance;
 a eunuch, and a man repudiated by his relations, a cock, and

- 24 What has been touched by a corpse or by a recently-delivered woman,* and by those who have been long ill, by outcastes, and by filthy persons, does not nourish the pitṛis.

- 25 And the celebrant must moreover avoid the sight of a woman who is in her courses; and he must shun sitting together with bald-pated men and drunken men at a śrāddha, out of respect.

- 26 And whatever is infested with hair-lice, and whatever has been gazed at by dogs, and whatever is putrid and stale, and the brinjal,† and ferments,‡ and whatever has been fanned by the wind from clothing, are indeed to be avoided at a śrāddha.

- 27 Whatever, in the shape of articles of food possessed by thee, is given with supreme faith to the pitṛis according to their name and family, that becomes food for them. Hence a man of faith, who desires the pitṛis' satisfaction, must place the best that he has in the vessel and according to rule at a ceremony to the pitṛis.

- 29 And the yogis must always be fed by a wise man at a śrāddha; for the pitṛis are patrons of religious devotion; hence one should ever worship them. Now if a yogi is fed first, he can save the person for whom the sacrifice is offered and those who feast, just as a boat saves in water, better than thousands of brāhmanas.

- 31 At this ceremony also songs in honour of the pitṛis are sung by those who recite the Veda, songs which were§ formerly sung by the pitṛis to king Purúravas.  honey and clarified butter during the winter half of the year.
- 36 Let a man therefore, my son, worship his own pitris in faith, hoping to gain all his wishes and his own deliverance from 37 evil. Men's pitris, when delighted with śráddhas, please the Vasus, the Rudras and the Ādityas, the constellations, the 38 planets and the stars. The pitris, when delighted with śráddhas, bestow long life, wisdom, wealth, knowledge, Svarga, final emancipation from existence, and joys and sovereignty.

 as it has been expounded: hear, my child, the praise of the Voluntary Śráddhas according to the various days on which they are performed.

 3 seventh he acquires chieftainship; in the eighth the highest prosperity; in the ninth he gains women; in the tenth
 4 perfect gratification of his wishes. So let him, assiduous in the ceremonies, gain all the Vedas in the eleventh. And in 5 the twelfth the worshipper of the pitris gains continual victories, offspring, mental vigour, cattle, prosperity, independence and perfect nourishment. The man of intense faith, 6 who performs the śrāddha on the thirteenth day, gains length of life and sovereignty undoubtedly. Since one is successful in 7 śrāddhas by means of choice food, he, whose ancestors died or were slain with weapons in their youth, should, if he wishes
 8 for their pleasure, perform the ceremony on the fourteenth day. The pure man, who performs the śrāddha diligently on the night of the new moon, obtains all his wishes and attains Svarga everlastingly.

CANTO XXXIV.

*Alarka's Education—The exposition of Virtuous Custom.

Madálasá mentions the benefits of the observance of Virtuous Custom—which consists in the pursuit of righteousness, wealth and love—She mentions a large number of general rules regarding religious worship, eating, social behaviour, private actions, and marriage—She gives general rules regarding the sacrifices, and describes the portions of the hand to be used therein—and mentions how one's residence should be chosen.

Madálasá spoke.

- “Thus, my son, should the gods and pitṛis be worshipped by a householder with the oblations to the gods and the oblations to the pitṛis; and with food should guests and kinsmen,
- 2 living creatures, all dependants, cattle, birds and ants, beggars and other petitioners be worshipped by the dweller in a
- 3 house, who observes the good customs and performs the domestic sacrifices, my child. He incurs sin if he neglects the periodic ceremonies.”

* Śaṅ-ác'ára.

Alarka spoke.

- 4 "Thou hast declared to me, mother, the threefold ceremonies to be observed by men, the perpetual, the occasional, and the 5 periodic.* I wish to hear, O lady who gladdenest thy family, about Virtuous Custom by practising which a man gains happiness in the next world and in this."

Madálasá spoke.

- 6 "A householder must ever maintain Virtuous Custom thoroughly: for one who has lost Virtuous custom has no happiness here or in the next world. Sacrifice, alms-giving and austerities do not tend to the welfare of a man here, who 7 habitually transgresses Virtuous custom. For a man who follows bad custom does not find long life here. One must earnestly follow Virtuous custom; Virtuous custom destroys what is inauspicious.

- 8 "I will expound to thee my son, the nature of that virtuous custom. Hear it from me with single mind, and even so maintain it.

- 9 "A householder who performs the domestic sacrifices must strive to accomplish the three-fold objects of life:† in full success therein lies the householder's own success here and in the 10 next world. With a quarter of his Wealth let him, master of himself, lay up a store for the next world; and with half let him support himself and perform the periodic śráddhas;
11 and treating a quarter as his capital, he should increase it, by exerting himself on his own account. Thus, my son, Wealth ought to be fruitful according to Virtuous custom. Similarly 12 a wise man must practise Righteousness in order to withstand sin; and so also the third, Love, yields fruit here indeed on account of the next world. And the third, Love, is not impeded
13 through fear of diminution. Love also is said to be two-fold from its not being opposed by this three-fold class. Let a man 14 consider all these successive correlations.

- 15 "Hear from me those opposite correlations, such as Righteousness, &c. Righteousness aims at a succession of righteousness.* Righteousness is not destructive to one's own Wealth. And Love is diverse from both; and those two again are diverse from it.

- 17 "At the Bráhma moment a man should think of and ponder over Righteousness and Wealth, after rising up and rinsing out his mouth, standing towards the east, self-restrained,
- 18 pure: let him worship the twilight with the constellations in the east, the twilight with the sun in the west, as is right: he should not neglect it even when free from adversity.
- 19 "He should eschew conversation with the wicked, falsehood, and harsh speech, evil books, evil words and the homage of evil, my son.
- 20 "Evening and morning, with soul restrained he should offer the homa oblation.
- "He should not gaze up at the orb of the sun at sunrise or at sunset.
- 21 "He should look in a mirror in order to dress his hair; he should wash his teeth; and delight the gods in the very forenoon.
- 22 "He should not defecate or void urine in a path leading to the villages, to temples, to places of pilgrimage or to the fields, nor on cultivated ground, nor in a cattle-pen.
- 23 "He should not gaze at another's wife naked. He should not look at his own ordure. He should avoid seeing, touching and talking with a woman in-her-courses.
- 24 "He should not void urine, or defecate, or engage in sexual intercourse in water.
- 25 "He should not step on ordure, urine, hair, ashes or potsherds: and a wise man should not step on husks, charcoal, bones or decayed things, or on rope, clothing, &c., whether on a road, or on the earth.
- 26 "Moreover a householder should do reverence to the pitris, gods and mankind, and to living creatures, according to his capability, and afterwards eat himself. And a man should

- “And he should not eat anything at all while rinsing out his mouth. While he has remains of food in his mouth, he should not carry on any conversation and he should cease his reading, and he should not touch a cow, a bráhmaṇ, fire, or his own head:

- 31 “Nor should he look at the sun or the moon or the constellations with passionate desire.*

“And when clad in a single garment he should not eat nor engage in the worship of the gods.

- 34 “An intelligent man should not carry dvijas, nor should he void urine in fire, nor should he ever bathe or sleep naked.

- 35 “And he should not scratch his head with both hands; nor should men wash their heads frequently without cause. And when his head is washed he should not touch his body with oil at all.

“And he should cease his own reading, when every one is abstaining from reading.

- 37 “He should never void urine against a bráhmaṇ, the wind, cattle or the sun; facing north by day, and facing south by night, he should do his voidance of urine and fæces during illness† whenever he desires.

verence to his guests.

51 "A man should certainly not sleep with his head to the north, nor with his head to the west; he should sleep, placing his head to the north east or east.

"He should not bathe in perfumed water, nor at night; bathing except by day is declared to be most potent for calamity; nor when he has not bathed, should he wipe his limbs with a cloth or with his hands. Nor should he shake his hair, nor should he shake his clothes.* Nor should an intelligent man, when he has not bathed, ever apply unguents.

54 "Nor should he wear red clothing, nor even variegated or black clothing: nor should he make a complete change of his clothing or in his ornaments. And transparent† raiment should be avoided, and also whatever is very much damaged, and whatever is infested with lice, or has been trampled on, or has been looked at by dogs, and has been licked or thrown down, or has been befouled by the extraction of pus.

"He should never eat flesh from the back, or flesh unfit for the gods and pitris, or prohibited flesh, my son, or things which are visibly salt. Food that is long stale or that is not fresh must be avoided, my royal son, because of the changes that occur in flour, vegetables, sugarcane and milk; and meat long stale must be avoided, because of the change‡ that occurs in it.

neath water, from a habitation, from an ant-hill, from ground infested with mice, and where purificatory actions &c. have been carried on. After washing his hands and feet and sprinkling water on them he should, with his face between his knees, water three or four times after twice wiping the sides of his 68 mouth, the apertures of the body, and his head. After duly rinsing out his mouth with water, being pure, he should perform the ceremony to the gods, the pishis, and the pitris di-serving a composed mind. A wise man should rinse out his

&c., he should rinse out his mouth, touch a cow's back, and this is in his power; in the absence of the former, he should 72 do the latter; if the former be wanting, it is desirable to do the latter.

“He should not gnash his teeth, nor beat his own body.

73 “He should also avoid sleep, reading and food at both twilights; and sexual intercourse and setting out on a journey at the evening twilight.

74 “In the fore noon, dear son, he should in faith perform his worship to the gods, and at noon to men, and in the afternoon ceremonies to the gods or the pitris. And he should trim his beard facing eastwards or northwards.

 78 always marry who desires welfare. He should marry one who is in the seventh or fifth degree distant from his parents: he should guard his wife, and he should shun jealousy, by day, in sleep and in sexual intercourse.

79 “He should avoid a deed that causes pain* to others, and the infliction of pain on living creatures.

 mighty, nor with inferiors, nor with reprobates, nor with the 90 ever-timid, nor yet with fatalists. He should contract friendship with good men, with those who always observe Virtuous custom, with the wise, with the honest, with the powerful, with those who are resolute in action.

91 "In company with one's friends, the initiated, the king, Snátaka brahmans, and one's father-in-law, one should do reverence to the Rítvij priest, and the five other venerable per-92 sons and to guests. One should do reverence, my son, to dvijas, who have dwé for a year, with an offering of honey and milk according to one's ability and with alacrity at fitting 93 times. And the brahman who desires bliss should observe their governance, and if intelligent he should not contradict them even though always scolded by them.

94 "Having performed the household worship properly in the fitting place and in due order, he should next worship the fire 95 and offer it the oblations in due order. He should make the first offering to Brahmá, and then to the prajā-pati, and the 96 third to the Guhyas, and the next to Kaśyapa. Then having offered to Anumati* he should next offer the household bali and the constant oblations, that I have already explained to 97 thee, according to the ritual. Next he should make the offering to the Viśva-devas, then the offerings to all creatures, and separately to the gods according to place and apportionment.

98 And he should make the three oblations to Parjanya, the Dharitrís, and to Mánaka, and to Váyu in every direction, 99 to the east and other regions of the sky in due order; and to Brahmá, to the Air and to the Sun in order, and to the Viśva-100 devas and to all beings; and then he should offer to the Dawn, and to Śiva northwards; and southwards to the pitris, 101 exclaiming 'Svadhá, reverence!' Having done it on the

- right and to the north west, saying, 'O Yakshma,* this is for thee!' he should, if he wishes, offer the remains of the food and the water from the vessel according to the rule. Then taking up the first part of the food, he should offer it with the benediction Hanta to the brahman according to the rule and justice.
- 103 "He should perform the ceremonies to the gods and other objects of worship, with each one's special portion of the hand according to rule; and he should perform the ceremony of rinsing out the mouth with the portion of the hand sacred to Brahmá.
- 104 This is called the portion of the hand sacred to Brahmá for the purpose of rinsing out the mouth, viz., a line drawn to the
- 105 left of the thumb of the right hand. The pitṛis' portion of the hand is said to be the part between the forefinger and the thumb; by that he should offer the water and other obla-
- 106 tions to the pitṛis, except in the nándí-mukha śráddha. And the gods' portion of the hand is at the tips of the fingers; the ritual of ceremonies to the gods should be performed therewith. The prajā-pati's portion of the hand is at the root of the little finger, his ceremony must be performed† therewith.
- 107 Thus always with these portions of the hand sacred to the gods and pitṛis, he should always perform the ceremonies,
- 108 never with any other portion of the hand. It is proper always to rinse out the mouth with the portion of the hand sacred to Brahmá; and to offer the oblation to the pitṛis with the portion of the hand sacred to the pitṛis; and that to the gods with the portion of the hand sacred to the gods; and the offering to the prajā-pati with his own portion of the hand.
- 109 A wise man should perform the cake-and-water ceremony to the nándí-mukha ancestors, and whatever is offered to the prajā-pati, with the portion of the hand sacred to the prajā-pati.
- 110 "A sensible man should not carry water and fire at the same time; nor should he thrust out both his feet towards guru and the gods.

111 "He should not look at a neifer sucking.

"He should not drink water with the hands joined together.

"At all periods of personal purification whether important 112 or unimportant, he should not delay for the sake of purification.

"He should not blow the fire with his mouth.

"One ought not to take up one's abode, my son, where 113 four things do not exist, viz., a person who pays debts, and a physician, a bráhmaṇ learned in the Vedas, and a river full of water. Where there is a king who has vanquished his 114 foes, who is powerful, and who is devoted to righteousness, there should a wise man always dwell: whence can come happiness, when the king is worthless? Where the king is 115 unassailable, where the earth is prolific, where the citizens are well governed and always practise justice, where folk are 116 charitable, there does residence bestow happiness. In a country where the husbandmen are not generally gluttonous, and where all medicinal herbs are procurable, there should a 117 sensible man dwell. One ought not, my son, to dwell there, where these three things are constant, a person desirous of conquering, and a former enemy, and folk who are always 118 holding festival. A wise man should always dwell among good-tempered neighbours.

"Thus, my son, have I, thy well-wisher, expounded this to thee."

CANTO XXXV.

The education of Alarka (continued).

An exposition of things permitted and forbidden.

Maddasá describes what food may be eaten and what not—how various things are to be cleansed when impure, and what things are always pure—how one who has contracted impurity should purify himself—what actions and conduct one should avoid—

She insists on the necessity of maintaining the daily sacrifice—She mentions what holidays are allowed the various castes—She describes certain post-funeral ceremonies—and purification after deaths and births.

Madálasá spoke.

- 1 Next do thou hearken to the remedial measures for things forbidden and permitted. Rice should be eaten that has been
- 2 kept awhile, mixed with oil, and long stored; and wheat, barley, and butter-milk and preparations thereof unmixed with oil. The hare, the tortoise, the go-sámp,* the porcupine,
- 3 and the rhinoceros, my son,—these indeed may be eaten; and the domestic pig and fowl should be eschewed. The remains of food at a śráddha after the pitris and gods and other recipients have been satisfied may be eaten at the desire of the
- 4 bráhmans. A man who eats flesh that has been killed for the purpose of medicine is not defiled.
- 5 Shells, stones, gold, and silver, ropes, and garments, and vegetables, roots and fruits, and wicker-work vessels and leather, and gems, diamonds, and coral, and pearls, and men's
- 6 bodies are best cleansed with water; just as iron things with water, and stone by scrubbing. Oily vessels are cleansed with
- 7 warm water, and winnowing baskets, grain and antelope-skins; and the pestle and mortar for husking rice, and thick cloths, and a store by sprinkling; and all kinds of bark-made things
- 8 are best cleansed with water and earth. Grass, wood and medicinal herbs are best cleansed by sprinkling; and all
- 9 woollen things and hair have ceremonial purity. White mustard is cleansed with oily sediment or the sediment from
- 10 sesamum seed. Things that are injured are always cleansed with water, my son. So also cotton things are cleaned with
- 11 water and ashes. Timber, ivory, bone and horn are best cleaned by scraping. Earthen pots are purified ceremonially by re-burning.
- 12

Pure are alms, a workman's hand, wares for sale, and a

* Godhá, the Go-sámp a very large kind of lizard found in jungle.

13 woman's face, whatever passes along the high-road, what is unknown, what is brought by slaves and other menials, what is admirable for its sound, what is long past, what is screened by 14 many, what is light, what is extremely abundant, what is young, and what is done by the old and the sickly, kitchens when the business in them is ended, women who are suckling 15 children. Pure also are running water, and odourless bubbles.

The ground is cleansed through time, by the rubbing of 16 bodies, and the passage of cattle, by smearing, by digging, by watering, by houses, by sweeping and by worship.

Things infested with hair-lice, or sniffed at by cattle, or 17 infested with flies should be sprinkled with earth water and ashes to be cleansed, my son; things made of udumbara 18 wood* with vinegar; tin and lead with salt. Brass things are cleaned with ashes and water; and the over-flows of fluids are pure. A thing soiled by ordure is cleaned with earth and 19 water and by removing the smell; and other such-like things by removing the colour and smell.

Water is pure that has satisfied cattle, that is in its natural 20 state, that is lying on the earth; and likewise flesh that has been slain by C'andálas, Kravyádas and others. And clothes and other things lying on the high-road are said to be made 21 pure by the wind. Dust, fire, a horse, a cow, the shade, the rays of the sun and moon, the wind, the earth, drops of water, and mosquitoes and other insects inflict no contamination though they may have been in contact with what is corrupt.
 22 A goat and a horse are pure as regards their face; but the face of a cow or calf is not pure when the mother is in milk; a hawk 23 is pure when it knocks f uit down. A seat, a bed, a carriage, boats, and grass on the road—they are purified by the rays of the moon and sun and by the wind, in the same way as articles of trade.

24 After walking along the high road, and after matters of bathing, hunger, drinking, and weariness, one should change

* Udumbara, Ficus glomerata, Roxb.; a large tree, common about villages (Roxb. p. 646.)

25 one's clothes and duly rinse out one's mouth. Bad roads,* mud, and water, when one comes into contact with them, are cleaned by leaving them alone; and things made of mud or brick† are cleansed by contact with the wind.

26 On taking up a morsel of rice-food that has been damaged through over-maturity, he should discard it, and should rinse out his mouth with water and earth, and should sprinkle the 27 remainder with water. One who has eaten bad food whether wittingly or unwittingly, should fast for three nights in order to assuage‡ that fault.

28 After touching a menstruous woman, a horse, a jackal, and other animals, or a woman recently delivered of a child, or people of low caste, one should bathe for the sake of purifica-29 tion; and so should those who have carried a corpse. After touching an oily human bone a man becomes clean when he has bathed; after touching a dry human bone he becomes clean by rinsing out his mouth, or by touching a cow, or by gazing 30 at the sun. Moreover one should not disregard blood, spittle, and unguents for the body.

A wise man should never stand in gardens and other 31 places in the afternoons. Nor should one hold converse with a woman hated by the populace or with a widow.

One should cast remnants of food, ordure, urine and the water used for washing the feet, outside the house.

32 Without taking up five piṇḍas one should not bathe in another man's water; one should bathe in holy ponds, and in the Ganges, in lakes and rivers.

33 After touching or holding converse with blasphemers of the gods, pitris, and holy śāstras, sacrifices, prayers and other sacred objects, one should purify one's self by gazing at the 34 sun. And after looking at a menstruous woman, a śūdra, an outcaste, or a dead body, the unrighteous, a woman recently delivered of a child, a eunuch, a naked person, and persons 35 of low caste, and on those who give away children, and on the paramours of other men's wives, the wise must indeed perform this purification of themselves. One conversant with righteousness, after touching forbidden food, a woman recently delivered, a eunuch, a cat, a rat, a dog or a cock, and an outcaste, what is cast away, a C'aṇḍāla, and those who carry away corpses, is purified by bathing; and so also one who has touched a woman in her courses, and the domestic hog, and even two men who have been contaminated by the impurity of a newly-delivered woman.

The base man, both he who daily neglects the continual ceremony, and he who is abandoned by brāhmanas, is polluted. One should never allow the continual ceremony to cease; but if it is neglected, there is a stoppage to the re-birth of his deceased relatives.

A brāhman should spend ten days, exempt from alms-giving, the Homa sacrifice and other pious acts: and a kshatriya should spend twelve days: and a vaiśya half a month; but a śūdra should remain a month, exempt from his peculiar occupation: thereafter all should pursue their own occupation, as already expounded.

Water ought to be presented to a departed person, after his body has been burnt outside by his relatives,* on the first, and fourth, seventh and ninth days of the moon. His relatives should gather together the ashes and bones on the fourth day; it is prescribed that after gathering them together, they should touch their limbs with them. But the sahodakas should perform all the ceremonies, after the gathering together of the remains. If the sapīṇḍas are touched by them, then both the sapīṇḍas and the sahodakas lose their purity.†

If a person dies directly of his own free will, by the sword, by water, by hanging, or by fire, by poison, by a fall, or in any other unnatural way, or by religious fasting to death, or by fasting to death from vindictive motives;‡ or if he

46 dies as a child, or as a sojourner in a foreign country, or as a religious mendicant, purification will be effected at once; and 47 others say the period of impurity* is declared to be three days for the sapinḍas; but if, after the other person is dead, the sapinḍa also dies, in this case the ceremonies must be performed during the days called the period of the first impurity.

48 This same ordinance is applied also to the impurity caused by the birth of sapinḍas, among sapinḍas and properly among 49 sahodakas also. When a son is born, the father must bathe with his clothes on. And if, after one child has been born 50 there, another should be born, the purification in that case also is prescribed according to the days of the elder-born child.

When ten or twelve months or half a month have elapsed, 51 all the castes should duly perform their respective rites and ceremonies. Next the ekoddishta śrāddha should be performed 52 for the departed person. And men of understanding must give gifts to the brāhmans; whatever is most desired in the world, and whatever is prized at home, those very things 53 therefore must one who hopes for immortality give to a brāh- man endowed with good qualities: but at the end of the days, after they have touched water, a chariot, a weapon, a goad 54 and a rod, and after they have performed the ceremonies, they should make the oblation† ordained by the laws of their 55 respective castes, and perform all pure acts that confer bliss in the next world and in this.

A wise man must study the three Vedas, and must be continually 56 occupied therein; he must amass riches righteously, and strenuously perform sacrifices; and he must fearlessly do 57 whatever does not entail censure on the soul of him who does it, my son, and whatever ought not to be concealed in public. The good man that so does, my child, brings splendour to his home by acquiring righteousness wealth and love.

CANTO XXXVI.

The Story of Madálasá (concluded).

Rita-dhvaja Kuvalayásva on reaching old age resigns his kingdom to his son Alarka, and Madálasá gives him a token-ring—Both depart to the forest to practise austerities.

Jaḍa spoke.

1 Being thus instructed by his mother, Rita-dhvaja's son at-2 tained his youth and duly married a wife, and begat sons,
3 and as a lord offered sacrifices, and always closely observed
4 his father's commands. Then after a long time Rita-dhvaja,
5 on reaching extreme old age, anointed his son in the sovereign-6 ty, and with righteous soul desirous to depart to the forest to 7 practise austerities in company with his wife descended from 8 his throne, a mighty protector, an illustrious king.

9 And Madálasá delivered this her last discourse to her son, 10 in order that her son might abandon attachment to sensual 11 pleasures.

Madálasá spoke.

12 “When intolerable pain, arising from separation from thy 13 dear kinsmen, or caused by the opposition of thy enemies, or 14 springing from the destruction of thy wealth or from thy own 15 self, may befall thee as thou rulest thy kingdom, observing the 16 laws of a householder—for the householder who depends on 17 selfishness makes unhappiness his abode—then, my son, draw 18 forth and read from this ring that I have given thee the 19 writing that is inlaid in delicate letters on the plate.”

Jaḍa spoke.

20 So saying, she gave him a golden ring, and the blessings 21 appropriate for a man who lives the family life. Then 22 Kuvalayásva and his queen Madálasá, bestowing on their son 23 the kingdom, departed to the forest to practise austerities.

CANTO XXXVII.

The conversation between the Father and Son (continued).

The discrimination of the Soul.

Alarka ruled righteously and prosperously, but was greatly addicted to pleasure—His brother Subáhu, wishing to correct him, formed an alliance with the king of Kási—Both attacked Alarka to wrest the kingdom from him, and reduced him to great straits—In his distress he looks at Madálasá's token-ring and seeks relief from Dattátreya—He explains to Dattátreya wherein lies his suffering, and launches into a metaphysical disquisition on the soul, the mind, the body, and pleasure and pain.

Jada spoke.

- 1 And Alarka also, righteous in soul, protected justly and like children his glad people who practised each his own
- 2 business. Inflicting punishment on the wicked, and worthily affording protection to the peaceable, he experienced intense delight; and he offered great sacrifices.
- 3 And there were born to him sons, mighty and valiant, righteous in soul, magnanimous, who were adversaries to evil
- 4 conduct. And he amassed wealth by means of righteousness, and righteousness again by means of wealth; and since those two things are not antagonistic, he enjoyed even the pleasures
- 5 of sense. Thus many years passed away as if but a single day, while he ruled the earth, devoted to righteousness, wealth and the gratification of his desires. No feelings of indifference
- 6 occurred while he enjoyed his loved objects of sense; nor again did he grow satiated in amassing righteousness and wealth.
- 7 His brother Subáhu, who roamed the forests, heard that he was thus besotted in his attachment to pleasure, and uncon-
- 8 trolled in his senses. The prince, being desirous of admonishing him, pondered long and concluded that an alliance on his part with the king's enemies would be beneficial to the

- 9 king. Then he cleverly made repeated visits to the king of Kási, who had numerous armies and chariots, as his protector, in order to regain his kingdom.
- 10 That king collected together his army against Alarka, and despatched a messenger to demand that the kingdom should be
- 11 gived up to Subáhu. Alarka refused, cognizant of his own justice, to give up the kingdom then in obedience to that command, and returned answer to the messenger of the king of
- 12 Kási;—"Let my elder brother come to me with affection and ask for the kingdom for himself. I will not yield up the
- 13 smallest bit of territory through fear on an attack." Even wise Subáhu made no request then. Supplication is not the duty of kshatriyas, for he was mighty in valour.
- 14 Then the king of Kási accompanied by all his army
- 15 marched to attack the country of king Alarka. And forthwith forming a close union with the contiguous kings he attacked with some of their many vassals, and reduced him to
- 16 subjection. And without harassing Alarka's neighbouring kings by molesting their realms, he thus subjugated both the
- 17 governors of the fortresses and the forest tribes. He reduced into submission some kings by bribes, and some by creating dissension, and others who were well-affected towards Alarka by conciliation.
- 18 Then the king with his small army, harassed by the adversary's host, found his treasury depleted extremely by the foe
- 19 that blockaded his city. And being thus straitened and with his treasury diminishing daily, he fell into intense dejection
- 20 and perplexity of mind. After suffering the keenest pain, he then bethought him of the ring, about which his mother Mádásá had formerly spoken to him. Then bathing and purifying himself, he addressed the bráhmans, and drawing out
- 22 the ring saw the motto thereof in clear characters. The king pronounced what his mother had written thereon, while the hair of his body was visibly standing erect, and his eyes were
- 23 expanded with joy:—"Association must be shunned by every soul; if to shun it be impossible, it should be formed with the
- 24 good, for association with the good is a panacea. Love must be shunned by every soul; if to eschew it be impossible, it should be displayed towards the desire for final emancipation from existence, for that desire is a cure therefor.'

- 25 Now having exclaimed repeatedly, 'How can men really attain bliss?', and having decided that it was through the desire for final emancipation since that desire is appropriate* 26 thereto, the king next pondering upon association with the good, and suffering the most poignant grief, visited illus-27 trious Dattátreya. On meeting him, magnanimous, stainless and devoid of attachments, he prostrated himself and wor-28 shipped him and addressed him with propriety; "O bráhma-man! show me favour, thou who art the refuge of refuge-seekers! Remove affliction from me, who am in affliction, and over-addicted to desires."

Dattátreya spoke.

- 29 "At once indeed do I remove thy affliction, O king. Tell me truly, wherefore hast thou that affliction, O king?"

Jaḍa spoke.

- 30 Being thus addressed by that wise Muni, the king pondered 31 over the seat and the nature of his three-fold affliction. The king, being noble in intellect, held long and repeated deliberation with his soul, being steadfast the while, and then laughing spoke thus:—
 32 "It is not myself, nor the earth, nor the sea, nor the stars, nor the wind, nor the air; but I wish for happiness in bodily 33 concerns. Pleasure and pain pass to deficiency or excess in this body composed of five elements: what welfare should 34 I not get, if such I might have, in another body wherein I should possess a constant and perfect good-disposition and should be raised and depressed through inequalities? Moreover a man of self-denial is perceived by his difference 35 from others. And so does bodily pleasure or pain generate a good disposition in one who looks upon the subtle third por-36 tion which exists merely a moment? Since pain dwells in the mind,† and pleasure again is a mental thing; therefore

* For tatsangato read tatsangatá?

† Manas.

neither pain nor pleasure belong to the Ego ; for the Mind is 37 not the Ego. Inasmuch as neither Self-consciousness,* nor Mind, nor Intellect† is the Ego, why then does the in-born 38 pain in something else affect me ? Since the Ego is not the Body, nor the Mind, the Ego is distinct from the Body and the Mind. Therefore let pleasures and pains dwell in the 39 Mind or in the Body ; how is the Ego concerned hereat ? If my elder brother covets the sovereignty over this body, it is an aggregate of five elements. How then is my Self concerned with the action of the qualities therein ? He when seated 40 therein and I are distinct as regards the Body. He who altogether lacks hands and other organs, flesh, bones and head, what connexion, even a slight one, has that man here with 41 elephants, horses, chariots and other treasures ? Hence my Self has no foe, it has no pain, it has no pleasure, nor city, nor treasury, nor army composed of horses, elephants, &c., neither has he, nor a third person, nor any one, nor have I any of 42 these things. For as the air that occupies the orb‡ of a small water-jar and a pitcher, though one, is perceived in many ways, so Subáhu and the king of Kási and I, methinks, are perceived among bodies by bodily differences."

CANTO XXXVIII.

The conversation between the Father and Son (continued).

A series of questions.

*Dattátraya moralizes on the consciousness of Self and its results, bráhmaṇ Dattátreya, renewed his speech, bending respectfully before him.

- 2 "No whit of affliction have I, O bráhmaṇ, when I look on things in a proper frame of mind: those who look on things 3 amiss are always sunk in a sea of unhappiness. In whatever thing a man's intellect becomes self-engrossed, he receives 4 woes therefrom and pays them back. There is not so much pain when a cat eats an unselfish sparrow or mouse, as when 5 it eats a domestic fowl. I then feel neither pain nor pleasure, since I am beyond the material world.* Whoever is subject to created things by means of created things, is indeed sensitive to pleasure and pain."

Dattátreya spoke.

- 6 "It is even so, O tiger-hero! as thou hast just declared.
 The thought 'it is mine' is the root of pain; and the thought 7 'it is naught of mine' is the root of calmness. From my question indeed has this sublime knowledge sprung up in thee, who hast cast off the conviction 'It is mine', as if it were the cotton of the seemul tree."†
- 8 "With the thought 'it is I' the germ has sprung up; with the thought 'it is mine,' the germ has grown shoulder-high:
 and home and lands are its topmost boughs; children and 9 wife and other relations are its young shoots; wealth and corn are its great leaves; it has developed not once only; and merit and demerit are its outmost flowers; pleasure and pain 10 are its full-grown fruit. There it fills the path of final emancipation; it oozes out at the commingling of fools; it is rich with festoons of bees which are the desire to be doing; 11 knowledge of what ought to be done is the full-grown tree.
 Those who, wearied with the road of worldly existence, betake themselves to its shade are dominated by error, knowledge 12 and happiness; where is their superiority? But those, who

- hew down the tree of selfishness with the axe of learning, which is sharpened on the whet-stone of association with the 13 good, travel along that path. Reaching the cool, dustless, thornless grove of religious knowledge, the wise, ceasing from action, attain supreme emancipation from existence.
- 14 "Neither art thou, O king, nor am I a gross object consisting of the elements and of organs : neither must I declare we 15 are an elementary rudiment, nor that we both have a soul as an eternal organ. Or, whom O king do I see the chief of us two, 16 since the conscious soul* is sublime, and the personal aggregate consists of qualities. Just as mosquitoes, the dumbur trees,† reeds, munja grass,‡ fish and water have separate existences though they dwell together, so is it with the body and the soul, O king."

Alarka spoke.

- 17 "Adorable Sir! through thy favour has sublime knowledge of this kind been revealed to me, which causes one to discern 18 the power of the Supreme Intellect ; but no stability remains here in my mind which is assailed by objects of sense ; nor moreover do I see how I may be delivered from the bonds of 19 Nature, or how I may cease to exist again, or how I may attain in perpetuity to this state of being devoid of qualities and 20 to one-ness with Brahma. Therefore, O bráhmaṇ, mighty in knowledge ! expound religious devotion§ properly to me, who thus beseech thee, prostrate before thee, for association with the good is beneficial to men."

CANTO XXXIX.

Yoga, or Religious Devotion.

Dattatreya continues his exhortation—Final emancipation from existence is attained through yoga or religious devotion,—and the means are restraint of the breath, mental abstraction, restraint of the senses, and deep meditation. These means are analyzed and explained at length. What circumstances are inimical to yoga. The improper performance of yoga entails bodily ailments. How such bodily ailments may be cured. The signs of the proper performance of yoga.

Dattatreya spoke.

- 1 A yogi's removal of ignorance by the attainment of know-
- ledge is 'mukti'; this is union with Brahma, and separation
- 2 from the three qualities of Nature. 'Mukti,' or final emancipa-
- tion from existence, comes from religious devotion; and reli-*
- 3 gious devotion comes rightly from knowledge, O king; know-
- ledge comes through suffering; suffering is the lot of those*
- 4 whose minds are engrossed with self. Hence the man who
- desires final emancipation should strenuously discard every*
- 5 association; when associations drop, the designation 'it is
- mine' disappears. Freedom from selfishness tends indeed to*
- 6 happiness; the perception of faults comes from passionlessness;
- 7 and passionlessness comes indeed from knowledge; knowledge
- 8 is preceded by passionlessness. That is one's house, where
- one resides; that is food, by which one lives; that which tends*
- to final emancipation is described as knowledge or ignorance.*
- By consuming merits and demerits, O king, and through not - doing voluntarily constant acts that ought to be done, through
- not amassing subsequent acts, and through diminishing acts
- that have been previously amassed, the body never again falls
- into the bonds of action.
- This I have declared to thee, O king! Listen also to this
- religious devotion from me, by adopting which the religious
- devotee may attain to an eternal identity with Brahma.

9 First indeed the soul must be conquered by soul; it is indeed a hard victory for religious devotees. He should put 10 forth effort in that victory. Hear from me the means thereto.
He should burn up his faults by restraining his breath,* and his stains by steady mental abstraction,† his sensual enjoyments by restraining his senses,‡ and his unbridled qualities by 11 deep meditation.§ Just as impurities are burnt out of metals when they are melted, so the faults wrought by the organs of 12 sense are burnt out by restraining the breath. The religious devotee should first accomplish the regulation of his breath.

Now stopping the inhalation|| is designated prāṇāyāma, 13 'restraining the breath.' Prāṇāyāma is of three kinds, which are named the 'slight,' the 'medium' and the 'intense.'¶ 14 I will describe its measure; hear it of me, O Alarka! The 'slight' extends during twelve mātṛas or prosodial instants, and the 'medium' is double that, and the 'intense' is well-15 known as containing thrice that number of instants. The time of a mātṛa is that of the winking and opening the eyelids once. The measure of twelve mātṛas is fixed for the 16 reckoning of the prāṇāyāma. With the first he should overcome perspiration, and with the second agitation, and with the third 17 dejection; he should gradually overcome his faults. Now as lions, tigers and elephants, when kindly treated become mild, so the breath falls within the control of the religious devotee.
18 As an elephant-driver brings a rutting elephant under control according to his wish, even so a religious devotee who has the 19 wish brings his breath to perfect control. For as the proud lion when tamed does not attack deer, so the obstructed wind 20 destroys men's guilt but not their body. Therefore the religious devotee while engaged in devotion should pay good heed to the restraining of his breath.

Hear its four conditions that bestow the result of final 21 emancipation. They are cessation of the consequences of action,

* Prāṇāyāma.

- and the power of obtaining everything,* harmony† and serenity,‡ O king! Hear also their nature as I describe it in order. Where the fruits of good and bad actions die away, and the mind attains pellucidity,§ that is called 'dhvasti.'
- When the religious devotee himself always continuously resists the desires of this world and of the next world, such as covetousness and infatuation, that is 'prápti' everlasting. When the religious devotee possessed of equal power perceives, by the advantage of his knowledge, the past and future remotely concealed meanings of the moon, sun, stars and planets, and gains success, then occurs the condition of prāpáyāma called 'samvid.' The state by which his mind, and his five vital airs, his organs of sense and the objects of those organs become serene, is called 'prasáda.'
- Hear also, O king, the characteristics of prāpáyāma, and what kind of seat is enjoined for one who always practises yoga.
- Adopting the padma half seat, and the svastika sitting posture, he should utter the syllable Om! in his heart and practise his religious devotion. Sitting evenly on an even seat, drawing in both his feet, and firmly fixing his thighs rightly in front, he should cover his mouth; he should sit without touching his private parts with his heels, with his senses under control; he should raise his head slightly; he should not close his teeth together. Gazing at the tip of his own nose and not looking around, the religious devotee should conceal the activity of darkness with passion, and that of passion with goodness, and taking his stand in unsullied goodness should practise devotion. He should hold in his organs of sense from their objects of sense, and his breath and other faculties and his mind, he should advance to abstraction with a steadfast cohesion. But he who should draw in his desires, as a tortoise draws in all its limbs, always delighting in soul and self-collected, sees soul in soul. The wise man after purifying himself externally and internally, and filling out his body from the navel to the neck, should advance to abstraction. A 'dhāraṇā,' or steady mental 36 abstraction, is called twelve prāṇāyāmas. Two kinds of dhāraṇā are known in religious devotion by devotees who are conversant with the truth. Moreover when a religious 37 devotee is steeped in devotion and controls his soul, all his faults perish, and he becomes whole; and he sees supreme 38 Brahma and the qualities of Nature separately, the sky and the primordial atoms and the unsullied soul.

Thus a religious devotee, who restricts his food and who is 39 intent on restraining his breath, should occupy ground, which has been thoroughly and gradually reclaimed, as it were his house. Unreclaimed ground when it is taken possession of 40 increases faults, diseases and foolishness, therefore he should not occupy unreclaimed ground.

'Prāṇāyāma' or restraining the breath is so called from the 41 restriction* placed on the breath; and this is called 'dhāraṇā' or mental abstraction, by which the mind is abstracted; since 42 the organs, which are occupied with words and other actions, are restrained by religious devotees by means of devotion, that is called 'pratyāhāra,' or restraining the senses.

And the means for this is declared by paramarshis who 43 were religious devotees, so that diseases and other faults may not spring up in a religious devotee. Just as the thirsty may 44 drink water gradually by vessels, pipes and other means, so a religious devotee who has overcome his distress may drink air. First in the navel, and next in the heart, and thirdly in the 45 breast, then in the neck, the mouth, the tip of the nose, in the eye, eye-brows, and the middle of the head, and in what is there-beyond, is known the highest mental abstraction. By 46 attaining to these ten mental abstractions he reaches equality with the imperishable. Not puffed up, nor hungry, nor 47 wearied, and undisturbed in mind, the yegī should practice his yoga respectfully in order to attain final occupation, O king!

* Upa-sam-rodha; not in the dictionary.

When it is neither very cold nor warm, when there is no 48 strife, when it is not windy, at these times the ascetic who is deep in meditation should not* practice yoga. In a place where there is a noise, or fire, or water, or where study is going 49 on, in a decayed cow-shed, at a place where four roads meet, amid a collection of dry leaves, in a river, in a burning-ground, in a place infested by snakes, in a place of fear, or on the edge 50 of a well, amid a number of funeral piles or ant-hills—in these places a learned man should avoid practising yoga. And if there is no appearance of goodness, he should avoid the place 51 and time. There should be no sight of evil during the practice of yoga; hence he should avoid that. Whoever disregards these places and in his infatuation practises yoga, verily his 52 faults tend to his hindrance. Harken to me in this. Deafness, stupidity, failure of memory, dumbness, blindness and fever—53 those several evils straightway befall him who practises yoga in ignorance.

If a yogi should have these faults through inadvertence, 54 yogis should attend to their cure in order to destroy them.
 Harken to me in this. He should engage in mental abstraction, after eating rice-gruel, mingled with oil and very warm.
 55 In the diseases of rheumatism, flatulence, and enlargement of the abdomen, circulation of the internal or obstructed wind of 56 the body should be regulated by a diet of rice-gruel.† In tremor‡ a yogi should fix his mind on a mountain as it is steady, in dumbness on the faculty of speech, and in deafness 57 on the ear; just as one whose tongue is parched with thirst should meditate on a mango fruit. In whatever respect the body is disordered, in that very respect he should think 58 steadily of whatever thought may remedy the disorder, such as, a cooling thought amidst heat, and a heating thought amidst cold. He should place a stake on his head and beat wood with wood.

* For na yogam read sa yogam, he should practice yoga?

† This is the translation of the Pandit of the Bengal Asiatic Society: the text seems obscure.

‡ For kalpe read kampe; so a MS. in the Sanskrit College.

59 In that way memory immediately recurs to a yogí who has lost his memory. He should think steadily of the wind and 60 fire which indeed pervade the heaven and the earth. These injuries are cured through what is non-human or what springs 61 from goodness. If goodness that is non-human should enter within a yogí, he should utterly burn out the sin that dwells in his body by steady thought of the wind and fire.

Thus must every soul that is wise in yoga compass its 62 preservation, O king, since the body is the means of attaining righteousness, wealth, love and final emancipation from existence. The yogí's knowledge perishes through perplexity at the narration of the marks of the activities, therefore the 63 activities must be hidden. Tranquillity,* perfect health, gentleness, a pleasant odour, scanty excretions, a fine complexion, benignity, and softness of voice, are indeed the first 64 indications of the activity of yoga. A loving person proclaims one's virtues in one's absence. That creatures do not fear him is the chiefest sign of complete perfection. He who is not injured by excessive cold, heat, or other natural agents, and does not fear other persons, has attained complete perfection.

The Yogí's bliss.

Dattátreya explains to Alarka the ailments that beset a yogí's soul and mentions their five varieties. He describes the yogí's duties, the stages by which final emancipation is attained, the eight premonitory marks of final emancipation, and the results of union with the Supreme Spirit.

Dattátreya spoke.

- 1 I will succinctly declare to thee the ailments† that prevail in the soul of a yogí when it is viewed : hearken to me.
- 2 He longs for rites performed with a view to future fruition, and the objects of human desire, for women, the fruits of alms-giving, for science, for supernatural power, for the baser 3 metals and riches, for heaven, god-head, and supreme godhead, for actions that yield copious supplies of elixir vitæ,* for flying on the storm-winds, for sacrifice, and the power of 4 inhabiting water and fire, for the fruits of śráddhas that contain every gift, and religious mortifications. Thus he longs 5 when mentally ailing by reason of fasting, meritorious acts, and worship of the gods, and by reason of those several actions.

A yogi should strenuously restrain his mind when beset 6 with such thoughts. By making his mind cling to Brahma he is liberated from ailments. When these ailments are overcome 7 other ailments still beset a yogi, arising out of goodness, passion and ignorance.

Ailments arising from illusive vision,† from hearing, and from the deity,‡ and mental aberration,§ and enthusiasm||— 8 these five are roots of bitterness which tend to embarrass the religious meditations of yogis. The ailment arising from 9 illusive vision is such to a yogi because in it appear Vedic matters, poetic matters, science and the mechanical arts without end. The ailment connected with hearing is so-called 10 because he perceives the meanings of sounds in all their completeness, and he receives sound from thousands of yojanas.
 11 The wise call that ailment one from the deity, as in the case of a madman, when like a god he sees all around and in the eight 12 directions. When the yogi's mind wanders without support through his own fault by reason of his fall from all the rules of 13 good custom¶—that is well known as mental aberration. When water engulphs the mind—that ailment is called enthusiasm.

- 14 All beings of divine origin, when their religious meditation is destroyed by these great and terrible ailments, revolve again and again.
- 15 Therefore the yogi, having clad himself with a mental white blanket, should cast his mind prone on supreme Brahma, and meditate on him. A yogi should always be intent on religious meditation, he should eat sparingly, he should subdue
- 16 his senses. The yogi should contemplate in his head the subtle conditions of the seven objects, viz., earth &c.; he should contemplate the subtle earth, until he comprehends its
- 17 subtlety.* He deems the earth to be his soul, and he quits its bonds. Moreover he quits the subtle taste in water,* and
- 18 also the form in the fire; and he likewise quits touch in the wind, as he bears the subtle form in mind; and he quits the
- 19 subtle activity of the sky, and likewise its sound. When he enters with his mind into the mind of all created things, his mind bearing a mental subtle condition of them becomes
- 20 subtle also. Likewise the man, conversant with religious devotion, on attaining to the intellect of all creatures, gains and relinquishes the most perfect subtlety of intellect. For
- 21 the man conversant with religious devotion, who relinquishes these seven subtle things after having thoroughly compre-
- 22 hended them, there is no retrogression, O Alarka! The soul-cognisant man, after fully seeing the subtlety of these subtle conditions of the seven objects, then utterly abandoning it
- 23 may proceed to supreme bliss. And towards whatever created thing he evinces feeling, O king! to that very thing he becomes attached, and he perishes. Therefore the corporeal being,
- 24 who after perceiving the mutually-associated subtle things abandons them, may gain supreme bliss. Having conjoined
- 25 these very seven subtle things, O king! passionlessness towards created and other things tends to the final emancipation from existence of the man cognisant of the entities.†

26 When he becomes attached to perfumes and other delights, he

 27 Brahma. Whatever subtle created thing the yogi desires, after transcending the subtle conditions of these seven objects, 28 in that very thing he meets his extinction, O king! He meets his extinction in the bodies of gods or Asuras, or of Gandarvas, Nágas, or Rákshasas; nowhere does he gain any attachment.

29 Where minuteness, and lightness,* greatness and the power of obtaining every thing, freedom of will,† and lordship, and 30 magical domination and again self-mortification are—one finds these eight sovereign-like qualities fully indicate union with 31 the Supreme Spirit,‡ O king. The quality of minuteness is far subtler than the subtle; lightness means swiftness; greatness consists in being universally revered; the power of obtain-32 ing everything, inasmuch as nothing is impossible of obtain-ment by him; freedom of will consists in his power of pervading all things; and lordship inasmuch as he is lord; magical 33 domination indeed, the yogi's seventh quality consists in his subjugating things; where the wishes are said to remain stationary,§ there|| is self-mortification. By these causes of 34 sovereignty I have declared O king! in eight points the indicatory marks¶ of the yogi's final emancipation from existence, and of his sublime union with the Supreme Spirit.

- 39 Brahma. As fire when thrown into fire may attain sameness ; and, bearing the same name and having the same substance
- 40 may not be perceived by any distinction ; even so the yogí, when his stains are burnt away, attains to union with supreme Brahma, and never acquires a separate existence, O king !
- 41 As water when thrown into water unites, so the yogi's soul attains to sameness in the Supreme Soul.

The Yogi's religious course.

Dattatreya expounds to Alarka how a yogí should live ;—from whom he should gather his alms ;—what his alms should be ;—how he should eat after worshipping the five vital airs ;—what his religious obligations are ;—and how he attains to final emancipation from existence.

Alarka spoke.

- 1 Adorable Sir ! I desire to hear thoroughly about a yogí's religious course, since the yogí while pursuing the way to Brahma does not sink into despondency.

Dattatreya spoke.

- 2 Respect and disrespect, which two things cause men pleasure and distress, these are opposites and effect the yogí's final
- 3 bliss. Respect and disrespect, these two things men indeed describe as poison and ambrosia ; of them disrespect is ambrosia, but respect is a dire poison.
- 4 He should plant his foot after it is purified by his eye ; he should drink water that has been purified through cloth ; he should use speech that is purified with truth ; and he should meditate on what is purified by the intellect.

- 5 The yogí should nowhere become a guest, nor attend 6 śráddhas, or sacrifices, pilgrimages to the gods, or festivals, nor visit the banker for the sake of any advantage. The yogí should roam about for alms among what is flung away, among what is smokeless, where the charcoal is extinguished, among all people who have eaten, but not constantly among all the 7 three. The yogí should not move about occupied in religious meditation and spoiling the path of the good, so as that folk 8 should despise him or treat him with disrespect. He should seek his alms among house-holders, and at the houses of vagrant mendicants :* his livelihood is declared to be the best 9 and first one. Also the ascetic should ever resort to modest, faithful, tranquil and high-souled brahman householders who 10 are learned in the Vedas ; above and after them, to uncorrupt and non-outcasted men. The practice of seeking alms among men of no caste is the last livelihood he should wish for.

- 11 Alms consists of rice-gruel,† or dilute butter-milk,‡ milk or barley-gruel,§ fruit, roots, or panic seed,|| grain, oil-cake, and 12 meal. And these are fine articles of food, and cause a yogí to obtain felicity. A muni should employ them with faith and with the most perfect meditation.

- 13 Having first taken one sip of water, let him remain silent with mind composed ; and then is prescribed the first oblation to the vital air called Prána,¶ and the second should be to the 14 vital air Apána; and the next to that called Sam-ána;††

- the fourth to that called Ud-ána;* and the fifth to that called
- 15 Vy-ána.† Having performed these oblations separately, while restraining his breath, he should at length eat according to his inclination. He should drink water once again, and after rinsing out his mouth, he should touch his heart.
- 16 Honesty and sanctity, self-sacrifice, and uncovetousness, and harmlessness are the five principal religious obligations
- 17 of mendicants. Freedom from anger, reverence towards gurus, purity, abstemiousness in food, and constant study of the
- 18 Vedas—these are the five well-known observances. He should devote himself to essential knowledge, which can effect his objects; for the multiplicity of knowledge that exists here is
- 19 a hindrance to religious meditation. He who acts with the thirst, that he ought to know this and he ought to know that, may perhaps never gain that knowledge in thousands of ages.
- 20 Discarding associations, subduing anger, eating sparingly, and controlling his organs, he should regulate the gates of his body by the intellect, and apply the understanding to
- 21 profound contemplation. The yogi who is constantly occupied with religious meditation should always have due recourse to profound contemplation, in empty places and in
- 22 caves and in forests. Control over the speech, control over the actions, and control over the mind, are the three controls: he who invariably possesses these controls is a great ‘three-
- 23 control’ ascetic. Who, O king, is agreeable, and who is disagreeable to him to whom all this universe, both real and unreal, and composed of good qualities and bad qualities, is composed of the Supreme Soul?
- 24 When he whose intellect is purified, to whom clods and gold are alike, and whose mind is thus composed towards all created things, comprehends the supreme eternal and immutable to be the supreme condition he ceases to be born
- 25 again. The Vedas and all sacrifices and ceremonies are very good; prayer is better than sacrifice; and the path of know

- ledge than prayer; and profound contemplation cut off from associations and feelings is better than knowledge; when that 26 is attained, the eternal is gained. He who is composed in mind, who is intent on Brahma, who is attentive, and pure, whose delight is concentrated on one object, and who controls his organs—that high-souled man may compass this yoga or religious meditation; thereupon he gains final emancipation from existence through his own religious meditation.

CANTO XLII.

Exposition of the word "Om" with regard to the Law of Religious Devotion.

Dattatreya expounds the composition, meaning and efficacy of the sacred word "Om"—It designates the Supreme Soul Brahma; and thorough comprehension of it and meditation on it bring final absorption into Brahma.

Dattatreya spoke.

- 1 The yogi who lives thus, rightly busied in religious devo-
- tion, cannot be turned away even by hundreds of other lives.
- 2 And when he has beheld the Supreme Soul, visible, existing
- in all forms, whose feet and head and neck the universe
- 3 composes, the lord and creator of the universe, let him in - order to attain thereto utter the one mighty and holy syllable
- OM! Let it be his study as he listens to its true form.
- 4 A á and U and M are its three letters; these are its three
- instants; they are characterized by goodness, passion and
- 5 ignorance. And another, a half instant,* which has its seat
- on the top of the syllable, is without quality and can be
- understood by yogis only. It is called gándhári,† as it is to
- 6 be uttered in the gándhára note.‡ Being pronounced it

* Anusvára, into which the M may be converted?

‡ See note * page 130.

reaches the head, and it conveys the feeling of ants moving over the body.

- 7 As the syllable OM being pronounced reaches the head, the yogí who is lost in meditation of OM should become united with Brahma, the Supreme Soul. Life is his bow, the soul is 8 his arrow, Brahma is the target sublime. It is to be pierced by the heedful man; he should be united with Brahma, as the arrow becomes embedded in the target.

- The syllable OM, consisting of three and a half instants, 9 should be known in its true sense as the three Vedas—the Ric', Sáma and Yajus—the three worlds, the three fires, and 10 the three deities Vishnu, Brahmá and S'iva. And the yogí, who is absorbed in religious meditation thereon, may obtain extinction therein.

- Moreover the letter A is designated the bhúr-loka, or terrestrial world; and the letter U the bhuvar-loka, or atmospheric 11 world; and the letter M with its nasal mark is decided to be the svar-loka, or celestial world. Now the first instant is called the discrete,* and the second the indiscrete, and the 12 third instant is the intellectual faculty;† the half instant is the highest abode.‡ In this very order must these stages of 13 religious meditation be known. By uttering the word OM, everything both existent and non-existent may be grasped. Now the first instant is short, the second is long, and the 14 third is prolated, and the half instant is not cognisant to speech.

- Such is this word. Brahma is designated the Supreme 15 "Om." The man who truly understands it and further meditates on it, escaping the circle of mundane existence 16 casts off the three-fold bonds, and gains sublime extinction in Brahma, the Supreme Soul. And he who is bound with the unconsumed results of his actions, after experiencing death

CANTO XLIII.

An account of Ill Omens.

Dattátreya mentions the signs of approaching and impending death, which are partly natural phenomena and partly dreams—also the appropriate seasons for religious devotion—and by various similes and apophthegms indicates how final emancipation from existence is to be attained—Alarka thanks Dattátreya for all the instruction and, going to the king of Káśi and Subáhu, relinquishes his kingdom in their favour.

Dattátreya spoke.

- 1 "Listen Mahárája; I will declare those ill omens to thee, by considering which the yogi knows his own death.
- 2 "The man who does not see the path of the gods,* the pole-star, the planet Venus, the moon's shadow and the morning
- 3 star,† may not live more than a year. The man, who sees the sun's orb devoid of rays and fire encircled with rays, does
- 4 not live more than eleven months. He, who in his dreams clearly perceives gold and silver in his vomit and in his urine
- 5 and fæces, may live ten months. He who sees departed persons, Pis'ác'as and other demons and the cities of the Gandharvas and golden-coloured bulls, lives nine months.
- 6 He who when stout becomes thin, and when thin becomes stout quite unaccountably, and loses his natural functions,
- 7 lives for eight months. He, whose foot becomes cracked at the heel or at the toe in dust and in mud, lives seven months.

 9 blue bird alights on one's head, that indicates a life of six 10 months. When a man is assailed by flocks of crows or a 11 shower of dust, or when he sees his shadow unnatural, he 12 lives four or five months. When he sees lightning flashing 13 in the south in a cloudless sky, or sees a rainbow at night, 14 his life will last two or three months. He who cannot see his own body in clarified butter, in oil, in a mirror, or in water, or who sees it head-less, does not live more than a month.
 12 When the smell from a yogi's body resembles that of a goat or the smell from a corpse, know O king that his life will be 13 half a month. When one's breast and foot dry up immediately after he has bathed, and when water does not 14 quench his thirst as he drinks, he lives ten days.

“When the wind as it strikes one cuts one's vitals, and when one feels no delight from the touch of drops of water, 15 his death has arrived. Whoever sits on a bear, a monkey or a carriage, and goes singing towards the south in his sleep, 16 for him death brooks no delay. He whom a woman clad in red or black raiment, and singing and laughing, carries off to 17 the south in his sleep, he will live no longer. He who sees a single powerful naked mendicant laughing and leaping in 18 his sleep may find death impending. The man, who sees himself sunk to the crown of his head in a sea of mud in his 19 sleep, dies at once. And he, who sees charcoal amidst the hair of the head, or ashes or a waterless river issuing from a serpent, in his sleep, will after ten days die on the eleventh 20 day. He, who in his sleep is beaten with stones by formidable and hideous black men who raise their weapons aloft, 21 may die at once. He, in front of whom a she-jackal runs howling at sun-rise, whether meeting him or passing him,

He, who has seen both a rainbow at midnight and all the planets in the day-time, should as a sensible man deem his life consumed away. He, whose nose becomes crooked, and whose ears bend down or stick up, and whose left eye waters, has lost his life. When his face becomes reddish, or his tongue black, a wise man should know that his death is impending. And one should know that he, who in his sleep journeys to the south on a camel, or an ass, or a carriage, will die outright. He, who cannot hear his own murmuring when he shuts his ears, and who cannot see the light with his eyes, lives indeed no longer. He over whom a door is closed after he has fallen into a pit, and who cannot rise up from the hole, in his sleep, his life ends thereat. Sight directed upwards and unsteady,* and blood-shot and rolling around, and warmth in the mouth, and dryness at the navel prognosticate a new body for men. He who in his sleep may enter the fire, and not come out therefrom, or if he similarly enters water, his life ends thereat. The man who is attacked by evil spirits at night or by day, without doubt meets death at the end of the seventh night. One should pronounce that death is impending over the man who sees his own clean white clothing red or black.
- 34 "A revolution in men's natural disposition and a reversal in their nature proclaim always that Yama and Death are at hand; as when a man despises and reviles those very persons to whom he has always been well-behaved, and whom he has considered most deserving of his reverence; when he does not worship the gods; when he abuses the aged, the gurus and brahmans; and when he shows no kind treatment to his mother, father, or sons-in-law, or to yogis skilled in learning or to other high-souled men. But when the time arrives, wise men† must understand that.
- 38 "And yogis must always diligently understand at the close of the year that ill omens produce their results day and night, 39 O king. And the obvious very formidable series of results therefrom must be considered ; and having ascertained them, 40 he should fix that time in his mind, O king. And having ascertained that time accurately, the yogí should resort to a safe place and apply himself to religious devotion, so that 41 that time may not be fruitless to him. And the yogí having beheld the ill omen and abandoning the fear of death, and having regarded then its nature, as it has come after a long 42 time, should apply himself to religious devotion as an adept therein in just that part of the day, both in the fore-43 noon, and in the after-noon and at mid-day on that day. Or where he has seen that ill omen during a part of the night, there he should engage in religious devotion until that 44 day arrives. Then abandoning all fear, and mastering that time self-controlled, he should stay in that habitation or 45 wherever he feels his soul firm, and engage in religious meditation on the Supreme Soul after overcoming the three qualities : and when his soul grows composed of the Supreme Soul, he 46 should cease even from the use of his mind. Thereupon he attains to that sublime absorption into the Supreme Soul, which is beyond the senses, which transcends the intellect and which is unspeakable.

47 “ All this I have declared to thee, Alarka, in its real meaning.
 Hearken to me briefly how thou mayest attain to that Brahma.

48 “ The moon-stone does not emit water, if untouched by the rays of the moon ; that is a well known simile for a yogí.
 49 That the sun-stone as long as it remains untouched by the rays of the sun does not emit fire, is also a simile for a yogí.
 50 Ants, rats, ichneumons, house-lizards, and sparrows inhabit a house like the owner of it, and when it is broken down they 51 go elsewhere ; but since they feel no such pain at the destruction of that house as the owner feels, O king ; that simile 52 points to the yogí's perfect bliss. An ant, though it is composed of earth and has but a small body, constructs a heavy heap of earth with the still minuter point of its mouth : that is a 53 lesson for a yogí. When yogís see a tree, clothed with leaves 54 flowers and fruit, being destroyed by cattle, birds, men and other creatures, they become perfected. When a yogí sees the tender horns of the young ruru deer, which look merely like the forehead-mark, grówing together with him, he may attain 55 final beatitude. When a yogí takes a vessel full of liquid from a mound on the earth, and when he sees the human 56 body towering up high, what has he not learnt? When a yogí has truly understood the effort that a man makes, when all his wealth sufficient for his living has been dug up, he 57 has attained success. That is one's house where one dwells; that is food on which one lives; and that is wealth by which one prospers; that is happiness when one thinks 'what 58 self-interest have I in this matter.' Just as a man, although he is importuned by his organs, accomplishes his object by their means, so a yogí may accomplish his highest aim by means of the intellect and other faculties of other persons."

Jaḍa spoke.

59 Then king Alarka prostrated himself before Atri's son, and bowing courteously and filled with intense joy, spoke thus :—

Alarka spoke.

60 "O joy! that this most sore dread, which has sprung from my defeat by my foes, and which has rendered me anxious about my life, has been caused by the gods, O bráhmaṇ!
 61 O joy, that the victorious attack from the immense hosts of the king of Káśí (routed by which I have come here) has 62 brought about for me this meeting with thee! O joy, that my army was weak! O joy, that my dependants were slain!
 63 O joy, that my treasury became exhausted! O joy that I grew terrified! O joy, that thy feet came to my recollection! O joy, that all thy words have found an abode in my 64 mind! O joy, that I have both gained knowledge from meeting with thee, Sir! O joy, that thou hast also shown compassion to me, O bráhmaṇ!

65 "Although destitute a man attains success at the auspicious rise of the Soul, just as this calamity tends to my benefit

- 66 through my meeting with thee. Subáhu is my benefactor, and so also is Kási's lord, through both of whom I have come 67 to thy presence, O noble lord of the yogís. Now I have had the stains of ignorance burnt out by the fire of thy favour.
I will so strive that I may not become such a vessel of misery.
68 I will quit my position as a householder, which is a forest of trees of pain, on receiving permission from thee, my highsouled instructor in wisdom."

Dattátreya spoke.

- 69 "Depart O king! fare thee well! As I have declared unto thee, so do thou practise, free from egotism, free from pride, in order to attain to final emancipation from existence."

Jaḍa spoke.

- 70 Thus addressed he prostrated himself before that Muni, and hastened to where the king of Kási and his elder brother 71 Subáhu were. Alarka hastening near smilingly addressed the king of Kási, that valiant hero, in the presence of 72 Subáhu :—"O king of Kási, who desirest my kingdom, enjoy thou the mighty kingdom even as it pleases thee, or give it to Subáhu!"

The king of Kási spoke.

- 73 "Why, O Alarka! hast thou relinquished the kingdom without a contest? This is not right for a kshatriya; and 74 thou, Sir, knowest the law of the kshatriyas. When his counsellors are vanquished, a king should abandon the fear of death, and fix his arrow aiming at his enemy as his target.
75 Having conquered him, a king should certainly enjoy the choice delights of his desire, and should sacrifice with large sacrifices in order to gain final bliss."

Alarka spoke.

- 76 "Even of this very nature was my mind before, O hero!
77 Now my object is changed, and do thou hear the cause. As this body is an aggregate formed of the elements, so is the heart of men, and so are all the qualities likewise even among 78 all animals. Since this intellectual faculty is single indeed, and there is no other, how then does knowledge create the

- 79 condition of friend and enemy, of lord and servant ? I fell into that dire misery which was produced by fear of thee, and I have gained knowledge from Dattátreya's favour, O 80 king. When one subdues all the senses, and abandons utterly every association, and fixes one's mind on Brahma, in that 81 victory is the sublimest victory. And since there is nothing else to be accomplished in order to attain that final beatitude, 82 therefore restraining his senses he attains final beatitude. I then am not thy foe ; nor art thou my enemy ; Subáhu here is not my injurer. I have seen all this as my own soul ; seek then another adversary, O king !"
- 83 Thus he addressed the king. Then uprose Subáhu delighted, and saluting his brother with the word ' O joy ! ' spoke thus to the king of Káśi.

CANTO XLIV.

Jaḍa's exposition in his conversation with his father (concluded).

Subáhu explains to the king of Káśi that it was to reclaim his brother Alarka to a proper frame of mind, that he had induced the king to conquer Alarka—Subáhu expounds to the king the conditions of attaining final emancipation from existence, and both depart—Alarka resigns his kingdom to his son, and betaking himself to the forest attains final bliss.

Here ends Jaḍa's exposition to his father.

The Birds then conclude by saying that Jaḍa and his father attained final bliss.

Subáhu spoke.

- 1 " In that I have resorted to thee for refuge, O tiger-king,
 I have secured every object. I will depart. Rest thou happy ! "

The king of Káśi spoke.

- 2 " What object hast thou secured, Sir ? And what aim hast thou attained ? Declare that to me, O Subáhu, for I 3 feel a keen curiosity. Thou didst stir me up, saying ' Conquer and give me the great kingdom, that belonged to my great-grandfather and is dominated by Alarka.' Thereupon I attacked the kingdom of this thy younger brother, and brought this army for thee. Therefore enjoy it as befits thy race."*

Subáhu spoke.

5 "O king of Kási, hearken, why I made this endeavour, and 6 stirred thee up, Sir, to an unwonted endeavour. This my brother, who understands truth is addicted† to unrefined 7 pleasures. My two elder brothers are wise and unbeguiled, because our mother dropped admonition into the ears of both of them and into mine, just as she dropped milk in their 8 mouths and mine during our infancy, O king. Our mother taught those subjects, that men consider should be known, to both of them and to me, but not to him, Alarka, 9 who wished to be illustrious, O king. As merchants, who are travelling for gain, feel a common grief, if one of them 10 perishes, so is it with us, O king. Since he, Alarkā, has caught the infatuation of domestic life, and is perishing, O king; since he is related to this my body, and bears the idea 11 of a brother; hence I, concluding that he would obtain the perception of passionlessness through suffering, resorted to thee, 12 Sir, to carry out the undertaking. Therefore he has been brought through distress to passionlessness through instruction, O king; the work has been accomplished; mayest thou 13 fare well. I depart. 'Having dwelt in Madálasá's womb, and having drank of her breast, may he not follow the path that 14 is travelled by the sons of other women, O king!' So I deliberated and I did it all by resorting to thee; and it has been accomplished. I will again depart to seek final beatitude.

15 "I do not approve of those, O king! who neglect their own family, a kinsman, or a friend, when these are in difficulties; for, though possessed of organs, they are maimed indeed.

- 16 He who falls into difficulties when he has an able friend, or member of his own family, or kinsman, they should be denied righteousness, wealth, love and final emancipation, but he 17 should not be denied them. Through association with thee, O king, I have accomplished this great undertaking. Well mayest thou fare! I will depart. Mayest thou participate in knowledge, most noble king!"

The king of Káśi spoke.

- 18 "Thou hast done a great benefit to good Alarka; how is it 19 thou dost not turn thy mind to benefit me? Since association of good men with good men yields fruit and is not barren, therefore I have attained the prosperity that is bound up with thy patronage."

Subáhu spoke.

- 20 "The four-fold aims of men are known as righteousness, wealth, pleasure, and final emancipation from existence. There thou hast righteousness, wealth and pleasure, all of 21 them,—the last is wanting. I will succinctly expound it to thee; listen now with singleness of mind thereto; and having heard and rightly deliberated strive after bliss, O king!
 22 Thou must have no dealings, O king, with the notion "Mine," nor the notion "I"; for when one considers rightly, righteousness has no correlation in the absence of righteousness.
 23 When thou hast thought in thy soul, 'I must comprehend of what I am'; when thou hast thought in after nights 'I must consider the external and the internal'; thou must discern him whose beginning, attributes and ending are imperceptible, who is changeless, devoid of intelligence, both perceptible and imperceptible; and thou shalt discern 'Who am I?'
 25 When this indeed is discerned thou hast discerned everything. To discern the soul in what is not soul, and one's own property in what is not one's own—this is folly. I as such have passed everywhere, O king, according to the intercourse of the world. I have declared all this that thou hast asked: now I depart."
 27 Having spoken thus to the king of Káśi, the wise Subáhu departed. And the king of Kási having done obeisance to Alarka departed to his own city.

- 28 Alarka, also, enthroned his eldest son as king, and abandoning every tie resorted to the forest, for his own perfection.
 29 After a long time becoming purged of the contrary qualities and free from all worldly possessions, he attained an unparal-30 leled pitch of religious devotion and gained supreme and final bliss. Perceiving all this universe with its gods, demons and 31 human beings perpetually bound and being bound in the meshes woven of the qualities; being drawn by the causes brought into existence by sons and other children, by nephews and other relations, and by one's own and other people's pro-32 perty, and so forth; oppressed with woe, wearing diverse appearances, wholly enclosed within the mud of ignorance, possessing no deliverer; and perceiving himself wholly passed 33 beyond, the large-minded king sang this song—"Alas, woe is it that I occupied the kingdom formerly! So have I since learnt. There is no happiness superior to religious devotion."

Jada spoke.

- 34 Dear father, do thou practise this sublime religious devotion to attain final emancipation from existence; whereby thou shalt attain to that Supreme Soul, in reaching which 35 thou shalt not grieve. Then I also will go. What need have I of sacrifices? what need of prayers? Action in one who has attained success works towards re-absorption into the 36 Supreme Soul. Obtaining permission from thee, I also, free from the contrary qualities, free from worldly possessions, will so strive after final emancipation that I may attain to supreme bliss.

The birds spoke.

- 37 Having thus addressed his father, and having obtained permission from him, the wise Jada, abandoning all worldly 38 possessions, departed, O bráhmaṇ. His father also, who was most large-minded, in like course after becoming a vána-39 prastha entered on the fourth stage of life. There having met with his son, and having forsaken the bonds formed of the qualities &c., he attained supreme perfection, being wise and having acquired self-knowledge at the same time.

- 40 All this has been declared to thee, O bráhmaṇ, which thou, Sir, did ask of us—at full length and with truth. What else dost thou desire to hear?

CANTO XLV.

The Birth of Brahmá.

Jaimini thanks the Birds for all the information they have given him, and asks about creation, the world, mankind &c.,—In reply they relate what Márkaṇḍeya had taught Krauśtuki regarding all those matters, as follows.

Márkaṇḍeya extols this Purāṇa as having emanated from Brahmá and having been handed down by eminent ṛishis—Adoration is paid to Brahmá.

The identity of Pradhána and Prakṛiti is asserted—Brahmá alone existed at first—From him emanated Pradhána, which is called the Imperceptible—Out of it issued Mahat (the Intellectual principle)—And out of Mahat issued Ahankára (the principle of Individuality) with its three characters, the Evolving, the Modifying, and the Energizing—The Evolving Ahankára created sound, touch, form, taste and smell, and their corresponding elements, ether, air, light, water and earth—The Modifying Ahankára produced the eleven human organs—The characters of the elements are expounded.

Mahat and the other principles produced an egg, the composition of which is described—It was animated by Brahmá as the Soul, and it contained the universe, the gods, demons and mankind.

Jaimini spoke.

- 1 Ye have well related this to me, O noble bráhmaṇs, both activity and inactivity, the two-fold deeds enjoined by the
- 2 Veda. Ah, through your father's favour, ye have such knowledge as this, by which ye have overcome folly although
- 3 ye have descended to this animal state. Happy are ye in that your mind, steadfast in your pristine state towards the attainment of final emancipation, is not swayed by the bewilderingments that spring from objects of sense. O joy that the wise lord Márkaṇḍeya made you known to me as the dissipators of every doubt! For men who wander in this closely-thronged mundane existence there is available association with such as your honours; not for ascetics. If I after gaining association with you who have perspicacity in knowledge should not succeed in my object, then assuredly* there can be no success for me elsewhere. Both in activity and in inactivity, in knowledge and deed, no one else has, I think, a mind so unsullied as your honours have.

If then your mind, O noble bráhmans, is favourable towards me, then deign to expound this completely;—How did this universe, both moveable and immoveable, come into existence? And how will it fall into dissolution at the proper time, most excellent bráhmans? And how came the families† that sprang from the gods, the rishis, the pitris, created things &c. ? And how did the Manvantaras occur? And what was the history of the families of old; and whatever creations and whatever dissolutions of the universe have occurred; and how the ages have been divided; and what the duration of the Manvantaras has been; and how the earth remains stable; and what is the size of the world; and what are the oceans, mountains and rivers and forests according to their situation; what is the number of the worlds, the bhúr-loka, svar-loka &c., including the lower regions; and what is the course of the sun, moon, and other planets, of the stars and heavenly bodies also. I wish to hear of all this which is destined to subversion;‡ and what will be the end when this universe is dissolved.

The Birds spoke.

Unparalleled is this load of questions which thou hast asked, O bráhmaṇ : we will declare it to thee ; listen to it here, O Jaimini, as Márkaṇḍeya expounded it formerly to the calm and wise Krauṣṭuki, a young bráhmaṇ, who had completed his term of studentship. Krauṣṭuki asked the high-souled Márkaṇḍeya, whom the bráhmaṇs were waiting-upon, what you have asked, my lord ; and we will tell thee what the Muni, Bhṛigu's son, told him with affection ; listen, O bráhmaṇ, after having paid adoration to the Forefather Brahmá, the lord of the universe, the origin of the universe, who presided over creation, who in the form of Viṣṇu presides over its maintenance, and who in the form of the terrible Śiva destroys it at the dissolution.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

Formerly as soon as Brahmá, whose origin is inscrutable, came into being, this Purāṇa and the Vedas issued* from his mouths ; and many paramarṣhis composed the collections of the Purāṇas ; and the Vedas were divided by them in a thousand ways. Righteousness and knowledge, passionlessness, and sovereignty—these four indeed were not perfected without instruction from him, the high-souled. His seven mind-born† pishis took the Vedas from him, and his mind-born ancient munis took the Purāṇa. C'yavana took it from Bhṛigu, and he declared it to the bráhmaṇs, and this purāṇa was repeated by the high-souled pishis to Dakṣha ; and then Dakṣha repeated it to me. I will now tell it to thee : it destroys strife and sin. Hear all this from me with composure, illustrious Muni, as I formerly heard it when Dakṣha related it.

Having paid adoration to the origin of the universe, unborn, changeless, the asylum, the upholder of the moveable and immoveable universe, the supreme object, Brahmá, the first male,—the cause which, itself unbegotten,‡ works in production, maintenance and dissolution, wherein everything is 29 established—having paid adoration to him, Hiranya-garbha, the framework of the world, the wise, I will duly tell of the 30 multitude of created things, matchless, great, primeval, formed for special ends, various in shape, possessing characteristics, as-certainable by the five standards of measure, possessing the 31 five streams of life, governed by the soul, existent as if perpetual and temporary—listen thereto with sublime composure, illustrious Sir!

32 Pradhána is the cause, which is designated the Imperceptible, and which the great rishis call the subtle, permanent Prakriti, 33 composed of good and evil. Brahmá at first existed certain, imperishable, undecaying, immeasurable, self-dependent, des-34 titute of odour, form, and taste, devoid of sound and touch, without beginning or end, the origin of the universe, unchanged* by the power of the three qualities, not modern,† 35 unknowable. Subsequent to the dissolution, all this universe was pervaded by him completely.

Then from him, in whom the three qualities existed in equipoise, and in whom the Soul‡ became prevalent, O Muni; 36 and next from the coming into existence of the qualities which were being created, at the time of creation the first 37 principle Pradhána came into existence. It enveloped Mahat;§ as the seed is enveloped by its rind, even so Mahat was enveloped by the Imperceptible. It is three-fold, that characterized by goodness, that by passion, and that by 38 ignorance. Then from it was evolved Ahankára,|| which is three-fold, the Modifying,¶ the Energizing, and the Evol-39 ving†† which is characterized by darkness. And it was enveloped by Mahat, just as Mahat was by the Imperceptible.

Now the Evolving Ahankára, modifying itself, created the 40 subtle element‡‡ of sound§§ next. From the subtle element of sound came the Ether, which has the property of sound ;

 now ether is the sound-element, and the evolving Ahankúra 41 enveloped it then. The subtle element of touch is indeed born next without doubt; the mighty Air is born, its pro-42 perty of touch is well known. And the air, modifying itself, created the subtle element of form ; Light was produced from 43 the air ; it is said to have the property of form ; the air which is the element of touch enveloped the element of form. And light, modifying itself created the subtle element of taste ; 44 therefrom indeed water also was produced ; it has the property of taste ; now the element of form enveloped the water* 45 which is the element of taste. And the water, modifying itself, created the subtle element of smell ; therefrom Solid 46 Matter† is produced ; smell is well known to be its property.
 Now in each element resides its peculiar subtle element ; thereby its possession of that subtle element is a well-established fact. And hence those elements are uniform, inasmuch as no 47 difference can be predicated. They are all neither calm, nor terrible, nor crass.‡ This is the creation of the elements and the subtle elements from Ahankára when it is characterized by darkness.

48 From Ahankára in its Modifying character, which is distinguished by goodness and possesses goodness in excess, the modificatory creation began at once.

49 The five organs of the intellect,§ and the five organs of action, men call these the energetic|| organs ; they are the ten 50 Vaikárika deities. The mind¶ is the eleventh organ among them. Such are the Vaikárika deities known to be. The 51 ear, the skin, the pair of eyes, the tongue, and fifthly the nose ; men say these are the organs connected with the intellect for the purpose of perceiving sound and the other impressions. The pair of feet, the anus, the organ of generation, the pair of hands, and the voice may rank as fifth with 52 them; walking, evacuation, sexual delight, manual work and speech—that is the work for each of these organs respectively.

Ether has the element* of sound only. When the element 53 of touch accrued, Air comes into existence with two properties†; touch is known to be its peculiar property. Moreover, when to form accrued both the properties, sound and touch, 54 then Fire also came into existence with its three‡ properties; it has sound and touch and form. Sound, and touch and 55 form,—when the element of taste accrued to them, then Water with its four properties came into existence; it is to be known as being characterized by taste. Sound and touch and form 56 and taste, when smell accrued, they consolidated with the element of smell enclosed this Earth; hence earth has five properties; it is seen to be the gross one among created things.

57 Calm and terrible and crass§ are their distinguishing marks; thereby they are known: they contain one another
58 through their mutual interpenetration. Within the earth is contained all this|| visible and invisible world firmly enclosed. And those distinguishing marks are perceptible by 59 the organs of sense, and are recollected by reason of their permanency. They take each successive one the property of its preceding one. These seven principles when un-combined 60 are distinct and have various energies: they could not have created mankind, unless they had united. And meeting in 61 mutual combination, they become mutually dependent; and when they all unite into one, they have the marks of a single complex body.

By reason of their being governed by the Soul¶ and also 62 through the favour of the Imperceptible, Mahat and the other principles, which have different limits, cause an egg to come into existence. There like a bubble on water, the egg gradually increased by means of the things that existed, O Sage 63 most intelligent! In its enlarged state it lay on the water.

64 The Soul,* having increased inside the egg sprung from Pra-65 kṛiti, took the name Brahmá; it indeed was the first cor-
 66 poreal being, it indeed is called Purusha. And Brahmá 67 existed first, the original maker of created beings. That egg enclosed all these three worlds with all that they contain moveable and immoveable. Meru was born from it, and as 68 the after-birth were born the mountains; the oceans were the fluid contained within that egg which held the great Soul.
 Within that egg was all this world, with the gods and de-69 mons and mankind, and the continents and other lands, the mountains and oceans, and the throng of luminous worlds.

Then the egg was enveloped by water, air, fire and ether 68 and by the evolving Ahankára externally, ten times over by each of them. It was then surrounded† by Mahat which I 69 have mentioned, which had the same magnitude. Mahat together with them all was enveloped by the Imperceptible.
 With these seven coverings formed from Prakṛiti was the 70 egg enveloped. Enveloping one another the eight Prakṛitis existed. This very Prakṛiti is permanent; and that Purusha is limited by it.

71 Hear thou, moreover, briefly of him who is spoken of by the name Brahmá. Just as one sunk in water, on emerging from it, seems to be born from water‡ and flings the water 72 away, so Brahmá is both Prakṛiti and the Soul.§ The Imperceptible is declared to be his sphere of action;|| hence 73 Brahmá is called Kshetra-jña, the Soul. A man should know all these characteristics of the Soul and its sphere of action.

Such was this creation from Prakṛiti; and it is governed by the Soul; the first stage of creation was preceded by non-intelligence, it became manifest like the lightning.

CANTO XLVI.

The computation of Brahmá's life.

Márkaṇḍeya moralizes on Brahmá and Prakṛiti—and describes Vishṇu and Ś'iva as special forms of Brahmá—He explains how human and divine years are reckoned, the duration of the four ages, the Kṛita, the Tretá, the Dvápára and the Kali, and of a Manvantara, and the length of Brahmá's day and life.

Kraushtuki spoke.

- 1 Adorable Sir! thou hast related to me correctly the genesis of the egg, and thou hast told me of the birth of the mighty 2 Soul Brahmá within the egg of Brahmá. I wish to hear this from thee, O scion of Bhrigu's race, when things are not created, and nothing exists, everything having been destroyed by Time at the end of the dissolution of the Universe.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 3 When all this universe becomes dissolved in Nature,* this 4 dissolution is designated 'natural'† by the wise. When the Imperceptible subsists within itself, and when all modification is suspended, Nature and the Soul‡ subsist with samc-5 ness of character. Then both darkness and goodness subsist in equipoise, neither being in excess or in deficiency, and 6 permeated by each other. Just as oil exists in sesamum seeds, or as ghee in milk, so passion also exists permeant within darkness and goodness.
7 The day of the Supreme Lord§ lasts from the birth of Brahmá, as long as the two half paras which compose his life;|| and his night during the dissolution is of the same 8 duration.¶ Now at the dawn of day he awakes, he who is the origin of the universe, who is without beginning, who is the cause of all things, whose soul transcends thought; every one else works in an inferior way.

- 9 The Supreme God, quickly enters into Nature and the Soul, as the lord of the universe, and agitates them with his intense 10 supernatural power. Just as love, or a breeze of Spring, entering into young women tends to produce agitation, so does he, who is the embodiment of supernatural power.
 11 When Pradhána is agitated, the god Brahmá is born and is contained within the cavity of the egg, as I have already 12 told thee. At first he is the agitator; as the husband of Nature, he is the thing to be agitated; and he exists with 13 contraction and expansion even in the state of Pradhána. He is born, though he is the birth-place of the universe; though devoid of qualities, he possesses the quality of passion; when he assumes the character of Brahmá, he engages in creation.
 14 In the character of Brahmá he creates mankind; then possessing an excess of goodness, he becomes Vishṇu and 15 protects them righteously; then, with darkness preponderating in him, he ~~has~~ Rudra dissolves the whole universe with its three worlds, and sleeps. He possesses the three qualities, 16 and yet he is destitute of qualities. Just as he is at first the pervading Soul, then the preserver, and lastly the destroyer,* so he takes appellations which designate him as Brahmá, 17 Vishṇu or Śiva. As Brahmá he creates the world; and as Rudra he destroys them; and as Vishṇu he holds a neutral position. These are the three conditions of the Self-existent.
 18 Passion and Brahmá; darkness and Rudra; goodness and Vishṇu the lord of the world: these indeed are the three 19 deities; these indeed are the three qualities. These verily are mutually paired, and are mutually dependant: they are not separated for a moment; they do not forsake one another.
 20 Thus Brahmá, the four-faced god of gods, is anterior to the universe: assuming the quality of passion, he engages in creation.

* Lávaka (from lú), one who cuts to pieces, one who destroys. Would not láyaka (from l') be better, one who brings on the dissolution?

- 21 Brahmá who is adored as Hiraṇya-garbha, the first of the gods, and without beginning, who sits in the middle of the
- 22 lotus-like earth, was born in the beginning. One hundred years is the full length of life for him, the high-souled, according to the true Bráhma computation. Hear from me how it is reckoned.
- 23 A káshthá is said to be composed of fifteen winks of the eyelids; and thirty káshthás make a kalá; and thirty such
- 24 kalás make a muhúrta. A day and night among men contain, it has been settled, thirty muhúrtas; and with thirty days

- 26 Now of twelve thousand divine years consist the four ages named the Kṛita, the Tretá, &c. Hear from me how they are divided.
- 27 Now the Kṛita age is said to have contained four thousand years; its commencing twilight was four hundred years, and
- 28 the closing twilight was of the same duration. The Tretá age was three thousand divine years; and three hundred years was its commencing twilight, which was indeed of that duration, and its closing twilight was of the same duration.
- 29 The Dvápára age was two thousand years; and its commencing twilight is declared to have been two hundred years, and
- 30 its closing twilight was two hundred years. The Kali age is a thousand divine years, O brahman; two hundreds of years are called its commencing and closing twilights.
- 31 This period of twelve thousand divine years is called a yuga; it has been laid down by the poets; a thousand times this period are called one of Brahmá's days.
- 32 In one of Brahmá's days, O brahman, there may be fourteen Manus. They live according to their portions; that

* This line as it stands in the text seems incorrect. The four ages contain 12,000 divine years or 4,320,000 human years, and 71 times this period contain 8,52,000 divine years, or 306,720,000 human years. This latter period agrees with the enumeration in verse 36 (viz., 30,67,20,000 years), but instead of the former the text gives 8,000 + 52,000, i. e., 60,000 divine years, unless we read śata-sahasráni for varsha-sahasráni. Yutam, however, seems wrong as regards both grammar and meaning.

† This does not agree with verse 31, if we take the words "this period" to refer to verses 35, 36 and 37. In verse 31 one of Brahmá's days is said to be 12,000,000 divine years or 4,320,000,000 human years, but 14 times the period mentioned in the latter verses contain 11,928,000 divine years, or 4,294,080,000 human years. We must bring in here the excess fraction referred to in verse 34, which by calculation is found to be $\frac{2}{3}$; thus $71\frac{2}{3}$ times the yuga of 12,000 divine years = 857,142 $\frac{2}{3}$ divine years of the manvantara and 14 times this last period exactly = 12,000,000 divine years of Brahmá's day. Similarly with regard to human years.

 Parárdha of his life has elapsed, O brahman; at the close of which occurred the Mahá-kalpa, which is famed as the Pádma.

CANTO XLVII.

*The Creation from Prakṛiti and the Vikāras.

Márkaṇḍeya continues—After the Pádma Mahá-kalpa Brahmá awoke, and as Náráyaṇa raised the earth out of the sea of dissolution and fashioned it in its present shape—Then he created, first, the vegetable world—secondly, the animal world—thirdly, the gods—fourthly, mankind—fifthly, Anugraha—and sixthly, the bhútas—Márkaṇḍeya summarizes the nine creations, viz., these six, and the three described in Canto XLV.

Kraushtuki spoke.

- 1 Tell me fully how Brahmá, the adorable, the creator, the lord of all creatures, the master, the divine, created all creatures.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 2 Here I tell thee, O brahman, how the adorable eternal framer of the worlds created all the universe moveable and immoveable.
- 3 At the dissolution which followed the Pádma† Mahá-kalpa, the lord Brahmá awoke after having slept through the night.

Then with goodness predominating in him he gazed on the empty world. And here men utter this verse to Nárāyaṇa, who has Brahmá's own form, god of the universe, changeless in might. "Nárā means water and bodies"*—we have thus heard it is a name for water; and in it he lies, hence he is called Nárāyaṇa.

On awaking he knew that the earth had disappeared within that water, and then became desirous through reflection to deliver† the earth therefrom. He assumed as of old in the kalpas and other times, other bodies such as those of a fish, a tortoise and other animals, and likewise he took the body of a boar. The lord who is composed of the Vedas and sacrifices assumed a heavenly form composed of the Vedas and sacrifices, and entered the water; he reached everywhere and existed everywhere. And the lord of the world raised the earth out of the lower regions, and set it free in the water, while the Siddhas who abode in Jana-loka bent their thoughts on him. The earth floated like an immense boat on that ocean, but does not sink by reason of the amplitude of its size. Then he made the earth level and created the mountains on the earth. Formerly when creation was burnt up by the then world-destroying fire, those mountains on the earth were totally consumed by that fire. The rocks were engulfed in that one ocean, and the water was driven together by the wind; wherever they adhered and remained, there the mountains grew into being. Then he divided the earth, adorned with seven dvípas; and he fashioned the four worlds, the Bhur-loka and the others, as before.

While he pondered on creation, as of old in the kalpas and other times, he next became manifested as devoid of intelligence, as enveloped in darkness. Darkness, folly, infatuation, gloominess, and blind consciousness—ignorance,‡ composed of these five, became manifested out of the Supreme Soul. Creation irrational became established in five ways while he was meditating. Externally and internally it was destitute of light,* its soul was concealed, it consisted of vegetation;† and since vegetation is declared to be “primary,”‡ hence this is indeed the Mukhya creation.

- 18 He considered that creation incapable of causation,§ and thought of creating another yet. While he was meditating on its creation, the animal world, in which the stream of life|| is horizontal,¶ came next into existence. Since its activities are displayed horizontally, hence it is known as the “tiryak-srotas.” Cattle and other quadrupeds are well-known as being of that kind; they are indeed characterized chiefly by ignorance and are unintelligent; and they stray in wrong courses, and in their ignorance are subservient to knowledge; they are self-swayed, and devoted to self; they comprise twenty-
20 eight classes. They all possess light* internally, but they are mutually circumscribed.††

- He thought even that creation was incapable of causation, and while he meditated, another came into existence; now this, the third, was the group of beings in which the stream of life passed upwards;‡‡ it was characterized chiefly by goodness. Those beings abound in pleasure and affection; they are uncircumscribed outwardly and inwardly; and possess light* externally and internally; they originated from an upward stream of life. Now that third creation of the Supreme Being who was satisfied in soul thereat is known as the creation of the gods. When that creation came into being, Brahmá was pleased.

* Prakáśa. This is defined by S’rí-dhara Svámí to mean “clear knowledge” (prakrīṣṭam jñānam). It had no clear external perception of sound &c., or clear internal feeling of happiness, &c.

‡‡ Urdhva-srotas.

- Then he meditated further on another creation which should 25 be capable of causation and be the highest. While he meditated so, and meditated on truth, the group of beings in which the stream of life passes downwards,* and which is capable of causation,† next became manifest out of the Imperceptible. Since the streams of life in them moved downwards, hence they‡ are “arvák-srotas;” and they possess light§ copiously; they are characterized chiefly by ignorance and passion. Hence they have abundance of suffering, and are continuously engaged in action; and they possess light externally and internally. They are mankind and are capable of causation.
 26 Anugraha|| was the fifth creation; it is disposed in four ways, by contrariety,¶ and by perfection, by tranquillity,†† and by satisfaction‡‡ likewise. The objects of this creation moreover have knowledge of the past and of the present.
 27 The creation of the origins of the gross elements§§ and the gross elements||| is called the sixth; they all possess comprehensiveness,¶¶ and are prone to mutual division; and the origins of the gross elements are to be known as both impulsive and devoid of propensities.
 30 Now the creation of “mahat” is to be known as the first by Brahjá; and the second of the “tan-mátras” is called 31 the creation of the “bhútas;” and the third creation is that of the “vikáras,”††† and it is perceptible by the senses. So was produced the creation from Prakṛiti wherein Intelligence pre-

But S'ri-dhara explains it as an inferior creation of gods (deva-sarga), who are characterized by both goodness and ignorance. It is characterized by ignorance because it is nourished by the ignorance among immoveable objects and the animal creation; it is characterized by goodness, because it harmonizes with and thrives upon the perfection and satisfaction among mankind and the gods; and it is called Anugraha, because it favours (anugrahaka) the several natural dispositions of those objects.

CANTO XLVIII.

The Course of Creation.

Márkaṇḍeya relates how Brahmá created the Asuras, the gods, the pitris and mankind, and the night and day and the two twilights—He mentions the times when those beings are powerful—He relates the creation of the Rákshasas, Yakshas, Serpents, Pisácas, and Gandharvas—Next of all beasts, birds and other animals—Then of various sacred hymns and metres—Then of the lightning, thunder, and other phenomena—And lastly Brahmá assigned all things their shapes, pursuits and names.

|| This is the creation of Níla-lohita Rudra (see Canto LII) and of Sanat-kumára and the other mind-born sons of Brahmá, the Kumáras. This creation is called prákṛita because Rudra sprang into existence by himself, as mentioned in that canto, verse 3. It is also called vaikṛita, because the Kumáras were created by Brahmá in the form he assumed of a vikára (vikṛiti-bhúta).

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke.

2 Creation is impregnated with the good and bad* actions of previous existence, O bráhmaṇ; and because of this well-known law†, created beings, though they are destroyed in the dissolution, are not delivered, from the consequences of their actions.

3 The gods and other divine beings, and stationary things, and the four classes of mankind, O bráhmaṇ, were produced in his mind when Bráhmá was engaged in creation.

4 Then being desirous of creating the four classes of beings, namely, the gods, the Asuras and the pitris, and mankind, he infused‡ himself in the waters. The particle of darkness grew up in excess as the Prajá-pati was rapt in meditation. First then out of his buttocks, as he was desirous of creating, were produced the Asuras. And then he cast aside that body which was composed of the particle of darkness; that body cast aside by him forthwith became Night.

7 Being desirous of creating, he assumed another body and experienced delight; then were produced from his mouth the 8 Gods in whom goodness predominates. And the mighty lord of created beings abandoned that body also, and when cast aside it became Day wherein goodness predominates.

9 Then he took another body which was indeed characterized by the particle of goodness; the Pitris were produced from 10 him while he deemed himself to be a pitri. The lord, after creating the pitris, abandoned that body also, and when abandoned it became the Twilight that intervenes between 11 day and night. Next the lord assumed another body characterized by the particle of passion, and then were produced 12 Mankind who spring from the particle of passion. After creating mankind, the lord abandoned that body, and it became the Twilight that ends the night and begins the day.

13 Thus these bodies of the wise God of gods have become famed as the night and day, and the evening twilight and

- 14 the morning twilight, O bráhmaṇ. Three are characterized by the particle of goodness, namely, the morning twilight, the evening twilight and the day; the night is characterized by
- 15 the particle of darkness, hence it is called Tri-yámiká.* Hence the gods are powerful by day, but the Asuras by night, and mankind at the coming of the morning twilight, and the pitris
- 16 at the evening twilight. At these times these classes of beings are undoubtedly powerful and unassailable by their foes; and when they light upon the adverse times they lose their power.
- 17 The morning twilight, the night, the day, and the evening twilight, these four are indeed the bodies of the lord Brahmá, and they are invested with the three qualities.
- 18 Now after creating these four, the Prajá-pati, feeling hunger and thirst, took another body composed of passion and darkness during the night; during its darkness the adorable unborn god created bearded monsters wasted with hunger;
- 19 and they endeavoured to eat up that body. Some of those monsters, who said "let us preserve† it from them," were called Rákshasas in consequence; and those who said "let us devour‡ it" were called Yakshas, from yakshaṇa, 'eating,' § O bráhmaṇ.
- 21 When the creator Brahmá saw them, the hair of his head through his displeasure grew withered|| and lost its erectibility ¶ Through its downward gliding it became the Serpents,†† and from its loss‡‡ of erectibility they are known as the Ahis or Snakes. Thereupon in anger at having seen the

CANTO XLIX.

The Course of Creation.

Márkaṇḍeya describes the creation of the primeval human race, and their simple condition and happy life—When they ultimately died out, modern men fell from the sky, and lived in kalpa trees—Passionate affection sprung up among them—and covetousness next, which destroyed the trees, and drove them to form communities—Their measures of length are explained—and fortresses, towns, villages and houses described—The Tretá Age began—with the existing rivers and vegetation—and the people lived on the vegetation—They then took private possession of property according to might, and the vegetation perished—Then they supplicated Brahmá, and he created all existing cereals and plants—The seventeen cereals and the fourteen sacrificial plants are specified—Brahmá ordained their means of livelihood, which could be gained only through labour, and their laws, castes, &c.—The spheres assigned to various classes after death are mentioned.

Kraushṭuki spoke.

- 1 Thou hast told me, Sir, of the group of beings in which the stream of life‡ passes downwards; tell me fully, O
2 bráhmaṇ, how Brahmá created the human creation, and how he created the classes of men, and how their qualities, O wise Sir; and tell me what business has been assigned to the bráhmaṇs and those other classes severally.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 3 While Brahmá was first creating and was meditating on truth, he created a thousand pairs of human beings from his 4 mouth, O Muni; when born, they come into being, characterized chiefly by goodness, and self-glorious. He created

* For ta read tu?

5 another thousand pairs from his breast; they were all characterized chiefly by passion, and were fiery and impa-6 tient. And he created again another thousand miserable pairs from his thighs;* they were known as characterized chiefly by passion and ignorance, and as enviously disposed.
 7 And he created another thousand pairs from his feet; they were all characterized chiefly by ignorance, and were unfortunate and little of understanding.

Then those living beings, produced in pairs, were rejoicing 8 together; urged by their mutual distress they hastened to sexual intercourse. Thenceforward pairing originated in 8 this kalpa. Women did not have their courses month by month; hence they did not then bring forth offspring, although 10 they engaged in sexual intercourse. They bring forth just pairs of children once at the close of life. Thenceforward 11 pairing originated in this kalpa. By meditation and thought those human beings give birth to offspring once. Sound and the other objects of sense were pure severally in their five marks.

12 This was this creation of the human race which the Prajā-pati formerly produced. Sprung of his lineage they worship-13 ped this world, and they pay homage to rivers, lakes, and seas and the mountains also. During that age those human 14 beings lived indeed feeling little cold or heat. They received delight according to their natural dispositions from the objects of sense, O wise Sir; no opposition, nor enmity, nor envy 15 existed among them. They paid homage to the mountains and the seas; they lived wholly without habitations; their actions were unswayed by love; their minds were always 20 wished for it, and exertion also sprang up in the mind of those who wished for it. The water was exquisite. Perfecwas produced that conferred every wish. And with bodies 22 uncared for, those human beings had lasting youth. Without resolve they produce offspring in pairs ; alike is their birth 23 and form, and together also they die. Devoid of desire and hatred they lived to each other. All were equal in form and 24 length of life, without inferiority or superiority. They live their measure of life, four thousand human years ; nor have 25 they misfortunes through affliction. Everywhere moreover the earth was entirely blessed with good fortune.

26 As the people died in the course of time, so their prosperity

|| The village. The word thus denotes a local area, and includes both the dwellings and the fields. It seems to designate specially the large and prosperous villages.

¶ The word is explained in the dictionary as "a dwelling-place, dwelling-house, abode, residence," but here it is explained to be a "mart," apparently either permanent or temporary. It corresponds to the modern (Persian) word ganj, or the vernacular word háḍ (Sanskrit haṭṭa), in Bengal. The word vasati appears as basti in the modern vernaculars, and means in Bengal "the populated part of a village," and "the part of a town occupied by the common bamboo-built houses." The verse seems to indicate that the word vasati was either newly-coined, or had recently acquired (or the author wished it to acquire) a special meaning. The complete change from this meaning to that of the modern basti, which rather excludes any notion of trade, is note-worthy.

 Or akrimí. These words are not in the dictionary. If we might read á-kramí instead, the word would be rather appropriate.

- 54 houses. Those branches, which were the branches of the kalpa trees at first, O bráhmaṇ, became rooms in the houses in consequence among those people.
- 55 Those people ruined the trees by their strife, and afterwards pondered* on their means of livelihood. When the kalpa
- 56 trees had utterly perished along with the honey, those people were distressed by their afflictions, and suffered from thirst and hunger. Then became manifest their perfection at the
- 57 beginning of the Tretá age. For their other business was spontaneously accomplished;† they had rain according to their desire. The waters of their rain are the rivers‡ which
- 58 flow here. By the obstruction of the rain§ the rivers, which|| existed on the earth scanty of water before that, became¶ deep flowing channels.
- 59 And then by their union with the earth plants came into existence, of fourteen kinds, both those which grow on uncultivated soil, and those which grow unsown, both cultivated and wild. And trees and shrubs bearing flowers and fruit in their seasons were produced. This manifestation of
- 60 vegetation appeared first in the Tretá age. On that vegetation the people subsist in the Tretá age, O Muni. And then
- 61 lapsing into novel passion and covetousness those people next took possession of rivers and fields, mountains, and trees, shrubs and plants in their own right even according to might.

Brahmá next created the nine Sages, Bhrigu, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Angiras, Maric'i, Daksha, Atri and Vasishtha—and also Rudra, Sankalpa and Dharma—All these were all-wise and devoid of passions—Brahmá in anger created a being half male, half female, who at his order divided himself into many male and female beings.

Brahmá then created the Manu Sváyambhuva and his wife S'atarúpá—They had two sons Priya-vrata and Uttána-páda, and also two daughters. Ruc'i married one daughter Riddhi and begat Yajna and Dakshiná.

Daksha married the other daughter Prasúti and begot 24 daughters, whose names are mentioned, and who became Dharma's wives, and also 11 other daughters whose names are mentioned, and who became the wives of the other sages and of Agni and the Pitris—The children of these daughters are mentioned.

A-dharma and his offspring are mentioned, Naraka, Bhaya, Mrityu &c.—The actions of Mrityu's sons are explained—Chief among them is Duhsaha—to him Brahmá assigned a dwelling and raiment, a long catalogue of bad deeds as nourishment, and certain places and times for his success, but excluded a list of other persons and places from his influence.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 Then while he was meditating, mankind were begotten in his mind, together with their occupations, and implements
- 2 which were produced from his body. Spirits in bodily form* were produced from the limbs of him, the wise god. All those whom I have already mentioned came into existence.
- 3 All created beings from the gods down to those whose condition is stationary are known to be subject to the three qualities:† such was the constitution of created things, immoveable and moveable.
- 4 When all that offspring of him, the wise one, did not increase, he created other mind-born sons like unto himself, viz.,

The Offspring of Duṣsaḥa.

Duṣsaḥa had eight sons and eight daughters—their names are mentioned—The evil functions of the several sons and daughters are described, and the remedies against them—Their offspring are mentioned, and their evil actions described.

These beings are almost all personifications of physical injuries, moral vices and social offences.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 Duṣsaḥa had a wife named Nirmāśṭī*; now she was begotten in Kali's wife when she saw a c'aṇḍāla at the time of
- 2 her menstruation. They had sixteen children, who pervade the world, eight sons and eight daughters, all very terrible.
- 3 Dantākrishṭi and Ukti, and Parivarta the next, Anga-dhṛish
- 4 and Śakuni and Gaṇḍa-prānta-rati, Garbha-han and the last Sasya-han were their male children. And they had eight
- 5 daughters besides; hear their names from me. The first was Niyojikā, and the second Virodhinī, and Svayaṃ-hāra-karī,
- 6 Bhrāmaṇī, Ritu-hārikā, and two other very terrible daughters Smṛiti-harā and Vīja-harā; and the eighth daughter was named Vidveshaṇī who causes terror to mankind.
- 7 I will describe what the several functions of the eight sons are, and what are the remedies against the evils which they work; hearken to me, O brāhman.
- 8 Dantākrishṭi† taking his station in the teeth of newly born children produces intense wind,‡ with the desire of effecting

* Prof. Sir M. Monier-Williams gives the name as Nir-māśṭī (Uncleaned) which seems preferable.

† Teeth-attractor, Lock-jaw ?

- 9 an attack from Duhsaha. The remedy against him is to be applied by men by means of white mustard cast upon the bed
- 10 and upon the teeth of the sleeping child; and by bathing it with medicinal herbs of great splendour, by reciting good scriptures,* and by supporting† it on a camel, a thorn, a sword, a bone, or a linen cloth.
- 11 Now the second son assigns good and bad fortune to men, while he says repeatedly, "let it be so!"; hence he is called
- 12 Ukti,‡ and that is his precise function. Hence wise men must always say, "May fate be auspicious!" And when any-
- 13 thing bad is heard or spoken, let praise be offered to Siva, and to Brahmá, the spiritual preceptor of all that exists both moveable and immoveable, and to each person's own particular family-deity.
- 14 The son who finds delight in always interchanging the foetus between one womb and another, and in interchanging the words in the mouth of a speaker, is called Parivartaka§;
- 15 a wise man should preserve himself against him by means of white mustard and the prayers and spells that destroy Rákshasas.
- 16 And another son|| like the wind announces good and bad fortune as indicated by throbbings in men's bodies; and the remedy against him is to strike the side of the body with kúsa grass.
- 17 Another son S'akuni¶ stationed on a crow or some other bird, announces weal or woe by means of food or birds. With regard thereto, however, the Prajá-pati has said, "In
- 18 an evil matter delay and the abandonment of the undertaking are best; in a good matter one should act very speedily."

|| Anga-dhrish, the Assailer of the body.

¶ S'akuni, a Bird (in general). The word kus'alaiḥ in the text is not supported by the MSS. and seems wrong. They read S'akuniḥ (which I have adopted) or śakunam, "an omen."

 Khaga-tas, this seems the best meaning; but it might also be read kha-gatas as an adjective to S'akuniḥ.

Another son* stationed in the borders of the cheeks for 19 half a muhūrta, O brāhman, consumes every undertaking, and eulogium, and sincerity. By addresses to brāhmans, by 20 praise to the gods, and by extracting roots, O brāhman, by ablutions with cows' urine and mustard seed, so also by worship paid to the constellations and planets, and also by the observance of righteousness and the Upanishads, by 21 repeatedly looking at weapons, and by contempt for birth Gaṇḍa-prānta-rati succumbs.

Another most terrible son,† moreover, destroys the fruit 22 of pregnant women. Women should always secure protection against him by constant personal purification, by writing out famous spells, by wearing auspicious garlands and other 23 decorations, by dwelling in well-cleaned houses, and by abstain-ing from over-exertion, O brāhman

The other son Sasya-han‡ moreover is he who destroys the 24 growth of the crops. Against him indeed one should secure protection by wearing worn-out shoes, and by walking on the 25 left side, and by causing a c'aṇḍāla to enter the field, and by offering the bali outside, and by eulogizing the soma juice.

And Niyojikā§ is the daughter who incites some men to 26 seize and otherwise molest other men's wives and other men's goods. Immunity from her comes by reciting purifying prayers, by refraining from anger, covetousness and other 27 passions, and by resistance with the thought 'She is inciting me to these acts.' When one is railed against or beaten by 28 another, one should wisely think 'she is inciting him,' and should not fall into subjection to her. In this mundane existence, where there are other men's wives and other alluring 29 objects, the wise man should consider, 'She is inciting my mind and my soul here.'

And the next daughter who causes opposition between a

 parents and children, and among fellow-caste-people||—

Another daughter destroys grain from granaries and houses, 32 the milk from cows, and ghee, and the produce from prolific things. She is called Svayam-hárikát; she is ever addicted 33 to concealment. She consumes the half-cooked food out of the kitchen, and whatever is kept in the store-house; and she always consumes whatever food is being served up†, along 34 with the person who eats it. She takes the remains of food from men and also their food. She is hard to be restrained.§
 She takes the success which men have accomplished from 35 their business offices and from their abodes, O bráhmaṇ. She is constantly taking the fluid and the milk out of cows' udders and women's breasts, the ghee out of curdled milk, the oil out of sesamum seed, and the spirituous liquor out of the 36 liquor-stores, the colour out of saffron|| and other coloured objects, and the thread out of cotton clothes. She is rightly named Svayam-háriká, for she is perpetually taking things 37 away, O bráhmaṇ. For the sake of protection against her one should make a pair of peacocks and an artificial woman;
 and prophylactic marks¶ should be drawn on the house, and allowing the house to be littered with fragments of food†† 38 should be avoided, and vessels in which milk and other things have been kept should certainly be cleaned with the ashes of the incense offered to the gods in the sacrificial fire. All that is well-known to be a preservative.

42 Another daughter robs women of their monthly courses, when they have begun and before they have begun†; she is 43 known as Ritu-háriká,‡ the daughter of Duḥsaha. One should cause one's women-folk to bathe at places of pilgrimage, at the confluence of rivers, and in excavated places in order

In the houses of those who do not rinse their mouths out after meals, and in the houses of those who observe bad customs,

Now Bhrámaní had one son; he is known as Káka-jangha

 101 who indulges in sexual intercourse during the twilight, O bráhmaṇ.

114 Now Vija-hārinī, who robs man and woman of their seed, to whom Vāta-rúpā casts a son at the end of the impregnation, suffers from the seminal secretion becoming dried up through 116 disorder of the wind within the body.§ Similarly both the man who eats without first bathing, and the man who eats or a woman, if he or she neglects personal cleanliness, lapses into sterility.¶

The Creation and Appellations of the Rudras.

Márkaṇḍeya narrates the creation of Rudra in his eight personalities—and mentions their names, stations, wives and sons—He mentions briefly the wives and offspring of the ṛishis, Bhṛigu (from whom he himself was descended), Maric'i, Angirás, Atri, Pulastya, Pulaha, Vasishṭha, and Agni, and also of the Pitris.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 Such was the creation, which Brahmá of inscrutable origin made, characterized by darkness. I will tell thee of the creation of the Rudras. Hearken to me while I narrate it.
- 2 Now they were eight sons indeed of Brahmá, and they had wives and children.

- 3 At the beginning of the kalpa, while the Lord was meditating about a son who should be his equal, there appeared in his lap a youth blue and red in colour; and running about
- 4 he cried with a sweet voice, O bráhmaṇ. "Why criest thou?" answered Brahmá to him as he cried. "Give me a
- 5 name," then replied he to the lord of the world. "Thou art named 'Rudra,'† O divine one; cry not, assume some fortitude," thus was he addressed. Then he cried seven times more,
- 6 and the Lord gave him seven other names, and stations for these eight personalities, and wives and sons, O bráhmaṇ. The
- 7 Lord, the forefather, called him Bhava, Sarva, and Íśána,
- 8 and Pasu-pati, Bhíma, Ugra, and Mahá-deva. He gave these names, and assigned stations for these—the sun, water, the 10 Diśas† and Dikshá, and Rohiṇi in due order—of the sun and the other stations, O bráhmaṇ, together with Rudra and the 11 other names. And there were born to him gradually C'ara, and Śukra, Lohitāṅga, Mano-java, Skanda, and Sarga, Santána and Budha successively.

12 Such was Rudra himself. He found Satí for his wife‡; and through Daksha's curse Satí quitted her body. She 13 was the daughter of Himavat by Mená, O bráhmaṇ; her brother was Maináka, the chiefest friend of Ambho-dhi (the 14 Ocean.) And the lord Bhava married her again as his only wife.

Khyáti the wife of Bhṛigu§ gave birth to the two gods 15 Dhátri and Vidhátri, and to S'ri who was the wife of the supreme god Nárāyaṇa. Ayati and Niyati were the two 16 daughters of high-souled Meru; they became the wives of Dhátri and Vidhátri. A son was born from each of them, both Práṇa and Mṛikaṇḍa.

17 The latter was my illustrious father. I am his son by Manasviní; Veda-śiras is my son, he was born of Dhúmṛavatí.

18 Hear also from me of the offspring of Práṇa. Dyutimán was the son begotten by Práṇa, and A-jaras was his son also; from them both issued many sons and grandsons.

 21 born of her, S'iníbalí, and Kuhu, Ráká and Bhánumatí.

The Story of the Sváyambhuva Manv-antara.

Márkaṇḍeya states the duration of the Manv-antaras, and mentions the names of the Manus past, present and future—He mentions the descendants of Manu Sváyambhuva and his son Priya-vrata, and explains how the whole world with its seven continents was peopled by them and divided among them—Jambu-dvīpa was assigned to Priya-vrata's son Agnīdhra, and was portioned out among Agnīdhra's sons—His eldest son Nābhi begot Rishabha, and Rishabha begot Bharata, to whom India was assigned.

Kraushṭuki spoke.

- 1 Adorable Sir! I wish to hear fully of this Sváyambhuva Manv-antara also which thou hast mentioned. Tell me of it,
- 2 and also of the duration of this Manv-antara, and its gods and rishis, and the kings who ruled during it, and also who was the lord of the gods during it, adorable Sir!

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 3 *The duration of the Manv-antaras has been declared to be the four yugas multiplied by seventy-one and a fraction. Hear the duration of a Manv-antara from me in human out for them countries in Śāka-dvīpa, which were named after them.

Moreover Dyuti-mat had seven sons ; hear them also from 23 me ; Kuśala, and Manu-ga, Ushṇa, and Prākara, Artha-kāraka, and Muni, and Dundubhi who was famed as the seventh.
 24 And they had countries in Krauñc'a-dvīpa, which were named after them.

In Kuśa-dvīpa itself also there were seven countries called 25 by the names of the sons of Jyotish-mat ; hear their names from me—Ud-bhida, and Vainava, Su-ratha, and Lambana, 26 Dhritimat, and Prākara, and Kāpila the seventh.

And Vapush-mat the lord of Śālmali had seven sons, both 27 Sveta, and Harita, Jīmūta, and Rohita, Vaidyuta, and Māna-28 sa, and Ketu-mat the seventh. And they had seven countries in Śālmali, which bore the same names.

Medhā-tithi, the lord of Plaksha-dvīpa had seven sons, and Plaksha-dvīpa was divided into seven parts by the countries which were named after them, first the Śāka-bhava country.
 30 then Śiśira, Sukhodaya, and Ananda, and Śiva, and Kshemaka, and Dhruva.

In the five continents, which begin with Plaksha-dvīpa and 31 end with Śāka-dvīpa, righteousness also must be known as arising from the divisions of the castes and the several stages of a brāhman's life. The righteousness which is settled,* and springs from one's natural disposition, and is exempt from 32 the rules of harmlessness is well-known to be universal in these five continents.

His father Priya-vrata gave Jambu-dvīpa to Agnīdhra at 33 the first, O brāhman. He had nine sons indeed, who were equal to the Prajā-pati Priya-vrata. The eldest was named 34 Nābhi ; his younger brother was Kim-purusha ; the third son was Havir-varsha ; the fourth was Ilāvṛita ; and the fifth 35 son was Vāśya ; the sixth was called Hiranya ; the seventh of them was Kuru; the eighth was known as Bhadrásva; and the ninth was Ketu-mála. Designated by their names was the arrangement of their countries.

- 36 Perfection exists naturally in Kim-purusha, and the other continents,* with the exception of that named from the mountain Hima†; and the perfection is almost complete happiness which comes without exertion. There is no adversity there, nor old age, death or fear; neither righteousness nor unrighteousness existed there, nor had the people differences of
- 37 position, such as high, low or middling; nor have the four ages existed there, nor periodic times, nor the seasons of the year.

- Now Agnídhra's son Nábhi had a son Rishabha, O bráhmaṇ.
- 39 Rishabha begot Bharata, a hero, the best among his hundred sons. Rishabha having appointed his son in his stead betook himself to the strictest life of a wandering religious mendicant, and devoted himself to austerities, an illustrious hermit, dwelling in Pulaha's hermitage. His father gave Bharata the southern country named after the mountain Hima‡; hence the country is called Bhárata after the name of that high-souled king. Bharata also had a righteous son called
- 41 Su-mati; and Bharata transferred the kingdom to him and departed to the forest.

- Now during the Sváyambhuva period Priya-vrata's sons,
- 43 and their sons and grandsons enjoyed§ the earth with its seven continents. This was the Sváyambhuva creation; I
- 44 have narrated it to thee, O bráhmaṇ. What else shall I fully tell thee of in the first Manv-antara?

CANTO LIV.

The description of Jambu-dvīpa.

Mārkaṇḍeya tells Krauṣṭuki further the size of the earth, and the order and dimensions of the seven continents and their oceans—He describes Jambu-dvīpa, the countries in it, and Meru and the other mountains; and mentions various local facts.

Krauṣṭuki spoke.

How many are the continents, and how many the oceans, and how many are the mountains, O brāhman? And how many are the countries, and what are their rivers, O Muni? And the size of the great objects of nature,* and the Lokā-loka mountain-range; the circumference, and the size and the course of the moon and the sun also—tell me all this at length, O great Muni.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke.

The earth is fifty times ten million yojanas† broad in every direction,‡ O brāhman. I tell thee of its entire constitution, hearken thereto. The dvīpas which I have mentioned to thee, began with Jambu-dvīpa and ended with Pushkara-dvīpa, O illustrious brāhman; listen further to their dimensions. Now each dvīpa is twice the size of the dvīpa which precedes it in this order, Jambu, and Plaksha, Sālmala, Kuśa, Krauṇḍa and Sāka, and the Pushkara-dvīpa. They are completely surrounded by oceans of salt water, sugar-cane juice, wine, ghee, curdled milk, and milk, which increase double and double, compared with each preceding one.

I will tell thee of the constitution of Jambu-dvīpa; hearken to me. It is a hundred thousand yojanas in breadth and length, it being of a circular shape.§ Himavat, and Hema-kūṭa, Nishadha,|| and Meru, Nīla, Śveta and Śringin are the seven

 11 which are north. They are severally less by ten and ten thousand yojanas in length‡; they are all two thousand yojanas

 Bhárata* he has the shape of a tortoise; and he is like a boar in Ketu-mála; and he has a fish's form in the north.

 by the arrangement of the constellations, O bráhmaṇ; the people there study the influence of the planets.

The Geography of Jambu-dvīpa.

Márkaṇḍeya ~~mentions~~ the forests and lakes and mountains around Meru—All the heavenly beings dwell in that region where there is the most charming scenery—Bhárata alone is the land of action, which entails merit and sin.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 Hear from me of the four forests and lakes which exist on 2 Mandara and the three other mountains,† O bráhmaṇ. On the east is the forest named C'aitra-ratha, on the southern mountain the forest Nandana, on the western mountain the forest Vaibhrája, and on the northern mountain the forest
 3 Sávitra. On the east is the lake Aruṇoda,‡ and on the south Mánasa, on the west of Meru is Sítoda, and Mahá-bhadra on the north.
 4 On the east of Mandara are the mountains Sítártta,§ and C'akra-muṇja, and Kulíra, Su-kanka-vat, and Mani-saila, 5 Vṛisha-vat, Mahá-níla, Bhavác'ala, Sa-bindu. Mandara, Venu, Ratna-vat, Eka-śringa, Mahá-śaila, Rája-śaila, Pipáthaka, and these mountains are said to lie on the south side of Meru.

 Meru beyond the subjacent hills§ which are on the west side.

 the north of Meru, O bráhmaṇ.

The valleys among these mountains are exceedingly charm-water. In them men are born who practise meritorious deeds, 16 O bráhmaṇ. These are terrestrial Svargas, O bráhmaṇ; they surpass Svarga with their excellences. In them no fresh in them. And on these mountains, Sítánta|| and the rest, O dharas, the Yakshas, the Kin-naras, the Nágas, and the great merit and are studded with charming groves which the gods frequent. And the lakes are charming; the breeze is which is the earth; its leaves are Bhadrásva, Bhárata and the other countries on the four sides. The country named

- 22 Bhárata, which I have told thee of on the south, is the land of action; nowhere else is merit and sin acquired; this must be known to be the chief country, wherein everything is
- 23 fixedly established.* And from it a man gains Svarga and final emancipation from existence, or the human world and hell, or yet again the brute-condition, O bráhmaṇ.

CANTO LVI.

The Descent of the Ganges.

Márkaṇḍeya describes the course of the River Ganges from the moon on to mount Meru, then in four streams flowing east, south, west and north, of which the southern stream was allowed by S'iva to flow through India at the entreaties of King Bhagíratha.

He describes briefly the happy condition of all the other countries (except India) in Jambu-dvīpa.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 1 The foot of Náráyana, moreover, who is the origin of the universe,† supports the earth. The divine river Ganges
- 2 which issued thence flows in three courses. She enters the moon, which is the womb of the nectar and the receptacle of the waters, and thence, having purified with her contact the rays of the sun‡ which is indissolubly connected with the moon,
- 3 she fell on the summit of Meru, and then divided into four streams. As she fell from the summit and the sides and the outer bounds of Meru, she turned around, and finding no
- 4 support fell scattering her waters widely. Dividing her waters equally at the foot of Mandara and the three other
- 5 mountains, she fell, piling high the rocks broken off from their bases by her waters.

* Prati-shṭhita.

‡ Or, being purified by contact with the rays of the sun.

The eastern stream, which is celebrated by its name Sítá,*
 6 flowed to the forest C'aitra-ratha,† and overflowing it, passed on to the lake Varuṇoda,‡ and thence to the mountain Sítánta,§ and thence to the other mountains on the east in 7 order. Descending to the earth in her course, she flowed from Bhadrásva into the ocean.

Moreover the second stream called Alaka-nandá flowed 8 south towards Gandha-mádana into the forest Nandana that delights the gods and that lies at the foot of Meru, and over-9 flowed the lake Mánasa with great force, and reached the delightful kingly mountain Sikhara,|| and thence overflowed all 10 the mountains which I have mentioned in order on the south, and reached the lofty mountain Hima-vat. There the bull-11 bannered Siva held her and would not let her go. The lord was propitiated by king Bhagírattha with fastings and hymns, and Siva released her there. She entered the south-12 ern ocean in seven streams, and in three streams on the east ; inundating as a great river the south with the overflow from her stream, behind Bhagírattha's chariot.

Moreover the great river famed as Sva-rakshu fell on 13 Mount Vipula on the west side, and went towards the forest¶
 14 Vaibhrája ; and thence the great river overflowing the lake Sítoda reached the mountain Sva-rakshu, and thence she summits of the other mountains on the west in order, she reached Ketumála and entered the salt ocean.

- 16 Now she flowed on to mount Su-párśva also, which is at the foot of Meru; there she is famed as Somá. She flowed 17 to the wood of Savitṛi.* Overflowing† it, she reached lake Mahá-bhadra;‡ and thence she passed as a great river to 18 mount Śankha-kúṭa;§ and thence reaching in succession Vṛishabha and the other mountains on the north, and overflowing the Northern Kurus she entered the great ocean.
- 19 Thus I have appropriately described to thee, O bráhmaṇ, this river, the Ganges, and the countries according to their 20 arrangement in Jambu-dvīpa. In Kim-puruṣa and all the other countries dwell people, who have almost unalloyed happiness, who are free from sickness, and who are exempt 21 from low and high diversities of condition. In each of the nine countries in it are seven mountain ranges. And then in each country there are rivers flowing down from the 22 mountains. In Kim-puruṣa and the seven other countries,
O bráhmaṇ, waters bubble up from the ground; here in Bhá-
23 rata we have rain. And in these eight countries|| men enjoy a perfection which comes from the trees, from their own natural dispositions, from the localities, from the water, from 24 their mental condition and from their actions.¶ The tree-bestowed perfection is obtained from the trees that grant them every wish; the natural is well-known as that which springs from the natural disposition; and the local delight 25 is that which is connected with the land itself; and the water-given perfection comes from the delicacy of the water; and the mental is derived from meditation; and the perfection which comes from reverential service and the performance of other duties is denominated righteousness-produced.††

* Sávitra; see canto lv, verse 2.

† For pāvayanti read plāvayanti.

‡ See canto lv, verse 3.

§ See canto lv, verse 12.

|| For vashershv read varsheshv.

¶ Karma-já, this seems preferable to dharma-já in verse 25.

 For toyátthá read toyotthá.

†† Dharma-já; verse 23 reads karma-já instead, which seems preferable.

- 26 And in these countries the ages do not exist, nor bodily nor mental sicknesses; nor is there any undertaking involving merit or demerit there, O bráhmaṇ.

CANTO LVII.

Márkaṇḍeya mentions the nine divisions of Bhárata, one of which is India—He mentions the seven mountain ranges in India (exclusive of the Himálaya Mountains) and names twenty-two separate hills—He mentions the chief rivers in India, grouping them according to the mountain ranges out of which they rise—He mentions the chief peoples in India and on its borders, arranging them according to the main natural divisions of the country—and he concludes with general descriptive remarks and an encomium on India as the sole land of action.

Kraushṭuki spoke.

- 1 Adorable Sir! thou hast fully described this Jambu-dvīpa.
Just as thou hast declared it, merit-producing action exists
2 nowhere else, nor action that tends to sin, except in Bhárata, O illustrious Sir! And from this land both Svarga is attained, and final emancipation from existence, and the medium end also. Verily nowhere else on earth is action 3 ordained for mortals. Therefore tell me, O bráhmaṇ, about 4 this Bhárata in detail, and what are its divisions, and how many they are, and what is its constitution accurately; it is the country,* and what are the provinces and the mountains in it, O bráhmaṇ?

Márkaṇḍeya spoke.

- 5 Hear from me the nine divisions of this country Bhárata;
6 they must be known as extending to the ocean, but as being mutually inaccessible. They† are Indra-dvīpa, Káserúmat.‡

* Varsha.

† This and the three following verses agree closely with the Kúrma Purāṇa canto xlvii, verses 22—25.

‡ The dictionary gives the word as káseru-mat; the Kúrma Purāṇa as kaseruk-mat (canto xlvii, verse 22), in preference. Another form is said to be Kasetu.

- 7 Támra-varṇa,* Gabhastī-mat, and Nāga-dvīpa, Saumya, Gándharva,† and Váruṇa; and this is the ninth dvīpa among them, and it is surrounded by the sea.‡ This dvīpa 8 is a thousand yojanas from south to north.§ At its east end are the Kirátas,|| and at the west the Yavanas.¶ Within it dwell bráhmans, kshatriyas, vaiśyas and súdras, O bráh- 9 man. They accomplish their purification with the occupations of sacrifice, meditation, trade, &c.; and they seek their 10 mutual business through these occupations, and they gain Svarga or final emancipation from existence, merit and sin then.

The seven mountain ranges in it are Mahendra,††

* The Kúrma Purāṇa gives the word as támra-parṇa in preference (canto xlvii, verse 22). It is Ceylon.

† Or, gandharva, Kúrma Purāṇa, canto xlvii, verse 23.

‡ This is understood to mean India, as the following verses show; see Wilson's Vishṇu Purāṇa, Edn. FitzEdward Hall, Book II, chap. iii, note on the similar passage. But this Purāṇa states clearly enough (see verse 59 below) that India is not surrounded by the sea, but bounded by it only on the east, south, and west, and only partially so on the east and west, for verse 8 places the Kirátas and Yavanas there respectively.

§ The yojana is defined in canto xlix, verse 40, to be about 40,000 feet; this length therefore is 7,576 miles.

|| The Kirátas are the uncivilized tribes of the forests and mountains; here the word appears to denote all the races with the Burmese type of features along the eastern limits of India.

¶ The Greeks originally, and afterwards the Mohammedans.

 For the notes in this Canto I have consulted, Wilson's Vishṇu Purāṇa (Edn. FitzEdward Hall), General Cunningham's Ancient Geography of India (1871), his Archæological Survey of India Reports, besides other works and maps.

†† "Mahendra is the chain of hills that extends from Orissa and the northern Circars to Gondwana, part of which near Ganjam is still called Mahindra Malei or hills of Mahindra." Wilson's Vishṇu Purāṇa, Book II, chap. iii, note. The rivers which flow from these hills are named in verses 28 and 29, but only a few of them have been identified. This range then appears to be the portion of the Eastern Ghats between the Godaveri and Mahánadi rivers, and the hills in the south of Berar. See, however, note on the Sukti-mat range on the next page.

11 Malaya,* Sahya,† Sukti-mat,‡ the Riksha moun-

* This is the southern portion of the Western Ghats. Only four rivers are mentioned in verses 27 and 28 as rising in these hills, and none of them appear to have been identified; but as the River Kaveri is said in verses 26 and 27 to rise in the Sahya mountains, the Malaya mountains can be only the portion of the Western Ghats from the Nil-giris to Cape Comorin.

† The Sahya mountains are the Northern portion of the Western Ghats, and, as appears from the rivers which rise in them (see verses 26 and 27), extend from the River Tapti down to the Nil-giris.

‡ This range is not definitely identified, nor the rivers which are said in verses 29 and 30 to rise in it

General Cunningham says the R. Suktimati "derived its name from the Suktimal (sic) mountains, in which it had its source"; asserts that the river must be the same as the Mahánadí; and infers that the Sukti-mat mountains must "correspond with the high range of mountains to the south of Sehoa and Kánker, which gives rise to the Mahanadi, the Pairi and the Seonath rivers, and which forms the boundary between Chattisgarh and the feudatory state of Bastar." (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. XVII, pp. 24 and 69; and map at end.) His premises seem to me unsafe; and his conclusion confounds the Sukti-mat range with the Mahendra range, and must be incorrect, for the latter range appears to be identified beyond doubt.

Mr. Beglar proposes to identify the R. Sukti-matí with the Sakri (which is a tributary of the Ganges, and flows northwards about 35 miles east of Gaya), to connect the river with the Sukti-mat range, and apparently to identify the range with the hills in the north of the Hazaribagh district. He proposes to strengthen this position by identifying the rivers Kiyul (another tributary of the Ganges, east of the Sakri) and Kaorhari (which I do not find, but which seems to be another small tributary) with the Rishi-kulyá and Kumárí, which rise in the Sukti-mat mountains; see verses 29 and 30. (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VIII, pp. 124 and 125). But the Sukti-mat range and Sukti-matí river do not seem necessarily connected; neither this nor the Váyu Purána makes the river rise in the Sukti-mat range, (see verse 23); Sakri does not appear the natural equivalent for Sukti-matí, (there is besides another river Sakri, a tributary of the Seonath,) nor Kiyul and Kaorhari of Rishi-kulyá and Kumárí; Sakri corresponds better with Sakulí (see verse 23); and the hills in the north of the Hazaribagh district are not remarkable, and are rather the termination of the Vindhya range than a separate mountain system.

The only mountains, which have not been appropriated to the Sanskrit names, are the Aravalli mountains and the southern portion of the Eastern Ghats, so that this range might be one of these two; and if the former are rightly included in the Páripátra Range, (see note †, next page) the S'ukti-mat range might be the southern portion of the Eastern Ghats and tains,* and Vindhya,† and Páripátra.‡ And there are other hills besides them in thousands, which are situated 12 near them. Their summits are broad and lofty, and are delightful and spacious;—Koláhala,§ and Vaibhrája,||

the hills of Mysore. If, however, the Sukti-mat range must be placed in Berar, the Mahendra range will be restricted to the Eastern Ghats.

* These are said to be the mountains of Gondwana, see Wilson's Vishṇu Purāṇa, Book II, chap. iii, note. Judging from the rivers which are said in verses 21 to 25 to rise in the Vindhya and Riksha Ranges, it appears this range consists of the hills which form the water-shed between the Narbudda, Sone and Mahanadi on one side, and the Tapti and northern tributaries of the Godavari on the other side; that is, it comprises the Satpura Hills, and the hills extending through the middle of Berar and the south of Chutia Nagpur nearly into West Bengal.

† For vindhyaś read vindhyaś. This does not denote the whole of the modern Vindhya Range, but only the portion of it east of Bhopal, and also the water-shed hills which extend from it into Behar, as will appear from a comparison of the rivers which rise in it according to verses 21—23.

‡ Called also Páriyátra. This is the western portion of the modern Vindhya Range, west of Bhopal, as appears from the rivers which rise in it according to verses 19 and 20. Prof. Wilson says (Vishṇu Purāṇa, Book II, chap. iii, note) "the name, indeed, is still given to a range of mountains in Guzerat (see Colonel Tod's Map of Rajasthan)," and that may be considered an offshoot of the main range. If the Váyu Purāṇa is right in reading Varṇásá instead of Veṇvá in verse 19, this range would also probably include the Aravalli mountains in Rajputana. If this be so, the configuration of this range, a curve around the west and south of Malwa, would suggest a derivation for both the names, viz., Páripátra, from pari + pátra, "the mountains shaped like an enclosing receptacle", or "the mountains which form a protection around;" or Páriyátra, from pari + yá, "the mountains which curve around" The name may thus still survive in the Pathar range, which lies between the rivers Chambal and Banás. (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VI, p. 1 and map; and vol. XIV, p. 151).

|| This as a mountain is not mentioned in the dictionary, and I do not find any such mountain. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Vaiḥvara instead (xlv 90), which is a synonym for a famous hill called Vaiḥvara or Baibhara, near Raja-griha,

- 13 Mandara*, the hill Duṛdura†, Vāta-svana‡, and Vaidyuta§, Maināka||, and Sva-rasa¶, Tunga-prastha,

* Mandara, the famous mountain, is situated about 35 miles, south of Bhāgalpur in Behar (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VIII, p. 130).

† I do not find this in the dictionary. There is a hill called Turturiya, which stands a little south of the junction of the R. Mahānadi with its tributary the Seonath, and which was a place of pilgrimage. (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VII, p. 202; vol. XIII, pp. 146—152).

‡ This as a mountain is not mentioned in the dictionary. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Pātandhama instead (xlv. 91). I do not find either. But Mr. Beglar found a hill Bathan or Bathani in South Behar, and mentions a hill called Banthawa or Pandhawa in Buddhist records. These names might be easy corruptions of Pātandhama. (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VIII, p. 46).

§ This as a mountain is not mentioned in the dictionary, and I do not find it. Is it to be connected with Baijnath or Vaidya-nath, the famous place of pilgrimage, near the R. Karma-nāsā, south of Ghazipur? There does not seem, however, to be any prominent hill there. (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VIII, p. 137; and vol. XIX, p. 27). Or, should the reading be Vipula? Vipula is a well-known hill near Raja-griha (Anc. Geog. of India, vol. I, p. 452, map, and p. 464; Arch. Survey Reports, Vol. I, p. 21 and plates III and XIV).

|| This appears to be the mountain in which the R. Sone takes its rise, the river being thence called Maināka-prabhā (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VIII, p. 124); but some placed it between the southern point of the Indian peninsula and Ceylon (Prof. Sir M. Monier-Williams' Dictionary), and in this connexion see canto lii. verse 13.

§§ The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Pāṇḍura (xlv. 90); neither is mentioned in the dictionary as a mountain. Should we read Pāṇḍava instead? There are two hills now which are called Pāṇḍua hill or the Pāṇḍus' hill, one found by Mr. Carlleyle north west of Bairāt (or Vairāt) in Alwar (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. VI, pp. 95—101); and the other by Mr. Beglar north of Hatta and near the R. Ken in Bandelkhand, where pilgrimages are still made (id. vol. VII, p. 56).

There are also the Ajanta hills, north east of Aurangabad (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. IX, p. 121) which seem to be the same as the Ajayanti hill (Anc. Geog. of India, vol. I, p. 555).

‡ This is near Dwaraká or Kúsa-sthálí, the capital of the country Anarta in the peninsula of Gujarat; and the Girinar hill mentioned in the last preceding note is sometimes identified with this hill.

The Váyu Purāṇa mentions Go-dhana instead (xlv. 91), which suggests Go-varādhana, but Go-varādhana does not suit the metre. It is strange, however, so famous a hill should be omitted.

†† I do not find this. Is this to be connected with the Káramár hill, in Gándhára? (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. II, pp. 92 and 106, and map at p. 87; vol. XIX, p. 126).

‡‡ Mr. Beglar, in a list of tirthas where portions of Párvatí's body are fabled to have fallen when she was destroyed at Daksha's sacrifice, mentions "Sri Parvat, near the Karatoya River." * Raivata, or Raivataka, was near Dváraká or Kuśa-sthalí, which was near the extreme western promontory, and was the capital of the country Anarta, in the peninsula of Gujarat; for in the M.-Bh., a festival on this mountain is described, in which the citizens of Dváraká went out there with their families, in thousands, on foot or in carriages (Ádi-P. ccix. 7906-17); and it is called the ornament of the gate of that city in the Hari-V. (cxiii. 6361-70; and cxiv. 6410-15.). The Girnar hill mentioned in the last preceding note is sometimes identified with this hill, but Mt. Girnar is about 110 miles from Dváraká, and this distance is incompatible with either of the passages quoted. There does not appear to be any mountain close to that city, but the Baradá group of hills is not far from it, and they are the only hills that comply with the conditions (see Arch. Surv. of W. India, by J. Burgess, Káthiáwád, pp. 12, 15, 84 and 154). Raivata is not necessarily a single mountain, for the Hima-vat, Vindhya and other ranges are often spoken of in the singular. I would therefore propose to identify Raivata with the Baradá Hills in Hálár, the western corner of the peninsula.

† The modern Mount Abu, at the south end of the Aravalli range. Vasishtha is said to have had his hermitage there (M.-Bh., Vana-P. lxxxii. 4097-8). The country around Arbuda was noted for its breed of horses (id. Sabhá-P. I. 1851.)

‡ Rishyamúka is in the Dekhan. It was the scene of Ráma's meeting with Sugriva and Hanúmán. I have proposed to identify it with the range of hills which stretches from Ahmadnagar to beyond Naldurg and Kalyani, dividing the Manjira and Bhima rivers (Journal, R. A. S., April, 1894, p. 253).

§ There are two hills of this name. One is mentioned in the Hari-Vaṁśa as situated in a gap or opening (vivara) of the Sahya Mts. (xcvi. 5331-40). It was three or four days' journey by swift chariot from Karavíra-pura (xcvi. 5325-40; and c. 5650-52), i.e., probably 100 or 120 miles in a hilly country: and that city, which was the capital of the country Padmávata, was on the Sahya Mts. on (and therefore near the source of) the R. Venvá, and presumably near Súrpāraka (xcv. 5212, 5228-31; and xcvi. 5283-5322). This R. Venvá would therefore appear to be the river Purna (or one of the other small rivers south of Surat), flowing into the Gulf of Cambay, south of the R. Tapti; Karavíra-pura would have been near its source on the Western Ghats, and Gomanta would probably be the hills S. or S.-E. of Nasik. The other Gomanta is the hill of Gwalior. Gen. Cunningham says it was originally called Gopác'ala and Gopa-giri, Gopáhvara, and later, Go-manta (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. II. pp. 372, 373). The Vāyu Purāṇa mentions Go-dhana instead (xlv. 91); but I have met with no hill of this name elsewhere; it suggests Go-varḍhana, but Go-varḍhana does not suit the metre.

* I do not find this.

‡ Śrī-parvata, or Śrī-śaila, is the name of a lofty rock which overhangs the R. Krishnā in the Kurnool District; it is the site of a famous temple called Mallikāṛjuna, one of the twelve great Linga shrines (Arch. Surv. of S. India, by R. Sewell, Vol. I. 90; Arch. Surv. of W India, by J. Burgess, p. 223). The Agni Purāṇa places Śrī-parvata on the R. Kāverī, and says it was dedicated to the goddess Śrī by Vishṇu, because she had once performed some austerities (cxiii. 3, 4). But Mr. Beglar, in a list of tīrthas where portions of Pārvatī's body are fabled to have fallen when she was destroyed at Dakṣha's sacrifice, mentions "Śrī Parvat, near the Karatoya River." This may perhaps be the river mentioned in verse 25, for I do not think there is any such hill near the other Karatoyā in North-East Bengal.

§ The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Kāru, or Ketu (xlv. 92) and a mountain Koṇva is mentioned in the Bhāgavata-P. (V. xix. 16); none are mentioned as mountains in the dictionary. There is a hill called Kolla in Mewat (Arch. Survey Reports, vol. XX. p. 133).

|| The modern Sursooty, between the Jumna and Sutlej. For a clear description, see Arch. Survey Reports, vol. II. 214, &c; and XIV. pp. 87-90 and Plate XXVI. There can be little doubt that in ancient times it was a very much larger river than it is now; see an interesting paper in the Journal, Beng. Asiat. Socy. 1886, Part II. p. 340; but in later times it perished, as it does now, in the sands of the desert, and Vinaśana was the name of the place where it disappeared (M.-Bh. Vana-P. lxxxii. 5052-5; and Śalya-P. xxxviii. 2119-20.). South and East of it was the Drishadvatī, and between them lay the sacred region called Brahmāvarta (Manu II. 17, 18) and Tri-piṣṭapa (M.-Bh. Vana-P. lxxxiii. 5074 and 7075) and also apparently Brahma-kshetra (ibid., 5076). The name Saras-vatī, however, was given to the seven rivers Su-prabhā, Kāñc'andāśhī, Viśālā, Manoramā, Ogha-vatī, Su-reṇu and Vimalodakā (id., Śalya-P. xxxix. 2188-2216.)

† The R. Chenab, in the Panjab. It was also called the Asikni, the Greek Akesines.

‡ Or, "and another C'andra-bhágá." There were two rivers of this name (M.-Bh., Bhishma-P. ix. 322 and 327), but I have found no data to identify the second.

§ The R. Sutlej; the Greek Hyphasis. In ancient times this river probably did not join the Beas, as it does now, but pursued an independent course to the confines of Sindh. It flowed South-West from where it issues from the Himalayas, into the channel called the Naiwal and then along the dry bed called the Hakra or Ghaggar, at a distance of 30 to 50 miles south of, and more or less parallel to, its present course. See Journal, Beng. Asiat. Socy., 1886, Part II. p. 332.

|| The modern R. Jhelam, in the Panjab; the Greek Hydaspes.

¶ The modern R. Ravi, in the Panjab; the Greek Hydraotes.

 This, does not appear to be known, though it is also mentioned by the Váyu (xlv. 95) and Kúrma Purāṇas (xlvii. 27), both of which read Kuhu. As it is mentioned in conjunction with rivers in the Panjab, is it to be identified with the Kubhá (Rig-V. x., 75. 6.), the Greek Kôphên, the modern Kabul river? (Cunningham, Anc. Geog. of India, I. 37).

†† The modern Goomti, which joins the Ganges on the left bank below Benares. There was, however, another and older Go-matí (Rig-V. x. 75. 6), which is probably the modern R. Gomāl, a western tributary of the Indus (Muir, Sansk. Texts, II. 357).

‡‡ Gen. Sir A. Cunningham says this is a name of the Go-matí (Arch. Surv. Repts, I. 315). The text is Go-matí Dhúta-pápá c'á; and the Váyu (xlv. 95), Kúrma (xlvii. 27), Varáha (lxxxv.) and Vishnu Purāṇas all read the same. The two words are also linked together in the Muhá-Bhārata (Bhishma-P. ix. 325), but not, I believe, in the Ramayana, where the Go-matí is generally called "crowded with cattle." Dhúta-pápá then either means the Go-matí, and the translation would be, "and the sin-cleansing Go-matí;" or it denotes some tributary of that river.

§§ There were two rivers of this name, this one (see M.-Bh., Bhishma-P. ix. 337), and another in the Dekhan (ibid., 322; Anuśās.-P. clxv. 7653: and Rámáyana, Kishk. K. xli. 13). This river is mentioned in various passages (M.-Bh., Vana-P. lxxxiv. 8045-6; lxxxvii. 8323; xcv. 8513; Sánti-P. xxiii. 668, &c.; Anuśās.-P. xix. 1408-11; and Hari-Vaṁśa xii. 710), and from these

it appears to have been a considerable river between the Go-matī and Ganges, in or near the territory of Ayodhyá, and having its source well up in the Himálayas. The only river which satisfies these conditions is the modern Ramgangá, which joins the Ganges on the left, near Kanauj; and this river therefore is probably the Báhudá.

* Or, better, Drishad-vatī; the famous river between the Saras-vatī and Jumna. It was the southern and eastern boundary of Brahmávarṭa (Manu ii. 17). For a full description, see Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts. II. 214, &c.; and XIV. 87-90, and plate xxvi. See also note under Saras-vatī in verse 16.

† Read Vi-pásá, for Vi-pásā. It is the modern R. Bias, in the Panjab, the Greek Hyphasis. It is now a tributary of the Sutlej, but was probably altogether separate in olden times, for the Sutlej then had an independent course considerably to the south-east.

‡ There are two Devikás, one in the Dekhan (Rámáy. Kishk. K. xli. 13), and this river (M-Bh., Bhīshma-P. ix. 324; Anuśās.-P. xxv. 1696-7; and Vana-P. cxxi. 14229). From the second of these passages it appears that the northern Deviká was near Kashmir, and it may probably be identified with the modern river Deeg, a tributary of the Ravi on its right bank. The Deviká, which is mentioned in Vana-P. lxxxii. 5044-9, seems to be a lake, and may be the same as Deviká Sundariká hrada in Anuśās.-P. xxv. 707-8.

§ I do not find any river of this name mentioned elsewhere. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Ikshu (xlv. 96), and this occurs in the M-Bh. (Bhīshma-P. ix. 324); but I have found no data to identify it. Probably, however, we should read Vakshu or Vankshu, which is the Oxus.

|| This is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa gives the same name (xlv. 96), and the Varáha reads Nisvirá (lxxxv); while other readings are Nīśc'itá, Nirvirá, and Mic'itá. The Nīśc'itá and two other rivers, the Nic'itá and Nivárá, are mentioned in the Bhīshma-Parva list (ix. 326, 328), and the Nirvirá in M-Bh., Vana-P. lxxxiv. 8116-9, but there appears to be nothing to identify them beyond that the Nirvirá is connected with the Kauśikí (see note  below) in the last passage and its context.

¶ The R. Gandak, which flows into the Ganges on its north bank near Patna. It has shifted its course considerably; and formerly it flowed east of its present course, through the middle of the districts of Champaran, Muzaffarpur and Darbhanga.

 Or, generally, Kauśikí; the modern R. Kosi, which flows into the Ganges on its north bank, through the district of Purnea. It has shifted its course very remarkably. Formerly it flowed east of its present position.

called the Apagá in Kuru-kshetra (M-Bh. Vana-P. lxxxiii, 6038-40; Cunningham's Arch. Surv. Repts., XIV. 88, and plate xxvi). The Kúrma Purāṇa reads Lohinī c'eti instead (xlvii. 28); and the Vāyu (xlv. 96) and Varāha Purāṇas lxxxv) mention the Lohita. The Lohita is the Brahma-putra, which till last century flowed round the south side of the Garo Hills, and then southward through the districts of Maimansingh and Dacca. Lohinī, though fem., no doubt means the same. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Kauśikī c'a tritīyā tu instead (xlv. 96), which may mean the "third Kauśikī," for there seem to be three rivers of this name (see M-Bh., Vana-P. ccxi. 14231); or may refer to a river Tritīyā which is mentioned in the M-Bh. (Sabhā-P. ix. 373); but I would suggest as preferable, Kauśikī Karatoyā tu, or Kauśikī c'a tri-srotās tu. The Karatoyā is the modern Kuratee in the Bogra District in North Bengal; and Tri-srotas or Triḥ-srotasī (see M-Bh., Sabhā-P., ix. 375) is, I believe, the ancient name of the modern Teesta, which is east of that; both now flow into the Brahmaputra; but the first formerly flowed into the delta, before the Ganges and Brahmaputra shifted their courses. (Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., XV. 127 and 131, and plates i. and xxxiii. The Varāha Purāṇa adds the C'akshush-matī (lxxxv), an unknown name.

* Or Veda-smṛitī. Both names are mentioned in the M-Bh., the former in Anuśās.-P. clxv. 7651, and the latter in Bhīshma-P. ix. 324; and the Veda-smṛiti is also mentioned in the Bhāgavata-P. (V. xix. 17); but I have found nothing to identify it.

† Or Vedasinī, or Vetasinī. I have not met with these two names elsewhere; the Veda-vatī is mentioned in the M-Bh., (Bhīshma-P. ix. 324; Anuśās.-P. clxv. 7651), but there appears to be nothing to identify it.

‡ Or Vrata-ghnī, as the Kúrma Purāṇa reads (xlvii. 28). I have not met with either name elsewhere, and the river is not known apparently.

§ This is most probably the modern Kali Sindh, a tributary of the R. Chambal, though it may also be the Sindh, which is a tributary of the Jumna, between the Chambal and Betwa. The former is the more probable, because it is a large river and rises well up in the Páripátra range, and suits the following incident better. This Sindhu was a river of much note, and on it was a great tirtha, where Agastya met Lopá-mudrá, daughter of the King of Vidarbha, and she chose him for her husband (M-Bh., Vana-P. xcvi, xcvi; and cxxx. 10541). The name of this tirtha may have been Sindhúttama, (id. lxxxii, 4082-4095; and Anuśās.-P. clxv. 7650); but if so, it must be distinguished from the great tirtha Sindhúttama, which was on the Indus (Vana-P. lxxxii. 5021).

Veṇvā, and Anandini† also, Sadá-nirá,‡ and Mahí,§

* This name is not in the dictionary, but it occurs several times, and is a variation of Veṇvā. There is a river of this name in the Dekhan (see verse 24, note to Veṇvā), and one in Western India (see verse 26, note to Veṇvā), but I have not met with any river of this name in North India. Both the Vāyu (xlv. 97), and the Kúrma (xlvii. 29) Purāṇas read Varṇásá instead; the Varáha reads Parṇá instead (lxxxv), and the Kúrma offers Parṇá and Parṇásá in a note, (loc. cit.) The Varṇásá or Parṇásá is the modern Bandás, and there are two rivers of this name; one a tributary of the Chambal, rising near Udaypur (Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., VI., plate i.), and the other, a stream rising near Mt. Abu and flowing into the Rann of Kachh; the former is the larger, and is probably the river meant in the text. Cunningham writes the name Parṇásá (id. VI. 157) and Parṇa-násá (id. XV. 132), but the latter form seems doubtful. Deváṛṇidha is said to have married one of these rivers (Hari V. xxxviii. 1999, and 2004-10), probably the second.

† Or, Sánandini. The Vāyu (xlv. 97) and Kúrma (xlvii. 29) Purāṇas read O'andaná instead, and the latter proposes Bandhaná and Sābandhaná in a note. The Varáha reads O'andanābhá náśádác'ará (lxxxv.) for this and the next river, but not very intelligibly. None of these names appear to be identified.

‡ The river "that is always filled with water." The inclusion of this name among the rivers that rise in the Páripátra Mountains is strange yet the Kúrma Purāṇa places it in the same group (xlvii. 29, note). I have met with no river Sadá-nirá except that in North India. A river Sadá-nirá-mayá is mentioned in Bhíshma-P ix. 340, but there is nothing to identify it. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Satírā and Sadátírā instead (xlv. 97), but I have not found these names elsewhere.

A few remarks may be offered about the Sadá-nirá in North India. Sá-yana says it is the Karatoyá, the modern Kurattee (see verse 18, note††), but it is stated in the Sata-patha Bráhmaṇa (I iv. 1), that the Sadá-nirá was the boundary between Kosala and Videha. It is therefore identified with the R. Gandak by Dr. Eggeling (loc. cit., note) and Muir (Sansk Texts, II. 419-422). But the old stream of the Gandak flowed through the districts of Champaran, Muzaffarpur and Darbhanga, i. e., through the middle of the Videha country; and the Gandakí and Sadá-nirá are mentioned as distinct rivers in M-Bh., Sabhá-P xix. 794. The Sadá-nirá can hardly, therefore, be the same as the Gandak, and is more probably the modern Raptí, a tributary of the Sarayú, and the midway position of the Raptí eminently satisfies the position of a boundary.

The R. Mahí, which rises in Malwa and falls into the Bay of Cambay. The Vāyu Purāṇa has a variant, Mahatí (xlv. 97), and the Varáha reads Rohí.

21 The S'ona, ‡‡ and Mahá-nada, §§

(lxxxv.); both seem incorrect. The Mahitá mentioned in M-Bh., Bhíshma-P. ix. 328, appears to be this river.

* Or Pará, according to the Váyu Purāṇa (xlv. 98). This is said to be the modern R. Parbatí, which rises in Bhopal and falls into the Chambal (Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., II 308 and Rennell's Atlas of 1781).

† For C'arman-vatí, read C'arman-vatí. The R. Chambal, the largest tributary of the Jumna.

‡ This is not in the dictionary. The Kúrma Purāṇa mentions the Surá and the Sáryá (xlvii. 29), but I have found no other mention of them, and they do not appear to be known.

§ This must, no doubt, be connected with the town Vidiśá, which was on the R. Vetra-vatí (Megha D. i. 25) the modern R. Betwa (see next note). Vidiśá appears to be the modern town Bhilsa. The R. Vidiśá therefore was probably the small tributary which joins the Betwa on its left bank at Bhilsa.

|| The modern R. Betwa, which rises near Bhopal and flows into the Jumna. There was another river of this name in Western India (Hari-V. clxviii, 9514-6). The Varáha Purāṇa reads Veda-trayá wrongly (lxxxv).

¶ This is the river on which Ujjayiní, the modern Ujjain, stands (Megha D. i. 31, 32). Another S'iprá is mentioned in verse 24.

 This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Avantí instead (xlv. 98), which is preferable, and would be the river of the Avanti country (see notes to verses 52 and 55, below). The R. Avantí therefore is probably the river which rises near Mhow and flows into the Chambal. The Varáha Purāṇa reads Vapantí (lxxxv.) erroneously.

‡‡ The R. Sone which rises near the source of the Narbada and flows into the Ganges above Patna. It was also called Hiraṇya-báhu and Hiraṇya-váha; the Greek Erannoboas. For changes in its course, see Cuning. Arch. Surv. Repts., VIII. 4-24.

§§ Or, Mahá-nadí. It flows through Orissa into the Bay of Bengal. The main stream is now considered to be the river which rises near Kanker, but that cannot be the source meant in the text, for it would belong to quite a different water-shed. The Mahá-nada here must designate the branch now called the Hasdu or Hestho, which rises near the source of the Sone (Cunning.) Arch. Surv. Repts., XVII. plate i.). The Varáha Purāṇa omits the Mahá-nadí altogether, and reads Jyotí-rathá instead (lxxxv). This river, which is also called Jyoti-rathyá (M-Bh., Vana-P. lxxxv. 8150) and Jyoti-rathá (Hari-V. clxviii 9510-12) is said to be a tributary of the S'ona in the former passage, and is placed in the Dekhan in the latter. It is, therefore, probably the modern Johila, the southern of the two sources of the R. Sone.

* The modern Narbada or Nerbudda, which rises near the Sone and flows into the Gulf of Cambay.

† This is not in the dictionary, and I have not met the name elsewhere; it is a synonym of Jyoti-rathá? (See last page, note §§). The Kúrma Purána mentions the Su-rasá (xlvi. 30), and so also the Varáha (lxxxv); instead of this and the next river the Váyu Purána reads Su-mahá-drumá or, Surahádrumá (xlv. 99); but I have not met with any of these names elsewhere, except Su-rasá in the Bhágavata-P. (V. xix. 17)

‡ This is not in the dictionary, but is mentioned in M-Bh., Anuśás-P. clxv. 7648. I have found nothing to identify it.

§ The R. Mandakin, which flows near Mt. Chitrakut into the R. Paisuni, a tributary of the Jumna between the Ken and the Tons (Cunning., Arch. Surv. Repts., XXI. 11). Mr. Beglar's proposal to identify it with the R. Reur, a southern tributary of the Sone (Ibid. XIII. 42-54) depends upon his identification of Mt. C'itra-kúṭa with Ramgarh hill in Chhattisgarh, and is untenable (see Journal, R. A. S., April, 1894, page 240). The river Reur, or Rer, is also called Araud, and all these forms appear to point to Eraṇḍá as the original name.

¶ This is not in the dictionary. It is no doubt to be connected with Mt. C'itra-kúṭa, the modern Chitrakut (see Journal, R. A. S. April, 1894, page 239), and is probably the stream which flows round the south and east of the modern Mt. Chitrakut, past Karwi into the Jumna.

 This is not in the dictionary, but a C'itrotpalá is mentioned in M-Bh., Bhishma-P. ix. 341. Cunningham says C'itrotpalá is the name of the modern main-stream of the Mahá-nadí below its junction with the Pairi (Arch. Surv. Repts., VII. 155, and XVII. 70); but that river as mentioned already (page 295, note §§) would belong to a different water-shed.

†† Or Támasí, as the Kúrma Purána reads (xlvi. 30). It is the R. Tons which flows into the Ganges on the right bank below Allahabad.

‡‡ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found the name elsewhere. The Váyu Purána (xlv. 100) and the Varáha (lxxxv.) read Karatoyá instead. Should we read Karma-noilá, as a synonym of Karma-násá? The river

Písác'iká, * and Pippali-śroni † also, Vi-pásá, ‡
 23 the river Vañjulá, § Sumerujá, || Sukti-matí, ¶

meant is no doubt the modern Karamnasa, which flows into the Ganges on the right bank just above the Sone.

* I have not met with this river elsewhere. Písác'a was a name given to various races, chiefly barbarous hill tribes (Muir, Sansk. Texts, II. 59). In this place it would, no doubt, mean the tribes inhabiting Rewah and Chuta Nagpore, and the Písác'iká is probably one of the southern tributaries of the Sone, such as the Rer (see page 296, note §), or Kanhar.

† Or Pipyalá śroni, as the Váyu Purāṇa reads (xlv. 100); or Pippalá, as the Varāha reads (lxxxv). I have not found any data to identify it, but have seen the name assigned to the modern river Paisuni or Parsaroni, a tributary of the Jumna between the Ken and the Tons (Arch. Surv. Repts., XXI. 11), and these words may well be corruptions of Pippali-śroná.

‡ This appears to be the river mentioned in M.-Bh., Anuśās-P. xxv. 1733 and perhaps 1710-11 also. It is probably the modern Bias which flows past Saugor and joins the R. Ken, a tributary on the right bank of the Jumna. (Cunning., Arch. Surv. Repts., XXI. 157, and plate xxxiv). The Ken or Kiyán, an important stream, does not appear to be mentioned; it is said to be a corruption of Karṇa-vatí (Ibid. 156; and II. 446), though Lassen gives Káyana as its ancient form (Ind. Alt., Map). Was Vi-pásá the ancient name of this whole river? The Vi-pásá in the Panjab is mentioned in verse 18. The Varāha Purāṇa reads Viśáld (lxxxv), and the Kúrma mentions this name as a variant (xlvii. 31). There are several rivers of this name, and the river here meant is no doubt the Saras-vatí Viśáld at Gaya (M.-Bh., S'alya-P. xxxix. 2188-9, and 2205-6), probably the modern Lilajan which flows past Bodh Gaya.

§ I have not found this name elsewhere. The Varāha Purāṇa reads Vañjuká (lxxxv), the Kúrma Mañjulá (xlvii. 31), and the Váyu Jambulá (xlv. 100). Of these names I have met only with Mañjulá elsewhere (M.-Bh., Bhíshma-P. ix. 341), but with no data to identify it. The river meant is probably that on which Gaya stands; its eastern source is called the Mohana, its middle portion the Phalgu, and the eastern branch, into which it divides, the Jumna.

|| The Váyu Purāṇa reads Siterajá (xlv. 101), and the Varāha Virajá (lxxxv). I have not met with any of these names elsewhere, but the M.-Bh. mentions three rivers Virá (Bhíshma-P., ix. 329), Vira-vatí (ibid., 332) and Virankará (ibid., 333), which are all distinct. The Matsya Purāṇa reads two names instead, the Suní and Lajjá (cxiii. 26), probably erroneous.

¶ This river has been much written about but does not seem to be identified safely yet. See p. 285, note ‡; and also Cunning., Arch. Surv. Repts.,

Śakulī,* Tridivá in regular order,† Vega-váhinī‡ also § flow from the slopes of the Vindhya || Mountains.

IX. 55. It is mentioned in the Hari-Vaṁśa (clxviii. 9509-13) and is said there to be in the Dekhan; it seems to be meant by the name Mukti-matī in M.-Bh., Bhīṣma-P. ix. 342; and perhaps it is referred to in Hari-V. xxxvii. 1980-7. These passages, however, may allude to two rivers of this name. It was the river on which stood Sukti-matī, the capital of C'edi; see note to C'edi in canto lviii, verse 16.

* The Váyu Purāṇa reads Makruṇā or Makṣhaṇā (xlv. 101), and the Varāha Pankintī (lxxxv), but I have not met with any of these names elsewhere. The Śakulī, however, may probably be identified with the R. Sakri, which flows into the Ganges on the south, about half-way between Patna and Monghyr (Cunning., Arch. Surv. Repts., VIII. plate i; and XV. plate iv). There is also another Sakri which is a tributary of the R. Seonath, a tributary of the Mahānadi (id. XVII. plate i), but that rises rather in the Riksha Mts. The Bhīṣma-P. list mentions a river called Makarī (ix. 331); and the Matsya Purāṇa reads Mukufā instead (cxiii. 26).

† The text Tridivā-kramu seems wrong, and I have adopted the reading of the Váyu Purāṇa Tridivā kramāt, which is preferable. The word kramāt, if right, would indicate that the rivers are mentioned in regular order from west to east. The Tridivá is also mentioned in the M.-Bh., (Bhīṣma-P. ix. 324; and Anuśās.-P. clxv. 7654), but no data are given to identify it. It may be noticed there is a river called the Krumu (Ṛig.-V., X. 75.6), which is probably the modern R. Kuram, a tributary of the Indus, south of the Kabul R. (Muir's Sansk. Texts, II. 357); but it cannot be intended here. Another Tridivá is mentioned in verse 23.

‡ This is not in the dictionary, but it occurs in M.-Bh., Sabhā-P. ix. 371. The Váyu (xlv. 100) and Varāha (lxxxv) and Kúrma Purāṇas (xlvii. 31) read Bālu-vāhint instead, and the last gives Ratna-vāhinī as a variant. I have not met with either of these names elsewhere.

§ The Varāha Purāṇa adds another river Rātrī (lxxxv), but I have not met with it elsewhere.

|| The text reads Skandha, which is clearly wrong. The Váyu (xlv. 101) Kúrma (xlvii. 31) and Varāha Purāṇas (lxxxv) read Riksha. There is certainly some confusion in this group of rivers, for the Mandākinī, Daśārnā, and Tamasā rise in the Vindhya watershed, while the Soṇa, Mahā-nada, and Narmadā rise rather in the Riksha Mts; but the rivers mentioned in verse 24 rise in the Riksha Mts, so that the proper reading here should no doubt be Vindhya. The Agni Purāṇa says the Narmadā rises in the Vindhya Mts. (cxviii. 7); so that perhaps this river and also the Sone and the Hasdu branch of the Mahānadi, which all rise close together near Amara-kaṇṭaka,

24 The Siprá, * Payoshní, † Nir-bindhyá, ‡ Tápi, § and may have been considered to belong to the Vindhya watershed. There seems to have been some vagueness in this matter, for the Utkalas and (Dakṣiṇa) Kosalas are classed among the races who inhabited the Vindhya Mts. in verses 53 and 54.

* One Siprá has been mentioned already in verse 20, and the Hari-Vaṛṇsa says there is a Siprá in the southern region (clxviii. 9509). The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Madrá instead (xlv. 102); and the Kúrma (xlvii. 32) and Varāha (lxxxv) Sighrodá. I have not found either of these names elsewhere, but a river Sighrá is mentioned (M.-Bh., Bhīshma-P. ix. 336) and another called Sivá (ibid., 332). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Kshiprá (cxiii. 27).

† The Payoshní was in the southern region (M.-Bh., Vana-P. lxxxviii. 8329-35); it was the river of Vidarbha (ibid. cxx. 10289-90), and was separated from the Narmadā by the Vaidúrya Mts. (ibid. cxxi. 10306-7). It was the modern river Purna (the tributary of the Tapti) together with the lower part of the Tapti into which the Purna continues. A careful consideration of King Nala's remarks (ibid. lxi. 2317-9) with a map will show that the view described could only have been obtained from a position on the Satpura Mts. about longitude 75°; hence the Payoshní visible from there could be only the lower part of the Tapti. Such was considered the main stream in old times, and it was a famous and sacred river. Gen. Cunningham's proposal to identify the Payoshní with the Pahoj, a tributary of the Jumna between the Sindh and Betwa, (Arch. Surv. Reports, VII. plate xxii.) is untenable as regards this famous river; but there were two rivers of this name (M.-Bh., Bhīshma-P. ix. 324 and 327), and the Pahoj may be the other Payoshní. The Varāha Purāṇa reads Payollí (lxxxv), which seems a mistake.

‡ Or Nir-vindhyá; or according to the Vāyu Purāṇa, Nir-bandhyá (xlv. 102). One river Nir-vindhyá is mentioned in the Megha-D. (I. 28 and 29, commentary) as lying between the R. Vetravati (or Betwa) and Ujjayini (Ujjain), and (if the Pará is rightly identified with the modern Parbati, see note to verse 20) must be the modern Parwan which is west of the Parbati; but that river rises in the Vindhya Range according to the Megha-Dúta, and belongs to the Páripátra watershed according to verses 19 and 20 above; on either view it is out of place here. There was, however, another large river of this name in the Dekhan, for it is mentioned along with the Payoshní, the Tápi and the Godavari and its tributaries in the Bhágavata-Purāṇa (V. xix. 17), and judged by its position there, it may be the Pen-ganga a tributary of the Warda.

§ See note to Payoshní above. This is the upper part of the modern Tapti before it joins the Purna. This branch was hardly known in early times; it does not appear to be named in the Mahá-Bhārata or Rámáyana, nor is it mentioned in the copious list in the Bhíshma-P. (ix). The reason was, no doubt, it was hidden amid hills and forests.

* Or Nishadhá, as the Váyu Purána reads (xlv. 102). I have not met with this name elsewhere, but it naturally suggests a connexion with Nishadha, the realm of Nala. As regards Nishadha, see the note to verse 54 below. This river then may be one of the small tributaries of the Narmadá or Tapti, which rise in the middle part of the Satpura Range. The Kúrma Purána reads Mahánadí instead (xlvii. 32), which may mean the Mahánadí in Chhattisgarh and Orissa, but is unsatisfactory, as it has mentioned that river before (ibid., 30). The Matsya Purána reads Rishabhá instead (cxiii. 27), which I have not met elsewhere.

† This form is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purána reads Venrá (xlv. 102); the Kúrma reads Vinná and gives Venyá and C'intá as variants (xlvii. 32). C'intá is no doubt an error. The other names are merely different forms of the same word. The river is called Venrá in the Hari-V. (clxviii. 9509-10) and also in the M.-Bh. (Sabhá-P. xxx. 1118), but in the latter poem it is generally called Vená, and this seems the proper term (Bhíshma-P. ix. 335; Anusás-P. clxv. 7648; Vana-P. lxxviii. 8328, clxxxix. 12909, and lxxxv. 8176-7; whether the same river is also meant in line 8175 is not clear). From the passage last cited it appears the Vená is the river which joins the Godávarí and Varadá (the modern Warda), that is, the modern Wain-ganga and its continuation the Pranbíta. The Varáha Purána reads Veshápádá (lxxxv) which seems a mistake. This river appears to be also called Su-vená (M.-Bh., Vana-P. clxxxix. 12909) in contra-distinction to the Krishna-vená (ibid.; and also id. Vana-P. lxxxv. 8180-1; Bhíshma-P. ix. 335, and Anusás-P. clxv. 7648; and Hari-V. clxviii. 9509-11) which appears from the second passage to be a tributary of the Vená, and which I have proposed to identify with the western tributary rising near Deoghar and Seoni (Journal, R. A. S., 1894, p. 244). Another river of this name is mentioned in verse 26, and a Venrá in verse 19.

‡ This is no doubt the modern Bytarni, which flows through the north of Orissa; and if it is rightly classed here, the Riksha Range must include the hills which stretch along the south of Chuta Nagpore.

§ The Váyu Purána reads Sitibáhu (xlv. 102), the Kúrma Baláka (xlvii. 32) and the Varáha Vedipáka (lxxxv). None of these rivers are mentioned in the dictionary, but the name Sinibáhu is given. I have not found any of these names elsewhere, except Baláka in M.-Bh., Anusás-P. xxv. 1706-7, which may be a river, but appears from the context to be in Northern India. Perhaps the reading should be Silávati or Silāvati, which seems to have been the ancient name of the modern river Selye; this after uniting with the Rúpnarain is the river on which Tamluk, the ancient Támra-liptaka (see verse 44 below), is situated; and which may well find mention here. Perhaps the name Baldhá may be connected with the modern river Barákar, a tributary of the Damudá; these two combined form the largest river in Western Bengal, and flow close to Tamluk. Tamluk was a famous port, and it would be strange if the rivers near it were overlooked. The M.-Bh. mentions a river Sata-baldá (Bhishma-P. ix. 328). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Viśva-māldá instead (cxiii. 37). I have not met either name elsewhere.

25 vati,* Karatoyá,† Mahá-gaurí,‡ and Durgá,§ and Antaḥ-sirá;||

* I have not met with this name elsewhere. It may be the Subarna-rekha or one of the small rivers in the north of Orissa; or may we conjecture Damud-vatí, and identify it with the R. Damudá in West Bengal? See the last note.

† One river of this name in North Bengal has been mentioned in verse 18 notett; and there was another of the same name in the north of India (M.-Bh., Anuśās.-P. xxv. 1699); neither can be meant here. I have not found any Karatoyá elsewhere, which rises in the Riksha range. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Toyá instead (xlv. 103), and so also the Varāha (lxxxv); but I have not found this name elsewhere. Perhaps the reading should be Karabhác'a. Karabhá or Kapiśá is the name of a river on the confines of Utkala and Kalinga (Raghu-V. iv. 38, commentary), but no details are given to identify it. The name Kapiśá suggests identification with the modern Cossye or Kansai (the chief river in the Midnapur district) which is said to be modified from Kamsuvatí, but may well be a corruption of Kapiśá-vatí.

‡ This is also mentioned in M.-Bh., Bhishma-P. ix. 341. It is no doubt a synonym of Brahmání and Bráhmaṇí, all being names of Durgá; it would then be the modern R. Brahmani in Orissa.

§ There are two rivers of this name mentioned in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 337 and 341) in the M.-Bh., and the second is that intended here, as it is placed with the Mahá-gaurí; but I have not met with the name elsewhere. It may be a synonym of the small river Bráhmaṇi which flows through the Moorshedabad district into the right bank of the Bhágíraṭhí branch of the Ganges.

|| This is not in the dictionary. The Vāyu (xlv. 103) and Kúrma (xlvii. 33) Purāṇas read Antaḥ-sílá. The Varāha reads Antyágirá (lxxxv), which is no doubt an intended synonym. I have not met with any of these name (V?-) where, but Antra-sílá is mentioned (M.-Bh., Bhishma-P. ix. 337). Antaḥ-sy seems to be the correct form; and if the name is descriptive, the river is probably one of the northern tributaries of the Mahánadi; all of which are encompassed with hills. See however a people called Antar-giryas in verse 24 below.

those rivers* flow from the slopes of the Riksha† Mountains, have holy waters and are bright.

* The Varāha Purāṇa mentions also Mañjálá Subhá (lxxxv); I have not found the former name elsewhere; but the Subhá is mentioned in the Hari-Vaṁśa (clxviii. 9509-10), and a river Maningá is mentioned in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 342). There are no data to identify them, except that the passage in the Hari-Vaṁśa places the Subhá in the Dekhan.

† The text reads Bindhya or Vindhya, and yet makes the next group of rivers also rise in the same range. The Váyu (xlv. 108) and Kúrma (xlvii. 33) and Varāha (lxxxv) Purāṇas read the same; but the proper reading must be Riksha as the Vishṇu Purāṇa says (Bk. II. Chap. iii), for the Tápi, Venyá and Vaitarapí certainly do not rise in the former mountains but in the latter. The Agni Purāṇa wrongly groups the Tápi and Payoshní with the Godavari and other rivers as rising in the Sahya Mts.

‡ The modern Godaverí. This river was famous from the earliest times. Jana-sthána, the scene of Ráma's first conflict with the Rákshasas was the country on both its banks between its tributaries the Manjira and Pranhita (see Journal, R. A. S., 1894, p. 247).

§ Or Bhíma-rathá as the Váyu (xlv. 104) and Varāha (lxxxv) Purāṇas read: Bhíma-rakshá which the Kúrma gives (xlvii. 34) seems incorrect. The former is the name as given in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P. lxxxviii. 8328; Bhishma-P. ix. 327; and Anuśás.-P. clxv. 7653). This is the modern Bhima, the tributary of the Kṛishná, rising near Poona. The Varāha Purāṇa adds immediately Marathá (lxxxv); is it a mistaken repetition of the last three syllables of the preceding river? I have found no such river.

|| The modern Kistna. This river received very little notice in ancient times, and was almost unknown compared with the Godávareí and Káveri. Besides its inclusion in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 340), it is doubtful if it is so mentioned in the M.-Bh., or Rámáyana. It is omitted from the lengthy account of Sahadeva's conquests in the south (Sabhá-P. xxx), and the detailed pilgrimage itineraries (Vana-P., Tírtha-yátrá-P.) and other geographical discourses. It does not occur in the story of Raghu's conquests even in the late poem, the Raghu-Vaṁśa. The reason seems to be that the country through which it flows was nearly all forest in ancient times.

¶ For táthátará of the text the Váyu Purāṇa reads c'a vañjúlá (xlv. 104) and the Kúrma c'a vasyatá or c'a vatsarí (xlvii. 34). I have not found these names elsewhere. Perhaps we should read some name like Mañjirá, as the large southern tributary of the Godávareí is now called, though its earliest name was apparently Mandákini (Rámáy., Yuddha K. cx. 38, 39; Journal, P. A. S., 1894, p. 250).

* This form is not in the dictionary. The Varáha Purāṇa reads Veṇá (lxxxv); the Kúrma Veṇá or Varṇá (xlvii. 34); and the Váyu Vaiṇí (xlv. 104)—all mere variations, the proper name no doubt being Veṇá. This is the third river of this name mentioned here, see verses 19 and 24. It is probably the same as the Vīṇá in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 328), and the Veṇṇá in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa (V. xix. 17). Is it to be identified with the R. Penner which is between the Kistna and Kaveri; though the Sanskrit name of the Penner is said to be Pináká (Arch. Surv. of S. India, by R. Sewell, I. 123 and 129)?

‡ This is not in the dictionary, but it is also mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 328) and in the Vana-P. (ccxxi. 14232), and was a large and known river. Though not apparently identified, it is probably one of the large western tributaries of the Kistna.

§ This is not in the dictionary, but the Varáha Purāṇa agrees (lxxxv) and the Matsya (cxiii. 29). I have not found the name elsewhere and it does not appear to be identified. The Agni P. reads Vāradá (cix. 22), the large southern tributary of the Kistna called Varada or Vedavati.

|| The modern Caverry or Coleroon in south India. It was better known than the Kistna in ancient times. It is mentioned in the M.-Bh., (Vana-P. lxxxv. 8164-5; clxxxix. 12910; and Bhīshma-P. ix. 328) and Rámáy. (Kishk. K. xli. 21 and 25). King Jahnu is said in the Hari-Vaṁśa to have married this river, and made the Ganges his daughter (xxvii. 1416-22; and xxxii. 1757-61).

 The text reads Binḍhya or Vinḍhya here, after having read it already in verse 25; and offers Sahya as a variant in a note. The latter is manifestly the proper reading, and agrees with the Kúrma (xlvii 34) and Váyu (xlv. 104) Purāṇas.

†† This is not in the dictionary. The Agni Purāṇa agrees with it (cxvii. 8); the Kúrma reads Ritu-málá (xlvii. 35), the Varáha S'ata-málá (lxxxv), and the Bhāgavata Kata-málá (V. xix. 17). Is it to be identified with the Veṇá-mali which flows out north of Cochin? The people of Kac'c'hu or Cochin are mentioned in canto lviii. verse 28.

‡‡ This is mentioned as a place of pilgrimage in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P.

Támra-parńí, where (the commentator adds, it is well-known) pearls were produced. This river then was in the Pándya country and flowed into the G. of Manaar. It is the modern Chittar, the river of Tinnevely (Arch. Surv. of S. India, by R. Sewell, I. 303).

* The Váyu Purána reads Pushpa-játí (xlv. 105), the Kúrma Pushpa-vatí (xlvii. 35), and the Varáha Pushpá-vatí (lxxxv). I do not find any of these names elsewhere. A tirtha Pushpa-vatí is mentioned (M.-Bh., Vana-P. lxxxv. 8154-5), but it was situated between Dakshina Kosala (Chhattisgarh) and C'ampá (Bharalpur). A river Pushpa-vení is mentioned (id., Bhishma-P. ix. 342), which is joined with a river Utpalá-vatí and therefore is probably the same as the river in the text. A Pushpa-váhiní is mentioned as situated in the south in the Hari-Vańśa (clxviii. 9510-2).

† This is the same as the Utpalá-vatí mentioned in the last note (M.-Bh. Bhishma-P. ix. 342) and the Utpalá (Hari-V., clxviii. 9510-2); and the Váyu (xlv. 105) and Kúrma (xlvii. 35), Matsya (cxiii. 30) and Varáha (lxxxv) Puráñas read Utpalá-vatí.

‡ There are only six noteworthy rivers rising in the Malaya Mts., viz., the Vaigai, Vaippar and Chittar on the east, the Amaravati (a tributary of the Kaveri) on the north, and the Ponani and Peri or Veda-mali on the west. The Chittar is the Támra-parńí, hence the three others named in the text must be found among the five remaining modern rivers.

§ Not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purána reads Tri-sámá (xlv. 106), and the Agni P. also (cxviii. 8); while the Varáha reads Tri-yámá (lxxxv). I have met only with the Tri-sámá elsewhere (Bhágavata Purána, V. xix. 17). It is probably one of the small rivers on the Eastern coast, for the interior behind these mountains was not well known. The Matsya Purána reads Tri-bhágá (cxiii. 31) which I have not met elsewhere.

|| This is the river on which Ganjam stands, and it bears the same name still. It is mentioned in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 343). The Váyu Purána reads Ritr-kulýá (xlv. 106), by mistake. Another Rishi-kulýá is mentioned in verse 23

¶ This is not in the dictionary. The Váyu (xlv. 106) and Varáha Puráñas (lxxxv) read Ikshulá; and Ikshudá which the Matsya Purána reads (cxiii. 31) is, a variant. I have not found any of these names elsewhere, but the R. Ikshu is mentioned (M.-Bh., Bhishma-P. ix. 324). It is probably one of the small streams on the Eastern coast.

* This is the second Tridivá, see verse 23; but I have not found two rivers of this name mentioned anywhere else. Instead of Tridivá c'a yá as in the text, the Matsya Purāṇa reads Tridivác'alá (cxiii. 31).

† This is the modern Languliya, on which Chicacole stands, between Vizianagram and Calingapatam. The Varāha Purāṇa reads Múlini or Lámúlini (lxxxv) and the Matsya Múli (cxiii. 31); I have not found these names elsewhere and they seem incorrect. The Lángalí mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabbá-P. ix 374), is probably this river.

‡ The Varāha Purāṇa reads Vamśa-vará (lxxxv), and the Vāyu Vamśa-dhará (xlv. 106); the latter is the correct name. It is the modern Bans-dhará, the river on which Calingapatam stands.

§ The Kúrma Purāṇa omits this group of rivers altogether, and puts three of them Tri-sámd, Rishiká and Vamśa-dhāriṇi into the next group (xlvii. 36). The Matsya Purāṇa mentions three more rivers, the Támraparāi, Saravá and Vimalá (cxiii. 31), but all these seem doubtful. A Támraparāi has been mentioned in verse 28. A Saravati is named in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 327), and a Vimalá or Vimalodá in various passages (e. g. Salya-P. xxxix. 2214-5; Hari-V. clxviii. 9517-8); but they are in Northern and Western India.

In note †† on page 284, the Mahendra mountains are said to be "the portion of the Eastern Ghats between the Godavari and Mahanadi rivers and the hills in the south of Berar," but this proposition must be modified on a full consideration of all the foregoing identifications. Gondwana as used by Wilson was applied to a very wide tract in Central India. The Mahendra Mts. cannot extend as far west as Berar nor beyond the Wain-ganga; and must be limited to the hills between the Mahanadi, Godavari and Wain-ganga, and may perhaps comprise only the portion of the Eastern Ghats north of the Godavari. It is in this last tract only that the name has survived. See Raghu Vamśa, iv. 43.

|| This is the second Rishi-kulyá, see verse 28. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Rishiká (xlv. 107), and the Varāha Rishiká (lxxxv), and the Matsya Káśiká (cxiii. 32). I have not met with these names elsewhere.

¶ The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Su-kumári (xlv. 107), and the Varāha Lásati I have not found these names elsewhere, but the Kumári is mentioned in the Bhīshma-P list (ix. 313).

 This is mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 340). The Varāha Purāṇa reads Manda-gámīni (lxxxv); and for this and the next river the Kúrma reads Gandha-mádana-gámīni (xlvii. 36), which is probably erroneous.

30 vāhinī,* Kripā,† and Palāśinī‡ are known to spring in the

* This is mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 340), but hardly in the same connexion.

† The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Kūpā (xlv. 107), and the Kūrma Kshiprā or Rūpā (xlvii. 36). I do not find any of these names elsewhere. A river Kṛitā is mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 326), but that appears from its context to be in north India.

‡ This is mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 330), but in so different a connexion that the references appear to be to two separate rivers. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Pāśinī (cxiii. 32), which however I have not met elsewhere.

§ These Mts. are but very rarely mentioned, and in page 285 note † I have noticed what has been written about them. They were in the Eastern region, for Bhīma in his conquests in that quarter marched from Hima-vat towards Bhallāṭa and conquered the Sukti-mat Mountain (M.-Bh., Sabhā-P. xxix. 1079). Though Bhallāṭa does not appear to have been identified, the only noteworthy hills in the east which have not been assigned to the other great ranges are the Garo, Khāsi and Tipperah Hills which bound Bengal in that direction. Can these be the Sukti-mat Mts.? There seems to be no improbability in this, for the river Lohita or Brahma-putra and the country Kāma-rūpa, which is in the Assam Valley, were known. If this identification is satisfactory, the R. Kumārī may be the modern Someswarī which flows southward between the Garo and Khasi Hills (both being names of Durgā); and the Kripā may perhaps be the Kapili which flows into the Brahma-putra a little above Gauhati, the ancient Kāma-rūpa; the other streams are not recognizable.

|| Saras-vatyah. Or should this mean only the rivers called Saras-vatī? There were seven rivers specially distinguished by this name (M.-Bh., Salya-P. xxxix. 2183-9), namely, 1. the Su-prabhā among the Pushkaras (ibid. 2198-2200), that is, near Ajmir; 2. the Kāñc'andāksī in Naimisha forest (ibid. 2201-4), which was on the Go-matī; 3. the Viśūlā at Gaya (ibid. 2205-6); 4. the Mano-ramā, the swift stream flowing from Himavat in the north part of Kosala (ibid. 2207-10); 5. the Oyha-vatī, which seems to be in Kuru-kshetra (ibid. 2212-3); 6. the Su-revū, which seems to be in Kuru-kshetra or near Gangā-dvāra (ibid. 2211-4); and 7. the Vimalodā or Vimalodakī at Haimanta-giri (ibid. 2214-5).

¶ Viśvasya mātaraḥ; compare M.-Bh., Bhīshma-P. ix. 344.

And others, small streams, are mentioned in thousands, 32 O bráhmaṇ, those which flow only during the rainy season, and those which flow at all seasons.

The Matsyas,* and Āśvakúṭas,† and Kulyas,‡

* The people and their country both went by the name Matsya. This country was part of the region called Brahmarshi (Manu ii. 19). It was south or south-west of Indra-prastha, the modern Delhi (M-Bh., Sabhá P., xxx. 1105-6; the mention in ibid. xxix. 1083 may be a mistake; but the Matsyas are named twice in the Bhīshma-P. list, ix. 347 and 348, unless one name be a mistake for Vatsa); and it was west of S'úrasena, which was the country round Mathurá, the modern Muttra (Virāṭa-P., v. 141-5; see note in canto lviii. verse 7): hence Matsya comprised the modern Alwar State and the land around that. It appears to have extended up to Kuru-kshetra, because no other country which could intervene is mentioned in Manu ii. 19. Its capital was Upaplavya or Upaplava (Salya-P., xxxvi. 1973-6) which was 1½ or 2 days' journey by chariot from Hástinapura (Udyoga-P., lxxxiii. 3010-17; lxxxv. 3040; and lxxxviii. 3101). Cunningham says Matsya was the country west of Agra and north of the R. Chambal, i. e., the whole of Alwar with portions of Jaypur and Bharatpur; and its capital was Vairāṭa, the modern Bairat (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 242; and XX. 2, and plate i).

The Váyu Purāṇa reads Vatsas instead (xlv. 110). Vatsa or Vátsya was in the region east of Delhi (Sabhá-P., xxix. 1084), and king Vatsa who is said to have given his name to the country was grandson of Divodása, king of Benares (Hari-V., xxix. 1587, 1597; and xxxii. 1753). Kauśámbī was the capital, and it has been identified by Cunningham with the modern Kosam which is on the north bank of the Jumna about 31 miles above Allahabad. Hence the country was also called Kauśámba (Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 301-310). Vatsa or Kauśámba therefore comprised the lower part of the Ganges and Jumna Doab and also probably the tract south of that, on the other side of the Jumna.

† The Váyu Purāṇa reads Kisashṇas, Kisashṇas or Kisadyas instead (xlv. 110); but none of these names are in the dictionary. The Matsya reads Kirátas (cxiii. 35) but they are out of place here. The text reads Matsyáśvakú-ṭáḥ kulyás'ca, but I would suggest instead Matsyás'ca Kanyákubjás'ca, thus reading Kanyá-kubjas or Kánya-kubjas instead of Āśvakúṭas and Kulyas. Kanyá-kubja or Kánya-kubja is the modern Kanauj, on the Ganges about 50 miles above Cawnpore; it was a famous city all through Indian history. People called Sukutyas are mentioned (Bhīshma-P. ix. 347), Āśvakas (ibid. 351), and Āśvátakas (ibid. li. 2105).

‡ This is not in the dictionary as a people; the word occurs in Vana-P., (cxxv. 10408), but does not appear to mean a people there. See the last note.

33 the Kuntalas,* the people of Kási,† and the Kośalas,‡ and the Atharvas, and Arka-lingas,§ and the Malakas,||

* This country is said by Muir to be one of the Piśác'a countries (Sansk. Texts, II. 59), but there were three people of this name, one in the Dekhan (Bhishma-P., ix. 367), who are mentioned in verse 48 below; and two others elsewhere (ibid. 347 and 359). Those mentioned in verse 347 are the people meant here, for they are grouped with the people of Kási and Kosala; and they probably occupied the country near Chunár (south of Benares), which Cunningham calls Kuntala (Arch. Surv. Repts., XI. 123). The third people were probably in the West.

† Benares, the ancient Vārāṇasī. It was the capital of an ancient and famous kingdom. According to the Rāmāyaṇa Kási was a kingdom (Ādi-K., xii. 20) while Prayāga and the country all around it was still forest (Journal, R. A. S., 1894, pp. 237-239). Its sacred character dates from comparatively late times, for it was one of the exploits for which Kṛishṇa was extolled that he burnt it for a succession of years and devastated it (Udyoga-P., xlvii. 1883; and Hari-V., clxi. 9142-3). For some vicissitudes in its early history, see Hari-V., xxix. and xxxii.

‡ Kośala, Kosala or Uttara Kosala, with its capital Ayodhyá, is the modern Oudh. Gen. Cunningham says it meant more particularly the country north and east of the R. Rapti (Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 327; and XVII. 68); but it seems rather to have denoted the country stretching from the Rapti on the east (see page 294 note †) to the confines of the Kuru and Pāñcāla kingdoms on the west. Northward it was bounded by the tribes that inhabited the slopes of the Himalayas, and southward by the kingdom of Benares. It was distinguished from another Kosala, which was called Dakṣiṇa or Mahá Kosala and which is mentioned in verse 54.

§ These two names are not in the dictionary, and I have not found them elsewhere; they seem to be mistakes. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads instead of them atha pūrve tilangās c'a (xlv. 111); but this is doubtful and unsatisfactory, for the Tilangas are mentioned as a southern people in canto lviii. verse 28. The Matsya reads and Āvantas and Kalingas (cxiii. 36), but these are hardly satisfactory; the former are mentioned in verses 53 and 55, and the latter in verses 37 and 46 below. Perhaps Arka-lingas may be meant as a synonym of Sūrya-vaṁśas, the Solar Race, yet this again is hardly satisfactory, for that race reigned in Kosala, which has just been mentioned separately. There is a low group of Brāhmins in Behar called Atharvas (Risley's Tribes and Castes of Bengal, I. 26).

|| This is not in the dictionary and seems erroneous. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Magadhas instead (xlv. 111), the people of Magadha or South Behar; but this is unsatisfactory for the Magadhas are mentioned in verse 44. The and Vṛikas*; these † are well known generally as the peoples who inhabit the Central Region.‡

Matsya reads Mūkas (cxiii. 36), which I have not met elsewhere. The reading should be Malajas probably. They are mentioned in the M-Bh. (Bhishma-P. ix. 357), and Rāmāyaṇa (Ādi-K. xxvii. 16-23), and from the course described in the latter poem as taken by Viśvā-mitra and Rāma it appears they were neighbours of the Karūshas, (see note to verse 53), and occupied the district of Shāhābād, west of the Sone, for Viśvā-mitra and Rāma crossing from the Sarayū to the south of the Ganges entered that district, which had been inhabited by the Malajas (ibid., 8-16.)

* The Vṛikas are named in Bhishma-P., li. 2106, and a king Vṛika is alluded to in the Hari-Vaṁśa (xiii. 760-61); but there is nothing to identify them. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Andhakas (cxiii. 36). The Andhakas were a subordinate family of the Yādava race, and are often mentioned in the M.-Bh. (e.g. Udyoga-P. lxxxv. 304), and Hari-Vaṁśa (xxxv. 1907-8; and xxxix. 2041; and xciv. 5190-5204), but they dwelt in Su-rāshṭra in the West and appear to be out of place here. The most probable reading seems to be the Vrajas, the people of Vraja (or Vṛji, as it was also called), the modern Braj, the country north-west of Mathurā or Muttra.

† This is a short list. Besides these the Vāyu Purāṇa has two lines at the beginning of this group, viz., "the Kurus, the Pāñcālas, and the Śālvas, and the Jāngalas, the Śūrasenas, the Bhadrakāras, the Bodhas and the lords of Sata-patha" (xlv. 109 and 110); much like a passage in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., ix. 346-7). The Matsya has the same lines, but gives the last two names as Bāhyas and Paṭac'aras (cxiii. 35, 36). For the Kurus, see canto lviii. verse 9; for the Pāñcālas, canto lviii. verse 8; for the Śālvas, canto lviii. verse 6; the Jāngalas are no doubt the people of Kuru-jāngala, see note to Kuru, canto lviii. verse 9; for the Śūrasenas, see canto lviii. verse 7. The Bhadrakāras are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhā-P., xiii. 590) and may perhaps be the same as the Bhadras mentioned in Vana-P. ccliii. 15256; they appear from these passages to have been situated on the west bank of the Jumna, somewhere between Delhi and Muttra. The Bodhas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhā-P., xiii. 590; Bhishma-P., ix. 347) and are probably the same as the Bodhis (Rāmāy., Ayodh-K. lxx. 15), who appear to have been situated on the eastern confines of the Panjab. I have not met Bāhyas elsewhere; it seems erroneous. Sata-patha seems to be erroneous, and Paṭac'ara is much better. The Paṭac'aras are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhā-P. xiii. 590-1; xxx. 1108; Virāṭa-P., i. 11-12; &c.) and appear from the second of these passages to have occupied the tract south of the Aparā-matsyas, that is, probably the country south-west of Gwalior.

‡ Madhya-teśa, the whole of the Ganges basin from the Panjab as far

- 34 Now along the northern half of the Sahya mountains * that east as the confines of Behar; but Manu restricts it and defines its limits thus (ii. 21)—north, the Himalayas; south, the Vindhya Range; west, Vínasana which is where the R. Saras-vatí perishes in the desert (M-Bh., Salya-P. xxxviii. 2119-20); and east, Prayága or Allahabad.

* The text Sahyasya c'ottare yás tu seems incorrect; these words cannot well go with the preceding verse, for no people north of the Sahya Mts. and south of the Páripátra Mts. could be within Madhya-deśa; and they do not agree with the following words. The Váyu Purāṇa reads sahyasya c'ottarárdhe tu, which I have adopted. That Purāṇa agrees and is a little fuller—"Now along the northern half of the Sahya Mts., where the river Godávarí flows, that region is a delightful one within the whole of this earth. This paradise named Go-vardhana was built there by Sura-rāja for the sake of Ráma's spouse; the trees and herbs there were brought down from above by the Muni Bharadvāja for the sake of Ráma's spouse. He made a delightful wooded tract the private part of the palace (antaḥ-pura)" (xlv. 112-114). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Sahyasyánantare c'aite and is similar, but varies at the second sentence, thus—"Where for the sake of Ráma's spouse the hill named Go-vardhana, Mandara, Gandha-mádana, trees from Svarga and heavenly plants (oshadhíh, acc.) were brought down by the Muni Bharadvāja for the sake of the spouse; hence that region excels in flowers, therefore it has become delightful." (cxiii. 37-39). The Ráma alluded to here must be Rámá Jámadagnya or Paraśu-Rátna, who dwelt in this region; see the next note.

† These people are here placed on the east side of the Sahya Mts. among the sources of the Godávarí. This region and the country west of it on the other side of these mountains and the tract northwards to the Narmadá are connected in many a story with Bhṛigu, his son C'yavana and his descendants Ric'ika, Jamadagni and Paraśu-Ráma (e. g. M-Bh., Adi-P. clxxviii. 6802-10; Vana-P. cxxi and cxxii with Sata-patha Bráhmaṇa IV. i. 5; Vana-P. lxxix. 8364-5; cxv. 10150-2; Sánti-P. xlix. 1778-82; Vana-P. xcix. 8681-2 with Sánti-P. ii). The Bhárgavas were however a numerous race and spread into other regions; they are also mentioned as one of the eastern peoples in verse 43 below. They held a high position and appear to have been numerous in king Kṛita-vírya's kingdom at Máhish-matí, and after his death their wealth, it is said, brought down on them the hostility of the Kshattriyas (Adi-P. clxxviii. 6802-15). Go-vardhana (masc.) as a city is not in the dictionary. I have not found it alluded to elsewhere.

* Vāhlīka or Bāhlīka or Bālīka is said in the dictionary to be the modern Balkh, and in Lassen's map to be the ancient Bactriane; but there was another country, if not two tribes of this name, in the Panjab. The name is written Vāhlīka or Vāhlika and there may have been a distinction between the two words, for both are mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 354 and 361). These were not uncommon names, and there were two princes called Vāhlika between Parikshit and Bhīshma in the Lunar Dynasty, and the later prince is styled a king (M.-Bh., Ādi-P., xciv. 3745, and 3750-51; and xc. 3798-3800). The Vāhlikas are mentioned twice in the Rāmāyaṇa and are placed in the western region (Kishk. K. xliii. 5), and also in the northern region (ibid., xliv. 13). A distinction as between two people of this name is also indicated by the mention of two independent kings of the Vāhlikas reigning contemporaneously in the M.-Bh. (Ādi-P. clxxxvi. 6992; Sabhā-P. xxxiii. 1266 and 1272; Udyoga-P. iii. 74 and 77). One of these two peoples was closely connected with the Madras, for Śalya, king of Madra, is also called lord of the Vāhlikas (Ādi-P. cxiii. 4425-40; and lxvii. 2642), and his sister Mādri is called Vāhlīkī also (ibid., cxv. 4886); and an ancient eponymous king Vāhlīka is placed in the same Krodha-vāsa gaṇa with the eponymous kings Madraka and Suvira (ibid., lxvii. 2695-6). The other people of this name appear to have been closely connected with the Daradas who were a mountain-tribe in the north of the Panjab (see note to verse 38), and are the modern Dards of Dardistan; for an ancient king Darada the Vāhlīka is mentioned who did not belong to the Krodha-vāsa group (Ādi-P. lxvii. 2694), and the Vāhlikas are linked with the Daradas (Bhīshma-P. cxviii. 5484) and are mentioned with the Kāmbojas and Yavanas and other ultra-Panjab tribes (Droṇa-P. cxxi. 4818; see also Sabhā-P. xxvi. 1031-2). If these inferences may be trusted, one Vāhlīka or Vāhlika was situated in the plains of the Panjab alongside Madra-deśa and very possibly south of it (see Rāmāy., Ayodh.-K. lxx. 16-19, with note to Madrakas in verse 36, and note to Kaikeyas in verse 37) i. e., between the rivers Chenab and Sutlej; and the other among the lower slopes of the Himalayas, very possibly between the Chenab and Bias. The name Vāhlīka appears to have been altered in later times to Bāhlīka seemingly by a punning resemblance to vahis, "outside," because they were shut out by the Saras-vatī, Kuru-kṣetra and other natural features from the central country which remained true to Brahmanism. The people of the Panjab were then collectively called Arattas or Bālīkas, and they and all the tribes beyond were stigmatized as impure and contemptible by the arrogant and intolerant brahmins of Madhya-deśa (Muir's Sansk. Texts. II. 482, and M.-Bh., Karna-P. xliv. 2026 &c.; see also Cunningham's Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 6, 14, 17, 195, &c.).

and the Vāṭadhānas, and the Abhīras,† the Kāla-

* This people is mentioned in several passages in the M-Bh. (Sabhā-P. l. 1826; Udyoga-P. iii. 86; Bhīshma-P. ix. 354; and Droṇa-P. xi. 398), and their name appears to be derived from an eponymous king Vāṭadhāna, who was of the same Krodha-vaśa group as the eponymous kings of the Vāhlīkas, Madras and Sauviras (Adi-P. lxvii. 2695-9). No doubt therefore they dwelt alongside those tribes. Their country Vāṭadhāna was part of the territory stretching from Pañc'a-nada to the Ganges, over which the hosts assembled on the Kauravas' side spread at the beginning of the great war (Udyoga-P. xviii. 596-601), and it was in the western region (Sabhā-P. xxxi. 1190-1). From these data it may be inferred that the Vāṭadhānas inhabited the country on the east side of the Sutlej, southward from Ferozpur. Manu declares a Vāṭadhāna to be the offspring of an outcaste brahman and a brahman woman (x. 21), but that is no doubt an expression of the same arrogance which in later times stigmatized all the Panjab races as outcastes (as mentioned in the last note), for Vāṭadhāna dvijas were among the people whom Nakula conquered (Sabhā-P. xxxi. 1190-1). The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Vāḍhadhānas (xiv. 115) erroneously.

† They were an aboriginal tribe and are called mlec'c'has and dasyus. (M-Bh., Vana-P. clxxxviii. 12838-40; and Mausala-P. vii. 222, &c.) They were scattered over various tracts and gained their livelihood in various ways. Three divisions of them are mentioned in the M-Bh. (Sabhā-P. xxxi. 1192), those who dwelt along the river Saras-vatī, those who lived by fishing, and those who inhabited the mountains. The first group occupied the north portion of the desert as far east as Vinasana on that river, for it is said the river perished there because of her hatred of them (Salya-P. xxxviii. 2119-20), and as far west as Pañc'a-nada (Mausala-P. vii. 220-242; and viii. 270; where Pañc'a-jana is probably a mistake for Pañc'a-nada); this group is probably the tribe of Abhīras mentioned in Bhīshma-P. ix. 354, and Rāmāy., Kishk. K. xliii. 19. The second group must no doubt mean those who lived by the sea and not simply on rivers, hence it would have inhabited the coast along the Rann of Kachh and the delta of the Indus; and it is no doubt the tribe of Abhīras mentioned in Kishk. K. xliii. 5. The context indicates that the third group were the mountaineers of the Aravalli Range and the hills of Malwa; but there was another section of this group which appears to have occupied the hilly tracts in the north or west of the Panjab, for it is classed with the Daradas and Kāśmīras (Bhīshma-P. ix. 375; and see note to verse 38), and with the Pāradas (Sabhā-P. l. 1832; and see note to verse 37). The Abhīras were closely connected with the Sūdras in these three groupings (Sabhā-P. xxxi. 1192; and see note to next verse). The descendants of all these Abhīras are the modern Ahirs who are scattered widely over Hindustān

36 toyakas,* and the Aparántas,† and the Súdras,‡ the proper. Another body of Abhíras was found in the Dekhan (see verse 47). The Abhíras are said in the Hari-Vaṁśa to have been dominated by the Daityas and Dánavas in ancient times, and to have been the chief inhabitants of the country from the Jumna to the peninsula of Gujarat (xciv. 51-52-80).

* So also in the Matsya Purāṇa (cxiii. 40). This word is written Kālaśhaka in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., ix. 354), but I have not found either name elsewhere. Possible readings might be Bāla-jartikāḥ or Bāla-kāthikāḥ. The former, however, seems inappropriate; the Jartikas are the same as the Bāhikas (Karna-P. xlv. 2033; Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 13 and 195) who are noticed in the note to "Vāhikas" (page 311). The "Bālas and Kāthis" would be a preferable reading. The Bālas, according to Cunningham, occupied the northern portion of Sindh and were ousted from there about the middle of the seventh century A.D. and moved south-east. The Kāthis (the Kathai of the Greek writers), according to the same authority occupied the Rechna Doab between the Chenab and Ravi rivers and also probably the northern portion of Sindh; they have retained the former territory, but those who held the latter were driven from it about the middle of the seventh century A.D. and settled in the peninsula of Gujarat where they have given the name Kāthiāwār to a district (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 33-37).

† Aparānta means "living at the western border." A people of this name is mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., ix. 355), and allusion is often made to Aparānta and the Aparántas (e.g., Vana-P., ccxvii. 7835-6; and Śānti-P., xlix. 1780-2); but the word, though it no doubt designates a people living in the extreme west, yet seems to have a general meaning in most passages (see verse 52 below), and those passages which use it in a restricted sense do not agree—thus Aparānta is stated to be a country in the middle of the sea (Bāghu-V., iv. 58, commentary), yet the Aparāntikas in canto lviii., verse 34 are placed in the tortoise's tail, that is, north of Sindhu and Sauvira which are placed by verse 30 in the right hind foot. Cunningham, judging from the spots where coins have been found, was inclined to locate them in Northern Sindh and parts of West Rajputana (Arch. Surv. Repts., XIV. 136, 137) which will satisfy canto lviii., verse 34. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Aparāntas instead (xl. 115) which seems erroneous. The Rāmāyaṇa mentions simply the Aparas (Kishk.-K., xliii. 23). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Purandhras (cxiii. 40) erroneously.

‡ The Súdras are often linked together with the Abhíras (M.-Bh., Sabhā-P., xxxi. 1192; Bhishma-P., ix. 375; Droṇa-P., xx. 798; Salya-P., xxxviii. 2119-20). They appear to have been considered dasyus (Śānti-P., clxxi. 6372; and clxxiii. 6446) and mlech'has (Vana-P., clxxxviii. 12838-40 where Súra seems a mistake for Súdra); yet their women are alluded to in rather favorable terms (Sabhā-P., I. 1829). They were divided into the same three groups as the Abhīras, viz., men of the plains, men of the sea-coast, and men of the hills (Sabhā-P., xxxi. 1192), inhabiting much the same regions (see note to Abhīras in verse 35; for Sūras in Rāmāy., Kishk.-K., xliii. 19 read probably Sūdras), hence it would seem these two people were considerably intermixed and were probably closely connected aboriginal races. One group of the Sūdras was known to the Greeks as Sudrakæ, and is placed by Cunningham in the middle of the triangle of the Panjab (Anc. Geog., I. 214-218; and Arch. Surv. Repts., II.).

* This is no doubt a mistake for Pahlavas, which the Vāyu Purāṇa reads (xlv. 115) and which occurs in canto lviii., verse 30; though Pallavas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., li. 1990). The Pahlavas are understood to be the Pehlavi or ancient Persians. Two people of this name are mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 355 and 375), but there appear to be no data to make a distinction as the allusions to the Pahlavas are generally vague, unless it be supposed there was a Pahlava colony in the Panjab; and this supposition would suit this verse, for the Persians were altogether outside India. The Hari-Vaṁśa says King Sagara defeated a great confederation of Pahlavas and other people, abrogated their laws, degraded them and made them wear beards (xiii. 763-4; and xiv. 775-783); but this seems a late fable, on a par with their being called dasyus (id., cxv. 6440-3). The Rāmāyaṇa has an absurd fable about the creation of the Pahlavas and other foreign races by Viśvā-mitra (Ādi-K., iv. 18-20; and lvi. 2-3); when contending with Viśvā-mitra he made his cow create Pahlavas. Sakas, Yavanas, &c., and Viśvā-mitra destroyed them all in succession.

† Or C'arma-maṇḍalas as in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 355) which this Purāṇa has followed closely in enumerating; this group of races. The Vāyu, however, reads the same as in the text (xlv. 115). I have not found any of these names elsewhere; but the name suggests identification with Samarkand. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Atta-khaṇḍikas or C'atta-khaṇḍikas (cxiii. 40) which appear to be erroneous.

‡ Gāndhāra was the whole of the lower basin of the Kabul river (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 15, and map to p. 87). It was a famous country in ancient times, its kings ranked with the highest Indian Sovereigns, and its princesses married into the noblest royal families. The passages in which the Gāndhāras are pronounced bad and impure (e.g., Śānti-P., lxxv. 2429-31; and ccvii. 7560-1; and Karna-P. xlv. 2070) betray the interpolated sentiments of a later age (Muir's Sansk. Texts, II. 482).

§ This is not in the dictionary. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Yavanas instead (xlv. 116), and so also the Matsya (cxiii. 41); this word is supposed to have denoted the Greeks originally, but the Yavanas appear to have been known in India long before Alexander's time. The Bhīshma-P. list mentions the Giri-gahvaras in this region (ix. 375).

37 the Sindhus,* Sauvīras,† and Madrakas,‡ and the

* Primarily Sindhu meant the country along the Indus, but it has generally denoted the lower portion of that country, that is, the modern Sindh more or less closely. It is placed by canto lviii., verse 30 in the Tortoise's right hind foot, and it stretched down to the peninsula of Kāthiāwār which is called the territory of Sindhu-Rāja in the Hari-Vaṁśa (cxiv. 6407-12). The Sindhus are mentioned frequently in the M.-Bh., and are named twice in the Bhīshma-P. list, first in connexion with the Pulindas (ix. 348), and again in conjunction with the Sauvīras (ix. 361), but there do not appear to be any other passages which tend to shew a division. Sindhu had a well-known breed of horses (Droṇa-P., xxiii. 973).

† The Sauvīras claimed descent from an eponymous king Suvīra of the same Krodha-vaśa group as the Madras and Vāhlikas (M.-Bh., Adi-P., lxvii. 2695-6); but the genealogy of Suvīra in the Hari-Vaṁśa (xxxi. 1679) is fanciful. Sauvīra was closely connected with Sindhu, for the two are often coupled together, and Jayad-ratha king of Sindhu was also lord of Sauvīra and the Sauvīras, and is styled Saindhava and Suvīra indifferently (Vana-P., cclxiii. 15576-81; cclxvi. 15618 and 15685-7; and cclxvii. 15639-51). Cunningham identifies Sauvīra with the country between the Indus and Jhelam, that is, the Sindh-Sagar Doab (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 4-6, 14 and 23); that hardly agrees with the position assigned to it in the Tortoise's right hind foot, but the collocation of races in that region is rather confused. May we suppose that Sauvīra was rather the name of the people while Sindhu more properly denoted the territory? The Sauvīras might then have inhabited the northern part of Sindhu, and Sauvīra would have been that portion only of the larger area. This theory seems to satisfy the conditions generally.

Along with the Sauvīras and Saindhavas the Kūrma Purāṇa mentions (xlvi. 40) "the Hūpas (or Kūpas), the Mālyas (or S'ālvās), the inhabitants of Bālyā (or Kalpa)." For the Hūpas, see note to canto lviii., verse 45; Kūpa seems erroneous; for the Sālvās, see canto lviii., verse 6; Mālya seems erroneous; Bālyā and Kalpa seem unidentifiable.

‡ The Madras or Mādras claimed descent from an eponymous king Madra of the same Krodha-vaśa group as the Sauvīras and Vāhlikas (M.-Bh., Adi-P., lxvii. 2695-6; and see note on page 311); but his genealogy in the Hari-Vaṁśa (xxxi. 1679) seems fanciful. Cunningham places Madra between the Jhelam and Ravi rivers, that is, in the Chej and Rechna Doabs (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 4, 8, 14 and 39), yet he also says it is the country between the Jhelam and Bias, or between the Chenab and Bias (ibid., 196);

people who dwell along the Satadru,* the Kalingas,†

but it could hardly have comprised much of the Chej Doab for the Kaikeyas occupied the greater part of that (see note to next verse). The capital of Madra was Sūkala (Sabhā-P., xxxi. 1197) which Cunningham has identified with the modern Sangala, on the R. Apagā which is the modern Ayak (Arch-Surv. Repts., II. 195-6 and Karna-P., xlv. 2033). The R. Iravatī flowed through Madra-deśa, but near the eastern border (ibid., 2033-41; and Matsya Purāṇa cxiv. 7 and 15-18.) Madra then was the country around Sangala, with the tracts on either side watered by the Chenab and Ravi. It was a famous kingdom. The weird story told about king Vyushitāsva's queen (Adi-P., cxxi. 4695-4714) no doubt means her sons became Madras and did not originate the Madras. In later times the brahmans of Hindustan pronounced the Madras, like the Gāndhāras, base and impure (Śānti-P., cxxvii. 7559-61; and Hari-V., xiv. 784); see especially Karna-P., xlv. 2033-53, where the Madras are abused in good set terms. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Bhadrakas erroneously (xlv. 116).

* That is, the Sutlej, Satadru-ja. But this seems mistaken, for the Vāyu Purāṇa reads Sakas and Hradas (xlv. 116); and the Matsya Sakas and Druh-yas (cxiii. 41). The Sakas, therefore, are no doubt one of the people meant (see note to canto lviii., verse 6). Hrada seems erroneous. The Druh-yas may be connected with Yayāti's son Druhyu who was king of the West, (Hari-V. xxx. 1604 and 1618), but I have not met with them elsewhere.

† This seems erroneous. These people are mentioned in verse 46, and there seems to be no ground for thinking any Kalingas lived in North India; yet Kalingas are mentioned in such a connexion (Bhīshma-P., ix. 376; and lxix. 3132; and see note to Arkalingas in verse 33), and a town Kalinga-nagara is mentioned in the Rāmāy. on the west of the Go-matī and not far from it (Ayodh. K., lxxiii. 14, 15). A tribe called Kulingas is alluded to (Droṇa-P., cxxi. 4819). The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Kulindas instead (xlv. 116), which is no doubt right. Cunningham says the Kulindas or Kunindas are the modern Kunets who occupy Kulla and the Simla hills and the slopes below, along both sides of the Sutlej (Arch. Surv. Repts., XIV. 116 and 125-130). The Kulindas extended further east along the southern slopes of the Himalayas as far as Nepal, for they were the first nation which Arjuna conquered in his Northward march from Indra-prastha (Sabhā-P., xxv. 996), and they also occupied the hills north of Mandara, that is, the Almora hills (id., li. 1858-9; and note* to page 287 above); indeed the name appears to have comprised a considerable body of hill tribes, for "all the countries of Kulinda" are spoken of (Vana-P., clxxvii. 12350).

The Matsya Purāṇa reads Pulindas (cxiii. 41). The Pulindas were a rude tribe inhabiting the Himalayas and intermixed with Kirātas and Tanganas.

the Páradas,* the Hára-bhúshikas,† the Mátharas,‡ and the Bahu-bhadrás,§ the Kaikeyas,|| the Daśa-máli-(Vana-P., cxi. 10863-5; and Droṇa-P., cxxi. 4846-7; and see notes to verses 40 and 41); they were considered mleç'c'has (Vana-P., clxxxviii. 12838-40), and are declared to have become degraded because of the extinction of sacred rites, &c. (Anuśās.-P., lvii. 2103, &c.). There was another body of Palindas in Central India (Sabhá-P., xxviii. 1068; and xxx. 1120; and Sánti-P., ccvii. 7559).

* The Páradas are generally mentioned with hill tribes (Sabhá-P., l. 1832; li. 1869; and Droṇa-P., cxxi. 4819). They appear to have been a hill tribe like the Kulindas and Tanganas (see note to verse 41 below) and to have dwelt in the western portion of the Himalayas (Sabhá-P., li. 1858-9), though they are placed in the tortoise's right hind foot by canto lviii., verse 31; the races placed there, however, are strangely confused. Manu says they were Kshattriyas and became degraded because of the extinction of sacred rites, &c. (x. 43-44); and the Hari-Vaṁśa says king Sagara degraded them and ordered them to wear long hair (xiii. 763-4; and xiv. 775-83), and they were mleç'c'has and dasyus (id., cxv. 6440-42). The Váyu Purāṇa reads Paritas instead (xlv. 116).

† This is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Hára-púrikas instead (xlv. 116), and the Matsya Hára-múrtikas (cxiii. 41); but I have not found any of these names elsewhere. Should the reading be Hára-húṇakas? The Hára-húṇas are mentioned in the M.-Bh., as a people outside India on the west (Sabhá-P., xxxi. 1194; l. 1844; and Vana-P., li. 1991).

‡ The Váyu Purāṇa reads Ramaṭas instead (xlv. 117), and the Matsya Rámaṭhas (cxiii. 42), and the Kúrma mentions a people called Rámas (xlvii. 41). The reading should, no doubt, be Ramaṭas, Ramaṭhas or Rámaṭhas; they were a western people mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhá-P., xxxi. 1195; Vana-P., li. 1991; and Sánti-P., lxxv. 2430). The Ramaṭas (Bhishma-P., ix. 374) may be the same people. There are, however, no sufficient data to identify any of them.

§ The Váyu Purāṇa reads Ruddha-kaṭakas instead (xlv. 117); the M.-Bh. mentions the Báhu-bádhas (Bhishma-P., ix. 362) and the Bátabhadrás (Kārṇa-P. vi. 153); and the Matsya Purāṇa reads Kaṇṭakúras (cxiii. 42); but none of these seems satisfactory and I have not met any of them elsewhere.

|| These people were called Kekayas, Kaikayas and Kaikeyas. An eponymous ancestor Kaikeya is assigned to them by the Hari-Vaṁśa (xxx. 1679), but his genealogy seems fanciful. They were a powerful and famous nation, and were noted bowmen (Sabhá-P., iv. 126; and Vana-P., cclxvii. 15654). They inhabited the Panjab and appear to have joined the Madras, for the two are sometimes coupled together (Sabhá-P., li. 1870; and Droṇa-P., xx. 799); and

38 kas,* and the settlements† of Kshattriyas, and the families of Vaiśyas and Śúdras.‡

The Kámbojas,§ and the Daradas,|| and the canto lviii. places them both in the tortoise's left side (verses 42 and 45). Their capital was Rāja-grīha (Rámáy., Ádi-K., lxxix. 35-44) or Giri-vraja (id., Ayodh. K., lxxi. 1; and lxxii. 1). Lassen places the Kaikeyas between the Ravi and Bias rivers. Cunningham, however, dissents and places them on the line of the Jhelam, west of the Báhikas, and proposes to identify Giri-vraja with Girják, which was the ancient name of Jalalpur on that river (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 14); and this agrees with the Rámáy. (Ayodh. K., lxx. 16-19).

* These people are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Bhíshma-P., ix. 374). The Váyu Purāṇa reads Daśa-mánikas (xlv. 117). Does the word mean "the ten tribes of Málíkas"? The Málíkas may perhaps be identified with the Mallí (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 37). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Daśa-námakas (cxiii. 42), which seems mistaken.

† Upa-ni-veśa, a word not in the dictionary. It seems to be synonymous with ni-veśa which appears to be the word meant in the corresponding passage in the Bhíshma-P. list (ix. 374, kshattriyá yoniveśás c'a; but kshattriyopaniveśás c'a would be preferable). Ni-ves'a is used elsewhere in the M.-Bh. (e.g., Sabhá-P., xiii. 615; and xix. 798), and in the Rámáy. (Kishk.-K., xliii. 24), and appears to denote a military colony or settlement in a foreign country.

‡ That is, Śúdras as a caste, and not as a race; as a race they have been mentioned in verse 36.

§ The Kámbojas were in the extreme north of the Panjab beyond the Indus, and were classed with the Daradas (Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1031), with Yavanas and Sakas (Udyoga-P., xviii. 590), and with C'inas (Bhíshma-P., ix. 373). Their country was famous for its large and fleet breed of horses which are often mentioned (Sabhá-P., l. 1824; Bhíshma-P., lxxi. 3131; Droṇa-P., xxiii. 972; cxxi. 4831-2;—also Rámáy., Ádi-K., vi. 24; and Sundar.-K., xii. 36;—and Raghu-V., iv. 70). Lassen places Kámboja doubtfully south of Kashgar and east of the modern Kafiristan (Ind. Alt., map). They were Aryans by language (Muir's Sansk. Texts, II. 368-9). Manu says (x. 43-44) they were Kshattriyas and became degraded through the extinction of sacred rites, &c.; they are called mlec'c'has (Vana-P., clxxxviii. 12838-40) and said to have evil customs (Sánti-P., ccvii. 7580-61). The Hari-Vaṁśa says they were degraded by King Śagara and ordered to shave the whole of the head like the Yavanas (xiii. 763-4; and xiv. 775-83). The Rámáy. has an absurd fable about their origin (Ádi K. lvi. 2; see page 314 note *).

|| Darada is the modern Dardistan, the country north of Gándhára and north-west of Káśmír. This region satisfies all the allusions to the Daradas. They were a hill people (Droṇa-P., cxxi. 4825-7 and 4846-7; neighbours

39 Varvaras,* the Harshavardhanas,† and the C'inas,‡ the of the Káśmíras (id., lxx. 2435), of the Kámbojas (Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1031), and of the C'inas and Tusháras (Vana-P., clxxvii. 12350); they fought largely with stones and were skilled in slinging stones (Droṇa-P., cxxi. 4835-47). Manu says they were Kshattriyas and became degraded because of the extinction of sacred rites, &c. (x. 43 and 44); and like the Páradas and others they were considered mlech'has and dasyus (Hari-V., cxv. 6440-6442).

* This word is also written Barvara and Barbara, and often means any barbarous race. The Varvaras are generally mentioned in conjunction with the Sakas or Yavanas (Sabhá-P., xxxi. 1199; Vana-P., ccliii. 15254; Sánti-P., cvii. 7560-61; &c.); and from these allusions it appears they were mainly a western or north-western race; but Varvaras were also to be found in the east or north-east of India (Sabhá-P., xxix. 1088), and seemingly also in the south (Vana-P., li. 1389) like the Savaras (Sánti-P., lxx. 2429). The name no doubt represents the rolling of the letter r or rough and unknown speech; hence it would be applied to various rude tribes.

† This is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Priya-laukikas instead (xlv. 118), but I have not found either word elsewhere. Canto lviii mentions certain Bhoga-prasthās (verse 42) in the north. All these names seem suggestive, and may perhaps be equivalents of Utsava-sanketa (people who have no marriage and practise promiscuous intercourse, utsava meaning affection, and sanketa, a gesture of invitation) a people mentioned in the M.-Bh. in the north among the hills (Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1025) and west (id., xxxi. 1191); though also in the south (Bhishma-P., ix. 363); and the Raghu-V., places them in the Himalayas (iv. 78). This derivation of Utsava-sanketa is given in a note to the commentary on Raghu-V., iv. 77.

‡ The Chinese; but C'ina comprised the country of Thibet along the whole range of the Himalayas, for the C'inas are linked with the Kámbojas in the north-west (Bhishma-P., ix. 373), they are frequently mentioned among the retinue of Bhaga-datta king of Prág-ijyotisha, in the east (e.g., Udyoga-P., xviii. 584-5; see note to verse 44 below), and they were near the sources of the Ganges in the country midway between those regions (Vana-P., clxxvii. 12350; Sánti-P., cccxxvii. 12226-9). The country had a valuable breed of horses (Udyoga-P., lxxxv. 3049). In the M.-Bh. the C'inas are always spoken of with respect and even admiration (Udyoga-P., xviii. 584-5), and one of their kings called Dhantamúlaka is classed among eighteen famous ancient kings who extirpated their kinsmen (id., lxxiii. 2730); hence Manu's remark that the C'inas were Kshattriyas and became degraded because of the extinction of sacred rites, &c. (x. 43 and 44) betrays the sentiments of a later age. The Váyu Purāṇa reads P'inas (xlv. 118) erroneously. The Rámáy. mentions also Apara-c'inas (Kishk.-K., xlv. 15), "the further C'inas."

Tukháras* are the populoust† races of men outside.‡

. And the Atreyas,§ the Bharadvájas,|| and Pushkalas,¶ the

* For tu khárás read tukhárás. The Tukháras are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhá-P., l. 1830) and Rámáy. (Kishk.-K., xlv. 15). The Váyu Purána reads Tusháras (xlv. 118), and they are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., li. 1991; Sánti-P., lkv. 2429; &c.). The two names seem to mean the same people. They were an outside northern race bordering on the Himalayas (Vana-P., clxxvii. 12350). In the Hari-Vaṁśa they are classed along with Sakas, Daradas, Pahlavas, &c., and considered to be mlec'c'has and dasyus (cxv. 6440-42), they are ranked with wild hill-tribes as originating from King Vena's sins (v. 310-11), and are said to have been repressed by king Sagara (xiv. 784). Lassen identifies them with the Tochari, and places them on the north side of the Hindu Kush (Ind. Alt., map). The Rámáy. has an absurd fable about their origin (Ádi.-K., lvi. 3; see page 314, note *).

† Bahuld. The Váyu Purána reads Pahlavas or Ratna-dháras instead (xlv. 118), probably erroneously; the former have been mentioned in verse 36. I have not met with the latter word elsewhere, but it may be noticed that great quantities of precious stones were found among the Tukháras and other northern nations (Sabhá-P., l. 1849-50).

§ This tribe is mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 376). The Hari-V. says that king Raudrása's ten daughters all married the ṛishi Prabhá-kara of Atri's race and gave rise to the Atreyas (xxxi. 1660-68); and Atreyas are mentioned as a family of brahmans dwelling in Dvaita-vana (M.-Bh., Vana-P., xxvi. 971) which was a forest and lake near the Saras-vatī (ibid., clxxvii. 12354-62). The Matsya Purána reads "the Atris" (cxiii. 43), which is the same. Are they to be identified with the Átreya gotra of brahmans (Risley's Tribes and Castes of Bengal, I. 27) formerly living perhaps in Sirmour or Garhwal; or to be connected with R. Átreya (Sabhá-P., ix. 374) the modern Atrai in North Bengal? The former seems more probable.

|| Or Bháradvájas; they are named in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 376). Bharadvája is often mentioned in the M.-Bh. in connexion with the upper part of the Ganges near the hills (e.g., Ádi-P., cxxx. 5102-6; clxvi. 6328-32; Vana-P., cxxxv. 10700-728; and Salya-P., xlix. 2762-2824). These were no doubt his descendants, living in Garhwál or Kumaon. The name Bharadvája is given to various caste divisions (Risley's Tribes and Castes of Bengal, I. 96.)

¶ The Váyu (xlv. 119) and Matsya (cxiii. 43) Puráṇas read Prasthalas, and they are no doubt the same as the Proshakas (Bhīshma-P., ix. 376)

40 Kuśerukas,* the Lampākas,† the Śúlākāras,‡ the all being placed in the same connexion. If Cunningham is right in identifying Lampāka with Lamghan (see second note below), Pushkala suggests Pushkalāvattī or Pushkurāvattī. (Rāmāy., Kishk.-K., xliii. 23), the ancient capital of Gándhāra (Anc. Geog., I. 49), but the Gándhāras have been mentioned in their proper place in verse 36 above. I have not met the name Proshakas any where else.

Prasthala was a country closely connected with Trigarta, for Su-śarman king of Trigarta is also called lord of Prasthala (Virāṭa-P., xxx. 971; Bhīshma-P., lxxv. 3296; lxxxviii. 3856; and Droṇa-P., xvii. 691), and Trigarta comprised the territory from Amballa and Pattiala to the R. Bias (see note to verse 57). Prasthala was also near the Panjab (Droṇa-P., xvii. 691; and Karna-P., xlv. 2063-70), and in the second of these passages its people are classed along with the Panjab nations, and all according to the ideas of a later age were pronounced degraded (Muir, Sansk. Texts. II. 482). From these data it seems Prasthala must have been the district between Ferozpur, Pattiala and Sirsa. If this position be right, the Prasthalas do not fall into the group of northern peoples named in the text, and the correct reading cannot be Prasthalas.

* The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Kaserukas (xlv. 119); and the Matsya Dasarakas (cxiii. 43). I have not met the first form of name elsewhere; but the Daśerakas, or Dāśerakas, or Dāserakas are mentioned as joining in the great war in the M.-Bh. (e.g., Bhīshma-P., I. 2080; cxviii. 5483; Droṇa-P., xi. 397; and xx. 798); and they appear to have comprised several bands, as the word gaṇa is nearly always added to the name; but there are no data to identify them.

† This name occurs in the M.-Bh. (Droṇa-P., cxxi. 4846-7) and there the Lampākas are described as a mountain tribe, like the Daradas and Pulindas, who fought largely with stones and were skilled in slinging stones; but otherwise there are very few references to them in the M.-Bh. Lassen identifies Lampāka with the Lambagæ and places them south of the Hindu-Kush, in modern Kafiristan. Cunningham says Lampāka is the modern Lamghan, north-east of Kabul (Anc. Geog., I. 17 and 27), which agrees with Lassen. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Lampakas (cxiii. 43), no doubt by a mistake.

‡ The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Stanapas or Tunapas (xlv. 119). I have not met any of these names elsewhere, but the latter words resemble the Stana-yoshikas (Bhīshma-P., ix. 376), and also Tunayas (ibid., 371), whose grouping however is different. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Talagānas (cxiii. 43), which seems erroneous. Perhaps the Śúlākāras may be identified with the Sunuwārs, a cultivating tribe of Nepal, forming part of the highest class (Risley's Castes and Tribes of Bengal, II. 281).

C'ulikas,* and the Jágudas,† and the Aupadhas,‡ and the Animadras,§ and the races of Kirátas,|| the

* The Váyu Purāṇa reads Páṇikas instead (xlv. 119). Canto lviii. verse 37 places the C'ulikas in the Tortoise's tail at the westernmost part of India. I have not met with either name elsewhere. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Sainikas (cxiii. 43), "Soldiers."

† Or Juguḍas according to the Váyu Purāṇa (xlv. 119). The Jágudas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., li. 1991). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Jāngalas (cxiii. 43), which is of no help, for it cannot refer to Kuru-jāngala (see note to Kurus, canto lviii, verse 9), and I have not met with any other Jāngala; but the same Purāṇa mentions the Jaguḍas as a people through whose country the Indus flows, so that they appear to be north or east of Kashmir (cix. 46-48).

‡ The Váyu Purāṇa reads Apagas instead (xlv. 120). I have not met with either name elsewhere. Should the reading be Apavas, the descendants of Vasishṭha? Atreyas and Bharadvājas have been mentioned, and Gálavas are named in verse 57.

§ Or Animadras or C'animadras. The Váyu Purāṇa reads C'dlimadrás c'a (xlv. 120). None of these names are in the dictionary, and I have not met any of them elsewhere.

|| The word Kiráta is no doubt the same as the modern names Kirāti and Kirānti, which mean "a native of the Kirānt-des or mountainous country lying between the Dud-Kosi and the Karki rivers in Nepal. The term includes the Khambu, Limbu and Yákhá tribes; and the Danuár, Hayr and Thámi also claim to be Kirānti," but their claim is disputed by the first three tribes which are superior (Risley's Castes and Tribes of Bengal, I. 490). But formerly they had a much larger range and were spread along the greater part of the southern side of the Himalayas, for Arjuna encountered them in his northern expedition (Sabhá-P., xxv. 1002), Bhíma in his eastern (id., xxix. 1089), and Nakula in his western expedition (id., xxxi. 1199). They formed a group of closely allied yet distinct tribes or clans, for two separate Kiráta kings are named (Sabhá-P., iv. 119 and 120), seven kings are alluded to (id., xxix. 1089), "all the Kirátas" are spoken of (Vana-P., li. 1990), and they are mentioned thrice in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 358, 364 and 376). Their chief territory was among the mountains Kailása, Mandara (see page 287 note *) and Haima (Anuśás.-P., xix. 1434), that is, the region around Lake Mánasa. They were allied to the Tangaṇas (see next verse) and Pulindas (see page 316 note †) for the three people inhabited one large kingdom ruled by Su-báhu, who was king of the Pulindas (Vana-P., cxl. 10863-6) and is also styled a Kiráta (id., clxxvii. 12349). The tribes differed much in material condition, for some were civilized and

and the Tunganas,§ the Sūlikas,|| and the open to friendly intercourse (Vana-P., cxl. 10865-6; and Udyoga-P., lxiii. 2470), and others were clad in skins, lived on fruit and roots and were cruel (Sabhā-P., li. 1865). Their women were used as slaves (ibid., 1867). The Rāmāy. describes them as wearing thick top-knots (Kishk.-K., xl. 30). Manu's remark that the Kirātas were kshattriyas and became degraded because of the extinction of sacred rites, &c. (x. 43 and 44) reflects the opinions of a later age.

* The same people are mentioned again in verse 57, but I have not found the name elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Tomaras (xlv. 120), and the Bhīshma-P. agrees (ix. 377). The Matsya Purāṇa mentions the Tomaras and the Hamsa-mārgas as two tribes through whose countries flows the R. Pāvanī, one of the three large rivers which rise in the middle of the Himalaya mountain system and flow eastward (cix. 57-59). The river is doubtful, but the passage places the Tomaras and the Hamsa-mārgas in the east of Thibet.

† "The duck-fowlers." They are mentioned again in verse 56, and also in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 377); and seem to be the same as the Hamsa-pūdas (Droṇa-P., xx. 798) and perhaps Hamsa-kāyanas (Sabhā-P., li. 1870); but there appear to be no data to identify them, except that they were a people in eastern Thibet as explained in the last note.

‡ The people of Kashmir. They are named twice in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 361 and 375).

§ Or better, as the Vāyu Purāṇa reads, Tangaṇas (xlv. 120) the Rāmāy. calls them Tankaṇas (Kishk.-K., xlv. 20). They were a mountain tribe and are mentioned rather often in the M.-Bh., where two sections are spoken of, the Tangaṇas and Para-tangaṇas (Sabhā-P., li. 1859; Bhīshma-P., ix. 372; and l. 2083), that is, "the nearer" and "the further" Tangaṇas. They were intermixed with the Kirātas and Palindas (or Kaliindas), for they all inhabited a large kingdom ruled over by Su-bāhu, which was in the middle portion of the Himalayas (Vana-P., cxl. 10863-5; Sabhā-P., li. 1858-9); and they are also linked with the Ambashthas (Droṇa-P., cxi. 4819). They are said to have occupied the upper part of the valley of the R. Sarayú (dict.). Like other hill tribes they fought largely with stones and were skilled in slinging stones (Droṇa-P., cxi. 4835-47).

|| This resembles Sūlakāras in the last verse. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads C'sūlikas (xlv. 121), which has also been mentioned in that verse. The Sūlikas are mentioned in the Matsya Purāṇa as a people through whose country flows the R. C'akshu, one of the three large rivers which rise in the middle of the Himalaya mountain-system and flow westward (cix. 45, 46).

42 Kuhakas,* the Ūṛṇas,† and Dárvas;‡ these are the peoples of the Northern countries.

Hear from me the peoples who inhabit the Eastern countries. The Adhrárakas,§ the Mudakaras,|| the Antar-

C'akshu may perhaps be meant for Vakshu, which is the Oxus; if so, the Sálíkas would be a people on the Oxus in Turkestan.

* Kuhaka means a juggler. The Váyu Purána reads C'áhukas or Ahukas or Ahukas (xlv. 121); Ahuka was the name of a family of the Andhakas (e.g., M.-Bh., Udyoga-P., lxxxv. 3041; and Hari-V., xxxviii. 2017-24), but they were in the west and cannot be meant here. I have not met with any of these words elsewhere as the name of a people in the north. The proper reading may be Kuhukas. Kuhuka would be the same as Kuhu, and the Kuhus are mentioned in the Matsya Purána as a people on the line of the Indus (cix. 46-48).

† These people are mentioned again in verse 57. A country Ūṛṇa-desa is placed by Lassen on the Sutlej north of Garhwal (Ind. Alt., map). The whole of the upper Sutlej valley is now called Nari-khorsum or Hun-des. The Váyu Purána reads Párnas here (xlv. 121), which seems erroneous.

‡ These appear to be the same as the Dárvas in verse 57. They were a northern people and are generally associated with the Trigartas and Daradas (Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1026; and li. 1869) and other tribes in the north of the Panjab (Bhishma-P., ix. 362). A river or town called Darví is mentioned (ibid.), and a tirtha Darví-sankramaṇa is placed between the sources of the Jumna and Indus (Vana-P., lxxxiv. 8022-4); and this tract perhaps was their territory. But Lassen places the Dárvas between the Indus and Jhelam in the north-west of Kashmir (Ind. Alt., map).

§ This seems incorrect. The Váyu Purána reads Andhravákas (xlv. 122), which is hardly acceptable, the Andhras being properly in the South, rather than in the East, and being presumably intended in verse 48 (see note to Andhas). The Matsya Purána reads Angá vangá instead (cxiii. 44), which is preferable, but these nations are mentioned below (see page 325 note ‡ and page 326 note *).

|| The Matsya Purána reads Madgurakas (cxiii. 44), and the Váyu Sujarakas (xlv. 122). I have not found any of these names elsewhere, except that Madguras, "divers," are mentioned in a totally different connexion in the Hari-Vaṁśa (xcv. 5233-9). Seemingly the word should be connected with Modá-giri in the Eastern region where a kingdom once existed (M.-Bh., Sabhá-P., xxix. 1095); is it to be identified with the modern Mungir (commonly Monghyr) on the Ganges in Behar, where there is a small out-crop of hills. Cunningham says Mudgala-puri, Mudgaláśrama (to which the Matsya Purána reading approximates) and Mudga-giri were the old names of

43 giryas,* the Vahir-giras,† and the Pravangas‡ also,

Mungir; and an earlier name was Kashā-haraṇa-parvata (XV. 15 and 18), but this last is open to the objection that no name can well be older than that preserved in the M.-Bh. The Mudgalas are mentioned in Droṇa-P., xi. 397.

* Or Antar-giri as the Matsya Purāṇa reads (cxiii. 44). They are mentioned in the Bhīṣma-P. list (ix. 357). The name, no doubt, means "those who dwell amid the hills," and as the people are placed in all these passages in proximity to the Angas, it seems reasonable to identify Antar-giri with the Rajmahall hills (in the modern district of the Santhal Parganas) which form a marked natural division between Anga and Vanga. In the only other passage where I have found this name (Sabhā-P., xxvi. 1012) Antar-giri, Vahir-giri (see next note) and Upa-giri are mentioned in obvious contradistinction and are placed in the Northern region; it is doubtful, therefore, whether they denote the tracts mentioned here; and they may perhaps refer to some portion of the slopes of the Himalayas.

† Or Vahir-giri as the Matsya Purāṇa reads (cxiii. 44). The name, no doubt, means "those who dwell outside the hills," and these people are mentioned along with the Angas and Malajas in the Bhīṣma-P. list (ix. 357). If we may identify Antar-giri with the Rajmahall hills (see the last note), Vahir-giri might well designate the outskirts of those hills bordering on Anga, that is, the southern portions of the Bhagalpur and Monghyr districts and the lands bordering thereon to the south in the Santhal Parganas and Hazaribagh.

‡ I have not met this name elsewhere, though it is stated in the dictionary to be the name of a people and analysed thus, Pravam-ga = Plavam-ga; I would suggest, however, that it should be read here as Pra-vangas, "those who are in front of the Vangas," i. e., the Angas. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Angas and Vangas (cxiii. 44). The Angas are clearly meant. Anga was a distinct and settled country in early times, and its princes were allied with Aryan royal families (M.-Bh., Ādi-P., xcv. 3772 and 3777; and Rāmāy., Ādi-K., x. 1-10). This people are said to have been so called after an eponymous king Anga; he, Vanga, Kalinga, Pundra and Suhma are described with considerable circumstantial detail as the five sons of king Bali's queen (Bali being king of the Eastern region) by the rishi Dirgha-tamas (M.-Bh., Ādi-P., civ. 4217-21; and Hari-V., xxxi. 1684-93). Anga comprised the modern districts of Bhagalpur and Monghyr, excluding the extreme north and south portions. The ancient name Anga dropped out of use and Bihar (of Buddhist origin) has usurped its place; is the word Pra-vanga here significant of the change? The capital was first called Mālinī, and that name is said to have been superseded by the name O'ampā in honour of a king O'ampa, Loma-pāda's great grandson (Hari-V., xxxi. 1699 and 1700; and M.-Bh., Śānti-P., v. 134-5), but the

the Rangeyas,* the manadas,† the Māna-vartikas,‡

Rāmāy. makes a punning connexion between this name and the groves of c'ampaka trees around the town (Ādi-K., xvii. 23); it is the modern Bhagulpur on the south bank of the Ganges (Vana-P., lxxxv. 8156). The tract near C'ampā was called Sūta-vishaya (Vana-P., ccvii. 17150-51), that is, "the land of bards or charioteers." The Angas are mentioned twice in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 353 and 357); it does not appear why.

* This is, no doubt, a mistake for Vangeyas which the Vāyu Purāṇa reads (xlv. 122), and Vangas which the Matsya mentions (cxiii. 44). The Vangas or Vangeyas were the people of Vanga or Banga, the original of the modern Bengal. Vanga was a distinct country in early times and is frequently mentioned, though the references to it very rarely convey any definite information. It lay beyond Anga, to the south-east; and was connected with Kalinga, for the Angas, Vangas and Kalingas are constantly linked together as people closely allied by race and position. (e. g., Droṇa-P., lxx. 2436). And the Vangas are said to have been so called after an eponymous king Vanga who was Anga's and Kalinga's brother (see last note). Vanga comprised the northern portion of Western and Central Bengal, i. e., the modern districts of Birbhum, Moorshedabad, Bardwan and Nuddea. Its capital in early times does not appear to be mentioned. In later times the name was extended over the whole of Central Bengal, for the Raghu Vaṁśa describes the Vangas as dwelling in the islands of the Ganges delta, warring chiefly in boats, and transplanting their rice seedlings into the fields just as at the present day (iv. 36, 37). In those early times the upper part of the delta consisted of numerous islands separated by large rivers, and the southern part could not have been formed.

† The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Māladās (xlv. 122) which appears preferable, and this may mean the people of the modern district of Maldah, in which the old cities of Gaur and Paṇḍitā are situated, while the town Maldah itself is old (Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., XV. 77). The Māladās are mentioned as an eastern people in the M.-Bh. (Sābhā-P., xxix. 1081-2; and also Droṇa-P., vii. 183), but without data enough to say where they were.

‡ The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Māna-vartinak (xlv. 122). The M.-Bh. mentions the Māna-varjakas (Bhīshma-P., ix. 357) and they appear from the context to be the people meant here. The name seems intended to carry a meaning, either "people who live decorously" according to the text, or "people who are devoid of decorum" according to the last word. Does it refer to a wild tribe in a state of nature? Or does Māna-vartika (Māna-vartin) mean Mān-bhūm (Māna-bhūmi) a district in West Bengal? The Māladānakas mentioned in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 367) belong to a different group altogether.

the Brahmostaras,* the Pravijayas,† the Bhārgavas,‡

* The Matsya Purāṇa reads Suhmottaras (cxiii. 44), which is preferable. This means the "people north of Suhma." Suhma was a well-known country. It was generally classed with Puṇḍra (e. g., M.-Bh., Ādi-P., cxiii. 4453) and both of them are declared to be closely allied to Anga, Vāṅga and Kalinga by being derived from five eponymous kings of those names who were brothers (M.-Bh., Ādi-P., civ. 4217-21; Hari-Vaṁśa, xxxi. 1684-93). Suhma was near the sea (Sabhā-P., xxix. 1099; and Raghu-V., iv. 34 and 35) and Dāma-lipta (Tāmra-lipta, the modern Tamruk, see next verse) is said to be within its borders in the Daśa-kumāra-cārīta (Story of Mitra-gupta). Suhma therefore corresponded with the modern districts of Midnapur and Bankura and perhaps also Purulia and Manbhum in West Bengal. Suhmottara would be the tract north of that, and was probably the same as Pra-suhma (Sabhā-P., xxix. 1090). The Mahyuttaras of the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 358) seem to be the same people under an error in the spelling.

The reading Suhmottarāḥ, however, is hardly satisfactory in omitting the Suhmas and referring indefinitely to the people north of them, and I would suggest that the proper reading should be Suhmotalāḥ, "the Suhmas and Utkalas." The Utkalas were well-known (though not I believe mentioned often in the M.-Bh.), and were a rude tribe of very early origin, for they do not appear to have had any close affinities with the races around them, and the Hari-Vaṁśa throws their origin back to the fabulous time of Ilā (x. 631-2). Their territory reached on the east the R. Kapiśā (Raghu-V., iv. 38), which Lassen identifies with the modern Subarna-rekhā near the northern boundary of Orissa (Ind. Alt., Map), but which I propose to identify with the R. Cossye in Midnapore (see page 301 note †); and on the west they touched the Mekalas, for the two people are coupled together in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., ix. 348; see also Droṇa-P., iv. 122, and Karna-P., xxii. 882) and Rāmāy. (Kishk.-K., xli. 14), and the Mekalas were the inhabitants of the Mekala hills, i. e., the hills bounding Chhattisgarh on the west and north. Northward dwelt the Puṇḍras and southward the Kalingas. Hence Utkala comprised the southern portion of Chuta Nagpur, the northern Tributary States of Orissa and the Balasore district. Various derivations have been suggested of the name Utkala, but I would only draw attention to some of the above passages where Utkala and Mekala are placed together as if their names possessed something in common. See also in verse 53.

† The Matsya Purāṇa reads the same (cxiii. 44), but I have not found them mentioned elsewhere. They appear from the context to be the same as the Prāvisheyas of the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 358).

‡ These are mentioned in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 358), and were perhaps an off-lying branch of the Bhārgava race in the East; see note to verse 35.

44 the Jñeya-mallakas,* and the Prág-vyotishas,† and

The Hari-Vaṁśa mentions a prince called Bhārga or Bhārgava, who founded Bhṛigu-bhūmi or Bhārga-bhūmi; and as he was a grandson of Divodāsa king of Benares, his country may perhaps have been in the Eastern region (xxix. 1587 and 1597; and xxxii. 1753). The Bhishma-P. list names also Bhārgas here (loc. cit.).

* The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Geyamarthakas (xlv. 123), and the Matsya Geyamālavas (cxiii. 44), and the Bhishma-P. list omits the corresponding name (see ix. 358). None of these names are in the dictionary, and I have not met any of them elsewhere.

† *Prág-*vyotisha was a famous kingdom in early times and is often mentioned in the M.-Bh. The references to it, however, are rather perplexing, for in some passages it is called a Mlec'c'ha kingdom ruled over by king Bhagadatta, who is always spoken of in respectful and even eulogistic terms (e. g., Sabhā-P., xxv. 1000-1; and l. 1834; Udyoga-P., clxvi. 5804; and Kaṇṇa-P., v. 104-5), and in other passages it is called a Dānava or Asura kingdom ruled over by the demons Naraka and Muru (Vana-P., xii. 488; Udyoga-P., xlvii. 1887-92; Hari-V., cxxi. 6791-9; cxxii. 6873, etc.; and clxxiv. 9790; and Annotations to Kishk.-K., xliii. in Gorresio's Rāmāyaṇa); while in some other passages the allusions seem mixed (e. g., Sabhā-P., xiii. 578-80, which seems to call Bhagadatta a Yavana; and as to this, see id. l. 1834-6). The second class of passages occur, I believe, only in descriptions of Kṛishṇa's exploits; they are spoilt by hyperbolic laudation and are probably later than the first class. *Prág-*vyotisha was placed in the North region (Sabhā-P., xxv. 1000; and Vana-P., coliii. 15240-2), but was also considered to be in the East as in the text here. North of it seemingly lay tracts called Antar-giri, Vahir-giri and Upa-giri (Sabhā-P., xxv. 1000—xxvi. 1012) which appear to be the lower slopes of the Himalayas and the Terai; and it was close to the mountains for Bhagadatta is called Sailālaya (Strī-P., xxiii. 644). It bordered on the Kirātas and C'inas for they formed his retinue (Sabhā-P., xxv. 1002; Udyoga-P., xviii. 584-5). He also drew his troops from among the people who dwelt in the marshy regions near the sea, Sāgarānūpa (Sabhā-P., xxv. 1002; xxxiii. 1268-9; and Kaṇṇa-P., v. 104-5), and it is even said he dwelt at the Eastern Ocean (Udyoga-P., iii. 74); these marshy regions can only be the alluvial tracts and islands near the mouths of the Ganges and Brahma-putra as they existed anciently. These data indicate that *Prág-*vyotisha comprised the whole of North Bengal proper. The Raghu Vaṁśa places it seemingly beyond the Brahma-putra (iv. 81), but Kālidāsa was a little uncertain in distant geography. Its capital was called *Prág-*vyotisha also. Although the people were mlec'c'has, the Rāmāyaṇa ascribes the founding of this kingdom to Amūrta-rajās, one of the four sons of a great king Kuśa (Adi-K.,

the Madras,* and the Videhas,† and the Tāmraxxxv. 1-6). Amúrta-rayas, as the name is generally written in the M.-Bh., is mentioned there simply as father of the famous king Gaya (e. g., Vana-P., xc. 8528-39; and Droṇa-P., lxvi. 2334, &c.).

* This seems an impossible name here (see verse 36). The Váyu Purāṇa reads Muṇḍas instead (xlv. 123) which is permissible. The Muṇḍas are a large Dráviḍian tribe in Chuta Nagpur (Risley's Tribes and Castes of Bengal, II. 101), and are named in the M.-Bh. (Bhíshma-P., lvi. 2410).

The Matsya Purāṇa however reads Puṇḍras instead (cxiii. 45) and the Bhíshma-P. list also mentions them in this region (ix. 358). This is the best reading, for the Puṇḍras were held to be closely allied to the Angas, Vangas and Suhmas (see page 325 note ‡, page 326 note * and page 327 note *), and should rightly be placed here along with those races, rather than in the South according to verse 45. The name occurs in various forms, Puṇḍraka (Sabhá-P., iv. 119), Paṇḍra, (Ādi-P., clxxxvii. 7020), Paṇḍraka (Ādi-P., clxxxvi. 6992; Sabhá-P., xxxiii. 1270) and Paṇḍrika (Sabhá-P., li. 1872). They appear to be used often as if equivalent (e. g., Sabhá-P., xiii. 584), and yet a distinction seems to be made between Puṇḍras and Paṇḍras for they are separately mentioned in the Bhíshma-P. list (ix. 358 and 365); and Puṇḍras, Puṇḍrakas and Paṇḍrikas are all mentioned in one passage (Sabhá-P., li. 1872-4). All, however, appear to have composed one people, and they were not a barbarous nation. From the arrangements of names and descriptions given in various passages (Ādi-P., cxiii. 4453; Sabhá-P., xiii. 584; xxix. 1091-7; Vana-P., li. 1958; Āśvamedh.-P., lxxxii. 2461-5) it appears the Puṇḍras had the Káśis on their north, the Angas, Vangas and Suhmas on their north-east and east; and the Oḍras on their south-east; hence their territory corresponded to the modern Chuta Nagpur with the exception of its southern portions. Their bounds on the south were no doubt the land of the Utkalas (see page 327 note *). In one passage (Ādi-P., lxvii. 2679) it is stated an ancient king Balína reigned over both Paṇḍra and Matsya; this suggests that their territory extended to near the R. Chumbal anciently (see page 307 note *), and tends to part them from the Angas, Vangas, &c.

† Videha was a famous country in early times. Cunningham says it appears to have comprised the northern portion of North Behar from the R. Gaṇḍak to the R. Kauśíkí or Kosi (Arch. Surv. Repts., XVI. 34 and map); but its western boundary was the Sadá-níra (see page 294 note ‡), and it seems Videha extended from the Rapti to the Kosi. Northwards it extended close to the Himalayas, and on the south it was bounded by a kingdom, the capital of which was Vaiśálí (Rámáy., Ādi-K., xlv. 10-11; and xlviii. 21-25), or the modern Besarh which is about 27 miles north of Patna (Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 55; and XVI. 6 and 34). The capital was Mithilá (Rámáy., Ādi-K.,

xlix. 9-16; and M.-Bh., Śānti-P., cccxxvii. 12233-8), and this name often designated the country itself, especially in the Rāmāyaṇa. The people were called Videhas (or Videgha, as the earlier form was, see Sata-P. Brāh. I. iv. 14), and also Mithilas (Vana-P., ccliii. 15243). Its kings, who were often highly educated (Śānti-P., cccxxvii. 12215-25), are generally called Janaka, which seems to have been the ordinary royal title (Vana-P., cxxxiii. 10637). Cunningham says the capital was Janakpur, which is now a small town just within the Nepal border, north of where the Mozufferpur and Darbhanga districts meet (Arch. Surv. Repts., XVI. 34 and map), but I have not met this name in Sanskrit works.

* Or Tāmra-liptas. The country and people are often mentioned in the M.-Bh., and both forms of the name are used (Ādi-P., clxxvi. 6993; Sabhā-P., xxix. 1098; and Droṇa-P., lxx. 2436). The name was modified into Tāma-liptaka which the Vāyu Purāṇa reads (xlv. 123), and Tāma-lipta (which occurs in canto lviii. verse 14), and Dāma-lipta (see Story of Mitra-gupta in the Daśa-kumāra-cārita), and corrupted into the modern Tamluk. The town Tamluk is in the Midnapur district near the mouth of the Rupnarayan River. It used to be a famous port during the middle ages of Indian history. The country Tāmra-liptaka corresponded therefore to the eastern part of the present district of Midnapur.

† The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Mālas (xlv. 123). This people appear to be the Mālés (properly Māls) and Māl Pahāriyas, two Drāviḍian tribes which now inhabit the Rājmahall and Rāmgarh hills in Western Bengal (Bisley's Tribes and Castes of Bengal, II. 51 and 66). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Sālvās (cxiii. 45) erroneously.

‡ Or Māgadhas. Magadha comprised the present districts of Gaya and Patna. It was a famous kingdom from the earliest times. The Rāmāyaṇa says it was founded by Vasu one of the four sons of a great king Kuśa (Ādi-K., xxxv. 1-9); and the M.-Bh. says it was established by Vṛihad-ratha, who was son of Vasu king of C'edi (Ādi-P., lxiii. 2361-5; and Hari-V., xxxii. 1805), but who is also called an Anga (Śānti-P., xxix. 921-31.) One appears to be an eastern account and the other a western account, but there may be truth in both accounts for there was an interval of eight or twelve generations between the two periods spoken of. Both agree that Giri-vraja was made the capital by the founder of the kingdom, the former says by Vasu (loc. cit.), and the latter says by Vṛihad-ratha (Hari-V., cxvii. 6598; Sabhā-P., xx. 798-800). Cunningham has identified Giri-vraja with the modern Giriyek on the Panchana river about 36 miles north-east of Gaya (Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 16 and plate iii). Rāja-grīha appears to have been another name of the capital (Ādi-P., cxiii. 4451-2; and Aśvamedh.-P., lxxxii. 2435-63), but Cun-

mantas, * are known as the peoples in the East: †

45 Now the other peoples who dwell in the Southern Region ‡ are the Puṇḍras,§ and Kevalas,|| and Go-lāṅgulas ¶ also, ningham identifies it with the modern Raj-gir about 6 miles west of Giryek (Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 20 and plate iii). The oldest name of this country is said to have been Kīkaṭa, which occurs in R̥g-Veda III. 53.14 (Muir's Sansk. Texts, II. 362, 363).

* The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Govindas (xlv. 123); and the Matsya Gonarddhas (cxiii. 45); and the latter people are mentioned in canto lviii. verse 23, but are placed in the South. I have not met with an Eastern people of any of these names elsewhere.

† The Kūrma Purāṇa adds Kāma-rūpa (xlvii. 38), the modern Kamrup or Gauhati in Assam. It is mentioned in the Raghu-Vaṁśa (iv. 84), but not, I believe, in the Rāmāyaṇa nor Mahā-Bhārata.

§ This seems to be erroneous, for the Puṇḍras were not properly in the South, and they have been noticed in their appropriate place in the East (see page 329 note *). The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Pāṇḍyas instead (xlv. 124) and so also the Matsya (cxiii. 46), and this is, no doubt, the proper reading, for otherwise this nation, which was the most famous and best known in the South, would be omitted from this list. Pāṇḍya is often mentioned in the M.-Bh.; but not in the Rāmāy., except in the geographical canto (Kishk. K., xli. 15 and 25) which is probably an addition to the original poem. It comprised the modern districts of Madura and Tinnevely. The capital was Mathurā, the modern Madura. The Pāṇḍyas belong to the Drāviḍian family, but the Hari-Vaṁśa makes them, or more probably the royal house, descendants of the Paurava race; it says Pāṇḍya, Kerala, Kola and C'ola were four brothers and gave origin to the four peoples of those names (xxxii. 1832-6).

¶ "The Cow-tails;" a pure fancy, stories of tailed races being common all over the world. It may correspond to Gonarddhas in canto lviii, verse 23; but the Matsya Purāṇa reads C'olas and Kulyas (cxiii. 46), and the Vāyu

46 the Sailúshas,* and Múshikas,† the Kusumas,‡ the C'auliyas and Kuliyas (xlv. 124); and the proper reading should, no doubt, be C'olas and Kolas. The Hari-Vaṁśa makes these two tribes closely allied to the Pāṇḍyas and Keralas (see the last two notes).

C'ola was a kingdom in early times (Sabhá-P., li. 1891-3) and is often mentioned in the M.-Bh. (e. g., Vana-P., li. 1988; and Sabhá-P., xxx. 1174, where C'odra is, no doubt, a mistake for C'ola; also Bhíshma-P., ix. 367; and Droṇa-P. xi. 398). The Hari-Vaṁśa says king Sagara degraded them (xiv. 784). C'ola comprised the modern districts of Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Pudukota and South Arcot.

The Kolas are scarcely ever mentioned; yet they appear to be referred to in Sabhá-P., xxx. 1171, and Áśvamedh.-P., lxxxiii. 2476-7. Their position is uncertain. Are they to be identified with the Koravas or Kurruvas, who are a vagrant tribe in Madras (Madras Census of 1891, Report, p. 304).

* Canto lviii, verse 20 mentions the Sailikas; and the Váyu Purāṇa (xlv. 125) and Matsya (cxiii. 47) read Setukus. I have not found any of these names elsewhere, but Saila occurs in Vana-P., ccliii. 15250, perhaps as the name of a country near Pāṇḍya in the extreme south, so that Sailikas might mean its people. Does Setuka refer to Ráma's setu or Adam's bridge and mean the people who live close to it?

† The Bhíshma-P. list mentions these people in the same connexion (ix. 366), and another Southern people called Múshakas twice (ix. 366 and 371). Canto lviii mentions instead of them the Rishikas in the South (verse 27), and the Mrishikas in the South-east (verse 16). I have not found the latter name elsewhere, but the Rishikas appear to have been well-known, there being one people of that name in the North (Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1033-6; Rámáy., Kishk-K., xlv. 13; and Matsya Purāṇa cxx. 53) and another in the South (Kishk-K., xli. 16; and Hari-V., cxix. 6724-6). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Sátikas (cxiii. 47) which appears to be erroneous.

‡ Canto lviii omits this people and names Kumuda hill (verse 26). The Váyu Purāṇa reads Kumanas (xlv. 125), and the Matsya Kupathas (cxiii. 47). I have not found any of these names elsewhere. Probably the reading should be Kurumbas or Kurubas. The ancient Kurumbas or Pallavas occupied a territory which comprised the modern districts of Madras, Chingleput, North and South Arcot, Salem and the south-east portion of Mysore, with Kāñcī, the modern Conjeveram, for their capital, and their power attained its zenith about the 7th cent. A. D., or perhaps a century or two later. After their overthrow they were scattered far and wide and are numerous now in most of the districts south of the R. Kistna in the middle and eastern parts of the Madras Presidency and in Mysore (Madras Census of 1891, Report, pp. 259 and 289).

Nāma-vāsakas,* the Mahā-rāshṭras,† Māhishakas‡ and Ka-

* This is, no doubt, the same as the Vana-vāsakas of the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 366), with which the Vāyu Purāṇa agrees in reading Vana-vāsikas (xlv. 125). As this name simply means "Forest-dwellers," it may include several races, who inhabited the great Southern forests; or it may denote the people of the kingdom called Vana-vāsin, which was founded by Śārasi in the Dekhan (Hari-V., xcv. 5218 and 5231-3). Perhaps they may be identified with the Banjāris or Lambādīs, who are the great travelling traders of South India, and who are supposed to be descendants of Bālin and Sugrīva the Vānara kings in the Rāmāyaṇa (Madras Census of 1891, Report, pp. 186 and 279). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Vāji-vāsikas (cxiii. 47), which seems erroneous.

† The people of Mahā-rāshṭra, the modern Mahrattas, whom canto lviii also considers to be in the South (verse 23). The name is a late one as I have not found it in the Mahā-Bhārata or Rāmāyaṇa. It was a large kingdom in Hiuen Tshang's time in the 7th cent. A. D., and Cunningham makes it comprise nearly the western half of the Dekhan between the 16th and 20th parallels of latitude, with its capital at Kalyāni (Anc. Geog. of India, I. 553).

The Matsya Purāṇa reads Nava-rāshṭras (cxiii. 47), but not well, for this country and people are mentioned in the M-Bh. as one of the kingdoms near the Kurus, and as situated in the south-west of Madhya-deśa or on the borders of Rajputana (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1110; and Virāṭa-P., i. 11-12); and the Hari-Vaṁśa derives them from an eponymous king Nava, making him and the progenitors of the Yaudheyas, Ambashṭhas and Siviś (which were tribes in or near the Panjab) all sons of king Uśinara (xxxi. 1674-8). Nava-rāshṭra is therefore out of place here.

‡ So also in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 366), or Māhishikas as the Matsya Purāṇa reads (cxiii. 47). These people are, no doubt, the same as the Māhish-makas (Āśvamedh.-P., lxxxiii. 2475-7), that is, the people of Māhish-matī. Māhish-matī was an ancient and famous city (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1125-63) and was situated on the R. Narmadā, at a place where the Vindhya and the Riksha Mts. (the Satpura range) contract the valley (Hari-V., xcv. 5218, &c.). Mucūkunda was its founder according to that passage, and Māhish-mat according to another (id., xxxiii. 1846-7). Their descendant was the great Arjuna Kārtavīrya (ibid., 1850-xxxiv. 1890). Māhish-matī is identified with the modern Maheswar on the Narmadā in the Imp. Gaz. of India (Vol. X, p. 329), but this hardly agrees with the notices in Sanskrit writings; for Maheswar must have lain within the ancient Avanti (see verse 52), and Avanti was held to be sometimes in the South and sometimes in the West, whereas Māhish-matī is never, I believe, placed anywhere but in the South.

47 lingas* on all sides,† Abhíras,‡ and Vaiśíkyas,§ Adhakyas,||

A more easterly position, such as Mandhátá or near there, seems better. At the time of the great war its king was Níla and his people were called Líláyudhas (Udyoga-P., xviii. 592-3) or Níláyudhas (Bhishma-P., lvi. 2414). Its people were afterwards declared to have become degraded because of the extinction of sacred rites, &c. (Anuśás.-P., xxxiii. 2103-4; Muir's Sanskrit Texts, I. 177). A Máhiśikí, which seems to be a river, is mentioned in the Rámáy. in this region (Kishk.-K., xli. 16.)

* Or Kálingas. Kalinga was an ancient kingdom, its kings were famous (Adi-P., lxvii. 2701), and its princesses married into the Aryan royal families (e. g., Adi-P., xcv. 3774-5, & 3780; and Sánti-P., iv). Its people were closely allied to the Angas and Vangas, and the three nations are often linked together (e. g., Adi-P., ccxv. 7820; and Droṇa-P., lxx. 2436), and this connexion is emphasized by the allegation that these three and also the Suhmas and Puṇḍras were descended from five eponymous brothers (see page 325 note ‡). Kalinga comprised all the Eastern coast between the Utkalas on the north (Raghu-V., iv. 38) and the Telingas or Telugus on the south. The R. Vaitaraṇi (the modern Byturni) flowed through it, and the Mahendra Mts. (the Eastern Ghats) were within its southern limits (Adi-P., ccxv. 7820-24; and Raghu-V., iv. 38-43). Kalinga therefore comprised the modern province of Orissa and the district of Ganjam and probably also that of Vizagapatam. The Matsya Purāṇa makes Kalinga extend as far west as the Amara-kaṇṭhaka hills (clxxxv. 12), but Kalinga there is, no doubt, an error for Kosala. Certain Kalingas have been mentioned in verse 37 above.

† Sarvaśaḥ. This seems to be rather a stereotyped phrase. The Matsya Purāṇa also reads the same (cxiii. 47). Púrvaśaḥ would be a preferable reading, for the Kalingas occupied a large part of the Eastern coast and do not appear to have inhabited any other part of the Dekhan.

‡ These may have been an off-lying branch of this aboriginal race (see note to verse 35). The Váyu Purāṇa reads Abhíras here (xlv. 126). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Kárúshas (cxiii. 48); they are the same as the Karúshas mentioned in verse 53; they come in their proper position there and are out of place here.

§ This is not in the dictionary. For saha vaiśíkyá read either one word or saha vaiśíkyair. The Váyu (xlv. 126) and Matsya (cxiii. 48) Purāṇas read Eśhikas or Aishikas; but I have not found any of these names elsewhere.

|| I have not met this name elsewhere and it is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa (xlv. 126) and the Matsya (cxiii. 48) read Aṭavyas, and this may mean either "forest-dwellers," or more probably "the people of Aṭavi," which is mentioned as a city in the Dekhan, but without any data to identify it (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1176).

and the Savaras,* the Pulindas,† the Vindhya-manlēyas,‡ the people of Vidarbha§ and the Daṇḍa-

* The Savaras are an aboriginal tribe, according to some Drávidian, and according to others Kolarian. They are mentioned rarely in the M.-Bh. (Śānti-P., lrv. 2429; clxviii. 6294-6303; clxxiii. 6445; and ccvii. 7559-61) and Rāmāy. (Ādi-K., i. 59; Aranya-K., lxxvii. 6-32; &c). They are represented in these passages as dwelling in Central India and the Dekhan, as being wicked Dasyus, and as practising evil customs. They are still found scattered about in those parts and also towards Orissa, under the names Sabar, Saur, Suir, &c. In the Madras Presidency they are found chiefly in the Ganjam and Vizagapatam districts (Madras Census of 1891, Report, p. 254.) "The Savars believe their original condition to have been that of a wandering tribe, roaming through the hills of Orissa and Chota Nagpur, living on the fruits of the forest and acknowledging the rule of no recognized chief." (Risley's Castes and Tribes of Bengal, II. 241-246); and this belief agrees, if we extend their range, with the earliest notices of them. See also Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., XVII and XX.

† These people are mentioned again in verse 50 as being also in the West, and there appears to have been a Northern branch of them in the Himalayas (see page 316 note †). This Southern branch seems from the M.-Bh. to have occupied the middle portion of the Dekhan (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1120; and Bhishma-P., ix. 369; and Rāmāy., Kishk.-K., xli. 17), and extended eastward where they had a great city (Sabhā-P., xxviii. 1068). They were an aboriginal tribe, for they were mleç'c'has (Vana-P., clxxxviii. 12838-40); they became out-castes from not seeing brāhmans (Anuśās.-P., xxxiii. 2104-5); they are called wicked and are said to have practised evil customs (Śānti-P., ccvii. 7559-61). The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Pulindras (xl. 126) erroneously.

‡ The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Vindhya-mūlikas (xl. 126), which is synonymous, "those who dwell at the foot of the Vindhya mountains," or "the aborigines of the Vindhya mountains." I have not met this name as describing any particular people, and taken in its general meaning it would include the races mentioned in verses 53-55 below: but perhaps it may be read as an adjective to "Pulindas." The Matsya Purāṇa reads Vindhya-pushikas (cxiii. 48), which seems erroneous.

§ Vidarbha was one of the most ancient and renowned kingdoms in the Dekhan (Vana-P., xcvi. and xcvi). It comprised the valley of the Payoshni, the modern Purna and the middle portion of the Tapti (see page 299 note † and Vana-P., cxx. 10289-90), and corresponded to the western part of the modern Berar and the valley-country west of that. It is said to have been founded by a king Vidarbha who built a city called Vīdarbhā (Hari-V., cxvii. 6588 and 6605-8; and Vana-P., lxxii), which seems to have been the same as Kuṇḍina the capital (Vana-P. lxxii: and Hari-V., civ. 5800-7; cxviii. 6661-2). Its most famous king was Bhīṣmaka, who held the title "king of the Dekhan" (id., cxvii. 6590-1). The people were Bhojas (Udyoga-P., xlvii. 1881) or perhaps only the royal family was so called (id., clvii. 5350-1; Sabhā-P., xiii. 585-8), and so also in the Raghu-Vaṁśa with reference to a period many generations anterior (vi. 59 and 69; and vii). The name Bhoja seems to have more than one application, for the Bhojas together with the Andhakas and Vṛishnis belonged to the Yādava race (Hari-V., xciv. 5181-5204), and the name appears to have been applied also in a much wider sense to Kṣattriyas descended from Yayāti (Sabhā-P., xiii. 566-71).

* The Daṇḍakas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1169) and were the inhabitants of the forest region called Daṇḍakāranya. Daṇḍaka originally was the name of the immense forest, where Rāma went in banishment, and which is described in the Rāmāy. as covering the whole of Central India from Bundelkhand on the north to southward of the Godaveri (Journal, R. A. S., 1894, p. 241); but as this forest was gradually cleared away by the spread of the Aryan colonies, its limits diminished till at last Daṇḍaka denoted only the country around the sources of the Godaveri and lower part of the Tapti (M.-Bh., Sabhā-P., xxx. 1169; Vana-P., lxxv. 8183-4). It could only have been at this stage that its inhabitants could well have been described by the name Daṇḍakas, and it is no doubt the people of that moderate area who are meant here. To account for the name the Hari-Vaṁśa has provided an eponymous king Daṇḍaka who made Daṇḍakāranya (x. 637-9).

† The people of Purikā. This may be either the famous town Puri in Orissa, or the town Purikā which Mac'ukunda is said to have built on the northern slope of the Riksha Mts. in the kingdom of Māhish-matī (Hari-V., xcv. 5220-8); but the latter seems more probable, judging from the context. For Māhish-matī, see page 333 note ‡. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Paurnikas, (xlv. 127); is this to be connected with Poona, south-east of Bombay? I have not met it elsewhere.

§ This as a people is not in the dictionary. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Asmakas (xlv. 127), but Āsmaka seems to be the proper form. These people are mentioned in the Rāmāy. (Kishk.-K., xli. 17) and M.-Bh. (Droṇa-P., xxxvii. 1605-8); and are placed in the middle of India by canto lviii. verse 7. They may have been the descendants of Āsmaka, who was the son of king Kalmāsha-pāda Saudāsa's queen Madayantī by Vasishṭha (Ādi-P., cxxii.

4736-7; and clxxvii. 6777-91), and who founded the town Paudanya (ibid., 6791). A queen Āsmakī is mentioned in the Lunar line (id., xc. 3766).

* I have not found this name elsewhere. Perhaps it may be connected with the Southern Utsava-sanketas (Bhishma-P., ix. 368; and see page 319 note †).

† This is not in the dictionary. It much resembles the Nāsikyās of canto lviii. verse 24, who are, no doubt, the people of Nasik, north-east of Bombay; but they seem to be intended by Nāsikyāvas in verse 51. Naishadhas can hardly be meant, for they are named in verse 54 and were not in South India. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Nairṇikas (xlv. 127) which somewhat resembles the Nairṇitas of the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 359).

‡ A people of this name have been mentioned in verse 32, as dwelling in Madhya-deśa. The Kuntalas here were in the Dekhan and are the same as those mentioned in Bhishma-P., ix. 367, and Karna-P., xx. 779. It appears Kuntala lay in the region between Belgaum and Bellary (Arch. Surv. of W. India, No. 5 by J. F. Fleet, p. 6; and No. 10 by J. Burgess, p. 72 note).

§ The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Andhras (xlv. 127), which is, no doubt, right. Andhas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Udyoga-P., xviii. 586; and Bhishma-P. x. 357), but mistakenly for Andhakas and Andhras respectively. The Andhras or Andhras were a rude race in early times (Sabhā-P., iv. 119; xxx. 1175; xxxiii. 1270; and Vana-P., li. 1983); but they established a kingdom during the third and second centuries B. C. Andhra was a kingdom also in Hiuen Tshang's time in the 7th century A. D., and comprised the eastern portion of the Nizam's territories, with its capital at Warangal, according to Cunningham (Anc. Geog. of India). Another capital was Dhenukākāṭa, which is Dharanikōṭa near Amarāvati on the Kistna (Arch. Surv. of W. India, No. 10 by J. Burgess, p. 32). Andhra is said to be probably the same as Telinga (ibid., p. 72 note; and dictionary), and is taken to be the Sanskrit name for Telugu in the Madras Census Report. Telugu is the speech of the region extending from a parallel of latitude a little north of Madras northward as far as Ichapur in Ganjam; it does not penetrate into Mysore nor the western limits of Anantapur and Bellary, but is spoken by many of the inhabitants of the Nizam's Dominions and the Central Provinces (Report, p. 188).

|| This is not in the dictionary and I have not met with it elsewhere.

¶ "Wood-splitters." The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Nalakālikas (xlv. 127), other forms of which are Nalakānanas and Nabhakānanas (dict.).

 The Kūrma Purāṇa adds Magadhās (xlvii. 38) mistakenly; they are mentioned in their proper place in verse 44.

†† For Dakshinātyās read Dakshināyās? The Matsya Purāṇa keeps pace with the text as far as the "Daṇḍakas" and then jumps at once, without any intimation, to the Western peoples beginning with the "Kulíyas" who correspond to the "Pulindas" of verse 50.

* This is obviously a mistake for Súrpárakas, which the Váyu Purāṇa reads (xlv. 128). Súrpáraka or Súrpáraka (both forms seem correct, though the dictionary gives only the latter) was the country in the West where Ráma Jámadagnya dwelt (Vana-P., lxxxv. 8185); though it is also placed in the South (Sabhá-P., xxx. 1169; and Vana-P., lxxxviii. 8337), because it was near the Southern sea in the Western region (Sánti-P., xlix. 1778-82). It bordered on the sea near Prabhása (Vana-P., cxviii. 10221-7), which is the modern Somnath in the peninsula of Káthiáwár; it included the country around the mouth of the Narmadá (Anuśás.-P., xxv. 1736), and the mouth of that river was so specially connected with Ráma that it was called Jámadagnya (Matsya Purāṇa, cxiii. 33-34). He built the city Súrpáraka there (Hari-V., xvi. 5300), and Dr. Burgess has identified it with the small modern town Supara near Bassein, north of Bombay. The country Súrpáraka therefore comprised the littoral tract from about Bassein to about the R. Narmadá. (Arch. Surv. of W. India, No. 10 p. 31). The proper reading in Rámáy. Kishk.-K., xliii. 5, should, no doubt, be "the Súrpárakas also" instead of "the extensive towns" (Gorresio's Edition, Annotations).

† This is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Kolavanas (xlv. 128), but I have not found either name elsewhere. Perhaps this is to be connected with Kalwan, a town about 37 miles north of Nasik (which is mentioned in page 339, note ||).

‡ This is not in the dictionary and I have not found the name elsewhere; but the Durgas are mentioned in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 359). Perhaps this is to be connected with Dúngar-pur, a town and state about 90 miles north-east of Ahmedabad.

§ Or Aníkaṭas, or O'ánikaṭas; neither is in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Kálitakas (xlv. 128); but I have not found these words elsewhere. These names suggest Calicut, but that is too far south to be admissible here in the Western region.

|| See note to verse 47 above. This branch would be among the hills south-west of Malwa or the southern portion of the Aravalli hills probably. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Puleyas (xlv. 129), and the Matsya Kúṭyas (cxiii. 49); but I have not met with either name elsewhere.

elsewhere. Are these two names to be identified with Israel? There was an ancient Jewish colony, the modern Beni-Israel, on the Bombay coast before the 2nd cent. A. D. (Hunter's Indian Empire, p. 234).

* The Váyu (xlv. 129), and the Matsya (cxiii. 49) Purāṇas read Rúpasas. I have not met either name elsewhere. The Bhishma-P. list mentions Rúpa-várikas (ix. 351).

† This as the name of a people is not in the dictionary; but Sva-pac'a "dog-cooking," (= Sva-páka, which would not suit the metre) occurs, as the name of a degraded tribe (Manu, x. 19 and 51). Tri-sanku is said to have associated with the Sva-pákas, when discarded by his father (Hari-V., xii. 721-3). The Váyu Purāṇa (xlv. 129) and the Matsya (cxiii. 49) read Tápasas, which resembles the Tápasáśramas placed in the south region by canto lviii. verse 27, which might mean the descendants of ascetics.

‡ This is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Turasitas (xlv. 129), but I have not met either name elsewhere. The Matsya reads Tuittirikas (cxiii. 49), which resembles the Tittiras mentioned in Bhishma-P., I. 2084 but there are no data to identify them.

|| This is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa reads "Násikyas and others" (xlv. 130); this agrees with the Násikyus of canto lviii, verse 24 except that the latter are placed in the South. The Násikyas are, no doubt, the people of Nasik, which is an ancient and sacred city north-east of Bombay. The Matsya Purāṇa reads "and others who are called Vásikas" (cxiii. 50), but I have not met this name elsewhere.

 Or Bhāru-kaś'has as the Matsya Purāṇa reads (cxiii. 50). These are, no doubt, the same as the Bhṛigu-kaś'has of canto lviii. verse 21. The word is the Greek Barugaza and survives in the modern Bharuch or Broach, a large town near the mouth of the Narmadá (Anc. Geog. of India). The Váyu Purāṇa reads Bhānu-kaś'hras (xlv. 130) erroneously. None of these names occur I believe in the Rāmáyana or Mahá-Bhārata.

†† These are, no doubt, the people who dwelt along the R. Mahi (see page 294, note §) north of Baroda. The Mádhikas of the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 354) are no doubt the same.

* So also the Matsya Purāṇa (cxiii. 50). "The people who dwell along the R. Saras-vatī," which is, no doubt, the small river of that name that flows into the sea at Prabhāsa, the modern Somnath, in the peninsula of Káthiáwār (Vana-P., lxxxii. 5002-4; and Salya-P., xxxvi. 2048-51). They are not the same as the Sárasvatas of canto lviii. verse 7, who were in Madhya-deśa. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads instead "Sahasas and S'ásvatas" (xlv. 130); I have not found either name elsewhere, but the S'áśikas of the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 354) are, no doubt, the same as the second of these.

† This name is altogether out of place here, and the Kásmíras have been mentioned in their proper position in verse 41. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Kac'c'hviyas instead (xlv. 131) and the Matsya Kac'c'hikas (cxiii. 51), which indicate the correct reading. They are the people of Kac'c'ha (see canto lviii. verse 28) the modern Kachh or Kutch.

‡ Su-ráshtra is a country frequently mentioned in the M.-Bh., but the references seldom convey any definite information. It included the peninsula of Káthiáwār and the country around the G. of Cambay—that is, not quite all the modern territory called Gujarat (Vana-P., lxxxviii. 8344-9). It is very rarely alluded to in the Rámáy. (see once in Ádi-K., xii. 23). The old name survives in the town Surat near the mouth of the Tapti.

§ This form is not given in the dictionary; read Avantiyás for Avantiyás? They are the people of Avanti; see note to verse 55 where the Avantis are mentioned again, and more appropriately, for canto lviii. verse 22 places them in the Tortoise's right side, i.e., the South: but they were considered to be in both regions.

The Vāyu Purāṇa (xlv. 131) and the Matsya (cxiii. 51) read Anartas, which is perhaps better, as they are placed by canto lviii. verse 30 in the Tortoise's right hind-foot. Anarta was the country which had for its capital Dváraká or Dvára-vatí or Kuśa-sthalí, the modern Dwarka on the sea-shore at the extreme west of the peninsula of Káthiáwār (Śánti-P., cccxli. 12955; Hari-V., cxiii. 6265-6). It was Kṛishṇa's special kingdom, but it was founded long before (Hari-V., x. 642-9; and xciv. 5163-9).

¶ For Vindha-nivásinaḥ read Vindhya-nivásinaḥ; see verse 55. Vindhya is used here in its general and wider meaning, as denoting the whole mountain-chain from Gujarat eastwards, and not in the precise sense given it in verses 21-23, because the Naishadhas, Avantis and other western people are included in this group.

* I have not met with this name elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary. The Váyu Purāṇa (xlv. 132) and the Matsya (cxiii. 52) read Málavas, which is no doubt correct. Málava is the modern Málwa; and the people are generally mentioned in the M.-Bh. as a tribe rather than as a settled nation (e.g., Sabhā-P., xxxiii. 1270; li. 1871; and Vana-P., ccliii. 15256). Málava does not appear to have been so extensive however as Málwa and, as this passage indicates, denoted rather the upper portion of that region bordering on the Vindhya; west of Avanti.

† The name is also written Kárusha, Kárúsha and Kárushaka. This people constituted a powerful nation under king Danta-vakra in the Pāṇḍavas' time (Sabhā-P., xiii. 575-7; and Hari-V., xci. 4963); but they seem to have consisted of several tribes (Udyoga-P., iii. 81) and were not looked upon as closely allied to the races around them, for their origin is carried directly back to an eponymous ancestor Karúsha, a son of Manu Vaivasvata, in the Hari-Vaṁśa (x. 614; and xi. 658). The position of Karúsha is indicated by the following allusions. It is linked with C'edi and with Kási (Ādi-P., cxxiii. 4796; Bhīshma-P., ix. 348; liv. 2242; lvi. 2415; cxvii. 5446; and Karṇa-P., xxx. 1231), and with the Vátśyas or Vatsas (Droṇa-P., xi. 396; see page 307, note*); it was not a very accessible country (Sabhā-P., li. 1864); and here it is said to rest on the Vindhya. Moreover Danta-vakra acknowledged Jarásandha, king of Magadha (see page 330 note †) as his suzerain (Sabhā-P., xiii. 575-7; and Hari-V., xci. 4963). Karúsha therefore was a hilly country, south of Kási and Vatsa, between C'edi and Magadha; that is, it comprised the hilly country of which Rewa is the centre, from about the R. Ken on the west as far as the confines of Behar on the east. I have discussed Karúsha in a paper on "Ancient Cēdi, Matsya and Karūṣa" in the Bengal Asiatic Society's Journal, 1895, Part I. p. 249.

‡ This must be incorrect, for the Keralas were a well-known people in the South; see note to Kevalas in verse 45. The Váyu Purāṇa (xlv. 132) and Matsya (cxiii. 52) read Mekalas, which is no doubt right. They are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Bhīshma-P., ix. 348; and li. 2103) and occupied the Mekala hills and the hilly country around. The Mekala hills are the hills in which the R. Sone rises (Rámáy., Kishk.-K., xl. 20), and which bound Ohhattisgarh on the west and north. These people are often coupled, as here, with the Utkalas.

§ See page 327, note *. Utkala had a wide extension and falls within this group as well as within the Eastern group.

the Uttamarṇas,* and the Daśárṇas,† the Bhojyas,‡ and 54 the Kiskindhakas,§ the Tośálas,|| and the Kośálas,¶

* The Uttamas are mentioned in the Bhíshma-P. list (ix. 348) and are no doubt the same people. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Auṇḍrámāshas (cxiii. 52). A people called Urddhva-karṇas are mentioned in canto lviii. verse 16. I have not, however, found any of these names elsewhere.

† This people formed a well-known kingdom in early times (Ādi-P., cxiii. 4449; Vana-P., lxix. 2707-8; and Udyoga-P., cxc.-cxci), and inhabited the country watered by the R. Daśárṇá, the modern Dasan, a tributary of the Jumna. They are named thrice in the Bhíshma-P. list (ix. 348, 350 and 363), which seems inexplicable. They are mentioned both in the Eastern and in the Western regions in the accounts of Bhíma's and Nakula's campaigns (Sabhá-P., xxviii. 1063-5; and xxxi. 1189); the former of these allusions is correct, but the latter seems to be an error. The capital was Vidiśá, see page 343, note †.

§ Or better, Kishkindhakas, as the Matsya Purāṇa reads (cxiii. 52). They are no doubt the same as the Kaishkindhyas of canto lviii. verse 18; but they cannot have any reference to Kishkindhyá in the Rámáy., for that country lay far to the south of the Godavari (see Journal, R. A. S., 1894, pp. 255, &c.), and is referred to in M.-Bh., Sabhá-P., xxx. 1122. The Kishkindhakas mentioned in the Hari-Vaṁśa (xiv. 784) may be the people intended here, but there appear to be no data to identify them.

|| The Matsya Purāṇa reads Tośálas (cxiii. 53). They are not in the dictionary, but Toshala and Tosala are given doubtfully. I have not however found any of these names elsewhere.

¶ These are the people of Dakṣhiṇa Kosala or Mahá-Kosala, the modern Chhattisgarh. In the Journal, R. A. S., 1894, p. 246, some reasons have been given for placing the Pañcápsaras lake, where Ráma spent ten years of his exile, in this region. May one hazard the conjecture that it was in consequence of his long residence here, that a colony from North Kosala invaded this region, established a kingdom here and gave their name to this country? The connexion was ancient (Āśvamedh.-P., lxxii. 2464-5).

the Traipuras,* and the Vaidísas,† the Tumburas,‡ and the Tumbulas,§ the Paṭus,|| and the Naishadhas,¶

* The people of Tripurá, the modern Tewar, on the R. Narmadá. It was a famous city (Sabhá-P., xxx. 1164; Vana-P., ccliii. 15246) deriving its name from a legend that the demons had a triple city Tri-pura here, made of gold, silver and iron, and Śiva destroyed it at the intercession of the gods; this is a favourite subject with the poets (Karna-P., xxxiii and xxxiv; and see Aitareya-Brahm., I. iv. 23 and 24, for the story in an older form); see also Cunningham's Arch. Surv. Repts., VIII. 124; IX. 54-55; and, XXI. 23; but his connexion of Tripurá with C'edi in early times is mistaken, see paper on "Ancient Cēdi, Matsya and Karuṣa" in Journal, Bengal Asiatic Society, 1895, Part I. p. 249.

† For Vaidikas read Vaidísas. These are the people of Vidísá. It was a famous town, the capital of the country Daśárṇa, and situated on the R. Vetra-vatí, the modern Betwa, a little way east of Ujjain (Megha-D., i. 24, 25 and 28). It is probably to be identified with the modern Bhilsa, or rather with Bes-nagar the ancient capital which is close to Bhilsa (Cunningham's Stupa of Bharhut, 132, &c). The Váyu Purāṇa reads Vaidikas (xlv. 133), which seems erroneous, though the Vaidísas are really included among the Daśárṇas in the last verse.

‡ These are mentioned as a wild aboriginal tribe who inhabited the slopes of the Vindhya Mountains in the Hari-Vamśa (v. 310-11). The Matsya Purāṇa reads Tumuras (cxiii. 53), and the Tumbumas (Bhishma-P., I. 2034) may be the same.

§ The Váyu Purāṇa reads Tumuras (xlv. 133); see the last note. The Matsya reads Tumbaras (cxiii. 53). This is no doubt a tribe closely allied to the last.

|| This people seems to be the same as the Paṭac'aras, who are mentioned several times in the M.-Bh.; see page 309, note *. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Shaṭsuras (xlv. 133), and the Matsya Padgamas (cxiii. 53); but I have not met either of these names elsewhere.

¶ The people of Nishadha; the Nishadhas, as the Váyu Purāṇa reads (xlv. 133). This country is chiefly known from the story of its king Nala (Vana-P., liii.-lxxix); otherwise it is rarely mentioned. The chief data for fixing its position are Nala's remarks to his wife when he is banished from his kingdom (id., lxi. 2317-9); and, as stated in note † to page 299, it seems to me the view which he describes could only be obtained completely from a position on the Satpura Mountains about longitude 75° E. The text says also Nishadha rested on the Vindhya Mountains. Hence it may be inferred that Nishadha comprised the country south of the Vindhyas between long. 74° and 75°, with Avanti to the north-east and Vidarbha to the south-east. Its capital was probably in the Tapti valley; Damayantí in wandering from it found her way north-eastward to C'edi (see note to C'edi in canto lviii. verse 16).

* I have not met this name elsewhere and it is not in the dictionary. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Arūpas (cxiii. 54) which seems erroneous. The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Anūpas (xlv. 134) which is no doubt correct. Anūpa means "a country situated near water," or "a marshy country." It was applied to various tracts near the sea, generally in the combination sāgarānūpa, e.g., in Bengal (Sabhā-P., xxv. 1002; xxix. 1101; and xxxiii. 1268-9); in or near the Pāṇḍya kingdom in the South (Udyoga-P., xviii. 578); in the north and west of the peninsula of Kathiawar (Hari-V., cxiii. 6361-9; and cxiv. 6410-11); and on the western coast generally (Udyoga-P., iii. 81); but the name was more specially applied to a tract on the west coast which constituted a kingdom in the Pāṇḍavas' time (Sabhā-P., iv. 123). The only country which rests on the Vindhya and borders on the sea is the tract on the east of the G. of Cambay, north of the Narmadā, and this no doubt was Anūpa. It is also indicated that Su-rāshṭra, Anūpa and Anarta were contiguous countries, and that Anūpa lay beyond and south of Su-rāshṭra (Hari-V., xciv. 5142-80). When the kings of Māhish-matī (see page 333, note †) were powerful, the valley of the lower Narmadā and Anūpa would naturally fall under their sway, and this no doubt explains why Kārtavīrya is called "lord of Anūpa" (Vana-P., cxvi. 10189-90), and king Nīla also (Bhīshma-P., xcv. 4210).

† I have not found this name elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary. The reading should no doubt be Tuṇḍikeras as the Vāyu Purāṇa reads (xlv. 134). A Tuṇḍikera king is mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Droṇa-P., xvii. 691), and the Tuṇḍikeras (Karna-P., v. 138); and the Tuṇḍikeras are said in the Hari-Vaṁśa to be a branch of the Haihaya race (xxxiv. 1895). There is a town called Tendukhera a little north of the Narmadā at nearly long. 79° E.; and as this site suits the text, it may be presumed these people occupied that position in the Narmadā valley. The Matsya Purāṇa reads Saundikeras (cxiii. 54), not quite correctly.

‡ The Vāyu Purāṇa (xlv. 134) and the Matsya (cxiii. 54) read Vītihotras which is no doubt correct. Vītihotra was a famous Haihaya king, and the Vītihotras were a branch of that race (Hari-V., xxxiv. 1895). They are called Vitahotras in the M.-Bh. (Droṇa-P., lxx. 2436). Being Haihayas, they probably occupied a part of the upper Narmadā valley.

§ They have been mentioned already in verse 52. Avanti had the Narmadā flowing through it (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1114; and Vana-P., lxxxix. 8354-8)

and was on the lower portion of that river, for it is placed in the South in the first of these passages, and in the West in the second passage and in verse 52. It appears to have been bounded by the Riksha Mountains (Satpura range) on the south (Vana-P., lxi. 2317), but its limits on the north are not clear. Its capital, though not mentioned in the M.-Bh., was Ujjayinī or Viśālā, the modern Ujjain, in later times (Megha-D., i. 31). Avanti therefore comprised the region of the sources of the Chambal and the country south-westward as far as the Satpura range. Two brothers Vinda and Anuvinda are often named as the kings of Avanti in the M.-Bh. (Udyoga-P., clxv. 5753; Droṇa-P., xcix. 3682-92; and Karṇa-P., xiii. 493-9), but they were also Kaikeyas and led Kaikeya troops (ibid., 492-524). May it be inferred a branch of the Kaikeyas had invaded and conquered Avanti?

* Parvatāśrayin. These mountains are it seems only the Himalaya range. This group repeats many of the tribes mentioned in verses 40-42.

† I have not met this name elsewhere. Are these the modern Newārs, who inhabit the great valley of Nepal and its vicinity, and who were the owners of the country prior to the Gurkha invasion (Journal, Beng. As. Socy., Vol. LXIII, Part I, 213, 214 and 217). The Vāyu Purāṇa reads Nigarharas (xlv. 135); but I have not found it elsewhere. The Matsya reads Nirāhāras (cxiii. 55) which seems erroneous.

§ These are probably the Uttara or Northern Kurus, for the Kurus of Madhya-deśa could not properly be described as dwelling among mountains. They seem to have been the stock from which the Kurus of Madhya-deśa separated off, for the period when Dhṛita-rāshṭra and Pāṇḍu were born is described as a golden age, in which both branches of the Kurus engaged in happy rivalry (Adi-P., cix. 4337-46); but the wistful recollections of their ancient home idealized it afterwards into a blissful land, where fancy gave itself free scope (Rāmāy., Kishk.-K., xlv. 82-115). They seem to have occupied the uppermost valleys of the Indus near its sources, with Kailāsa lying beyond (Vana-P., cxiv. 11025-35); and fervid imagination also placed them close to Mount Meru on its north side (Bhishma-P., vi. 207-8; and vii. 254), or in the region Hari-varsha, and declared men could not enter their sacred land (Sabhā-P., xxvii. 1054-8). They are described as living in primitive happiness, and women had the utmost freedom there (cxii. 4719-23; and Rāmāy., loc. cit.).

people the modern Gurungs, an important tribe of Tatar race, who dwell now throughout Nepal, but whose territory was formerly the country about Lamzung, Ghandrung and Siklis, west of the great valley of Nepal (Journal, Bengal Asiatic Society, Vol. LXIII. Part I. 213, 217 and 223-229; Risley's Castes and Tribes of Bengal, I. 304)? The Váyu Purāṇa reads Tangāṇas here (xlv. 135), after having named them previously (ibid., 120); see verse 41. The Matsya reads A-pathas (cxiii. 55), which seems erroneous.

* The Khasas or Khasās are generally mentioned as a half-civilized tribe outside India, along with Śakas, Daradas, &c. (Sabhā-P., li. 1859; Droṇa-P., xi. 399; and cxxi. 4846-7). They are said to have been defeated and degraded by Sagara (Hari-V., xiv. 784), and were considered mleç'chas (id., xcv. 6440-1; see also Muir's Sansk. Texts, II. 482). The Khasas in the text, however, may perhaps be identified with the Khas, who were formerly a small clan but have developed into the predominant military order of the kingdom of Nepal through intermarriages with bráhmans' (Journal, Bengal Asiatic Society, Vol. LXIII. Part I. 217-223). See canto lviii. verse 6.

† I have not found this name elsewhere. The Váyu Purāṇa reads Kuśa instead of Kunta (xlv. 136), which does not seem satisfactory. The proper reading should no doubt be Karṇa-právarāṇas, "those who cover themselves with their ears," a people mentioned several times in the M.-Bh. (Sabhā-P., li. 1875; and Bhishma-P., li. 2103). They are placed in the South in the story of Sahadeva's conquests (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1170) and among the Kirátas in the Eastern region in the Rámáy. (Kishk.-K. xl. 29); but it seems permissible to identify them with the Ulúkas, for a story is told about an Ulúka named Právéra-karṇa (Vana-P., cxviii. 13334). The Ulúkas dwelt in the Himalayas (ibid.), and formed a kingdom in the Pāṇḍavas' time (Udyoga-P., clix. and clx), but it seems impossible to fix their position more definitely than somewhere in Nepal (Sabhā-P., xxvi. 1014-20). The word Karṇa-právarāṇa is also used as an adjective, for Hanúmān saw female Rákshasas in Lanká "three-eared and pin-eared, long-eared, ear-less, and one-eyed and one-eared, and having their ears as a covering" (Rámáy. Sund.-K., xvii. 24); and it was an ancient belief that there were people with immense ears which covered their bodies (Plin., iv. 13; and vii. 2; Mandeville's Travels, chap. xix). The Matsya P. mentions Kuṭha-právarāṇas and Karṇa-právarāṇas (cxx. 56 and 58).

* Or Traigartas. Trigarta was considered to be in the Northern region (Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1026) and also in the Western (id., xxxi. 1189). It is generally mentioned in connexion with the Sindhus, Madras and other Panjab nations (id., li. 1870; Vana-P., cclxiv. 15593-9; cclxx. 15743; Bhishma-P., xviii. 688; cxviii. 5435; cxx. 5649; Droṇa-P., vii. 183; and also Hari-V., xci. 4965-70). It was near the Kurus, for the Pándavas when burnt out of V́arapávata visited the Trigartas and other contiguous nations (Adi-P., clvi. 6084-7); and also near Matsya and Sálva, for these two kingdoms had often raided into Trigarta (Viráṭa-P., xxx). From these indications it appears that Trigarta must have touched the Panjab on the west, and the Kurus on the south-east, and been close to Matsya (see page 307 note *) and Sálva (see note to canto lviii. verse 6) on the south; hence it must have comprised the country from Amballa and Pattiala to the R. Bias, i.e., the Jalandhar doab and the country south-east of that. Cunningham includes Kangra also (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 16; and XIV. 116 and 117; and Buddh. Cave Temples, p. 93). At the time of the great war Prasthala belonged to Trigarta (see note on page 321), and so brought the Trigarta territories close to Matsya and Sálva.

† These people, no doubt, claimed to be the descendants of the rishi Gálava (Hari-V., xxvii. 1463-7; and xxxii. 1767-76), who was a famous son of Viśvá-mitra (Anusás.-P., iv. 249-259; Udyoga-P., cv-cxviii; and see cantos XX and XXI above), or took their name from him; see similarly the Atreyas and Bharadv́ajas of verse 39.

‡ See note to verse 40.

§ These have been already mentioned in verse 41.

 CANTO LVIII.

Mārkaṇḍeya continuing represents India as resting upon Vishṇu in the form of a tortoise looking eastward, and distributes the various countries and peoples accordingly over the several parts of his body, together with the corresponding lunar constellations. He gives an astrological application to this arrangement and enjoins the performance of religious rites to avoid calamity. He also distributes the constellations of the Zodiac over the Tortoise's body.

Kraushṭuki¶ spoke

- 1 Adorable Sir! Thou hast duly declared Bhárata to me, its 2 rivers, mountains, countries, and the people who inhabit it.

* Marutas tathá seems incorrect. Read instead martyatá tathá?

† Mṛiga-paṭv-apsaro-yonis. The meaning of "aquatic animal" is given to ap-sara but not to ap-saras in the dictionary.

‡ For pra-yáti read pra-játiḥ?

§ For sadá esha read sadaivaisha?

|| This seems rather meaningless. For sva-karma-khyápanotsukaiḥ the MS. reads sva-karma-kshapanonmukhaiḥ, "who are averse to diminishing the stock of their actions;" but kshapanotsukaiḥ seems preferable, "who are eager to diminish the stock of their actions."

¶ For Kroshtukir read Kraushṭukir.

But thou didst previously make mention of the Tortoise, who is the adorable Vishṇu, in Bhārata; I desire to hear fully about his position.

- 3 What position does he, the god Janārdana, occupy in his form of the Tortoise? And how are weal and woe indicated thereby to mankind according to the position of his face and of his feet? Expound all that about him.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke

- 4 With his face looking eastwards the adorable Tortoise-formed god takes his position, when he approaches this nine-portioned country Bhārata, O brāhman. The constellations are arranged all about him in nine divisions, and the countries * also, O brāhman. Hear duly from me which they are.
- 6 The Veda-mantras,† the Vimāṇḍavyas,‡ the Śálvas,§

* The arrangement of the countries is very far from correct; and this canto cannot be compared with the last canto for accuracy. To make the shape of India conform to that of a Tortoise lying outspread and facing eastwards is an absurd fancy and a difficult problem.

† This is not in the dictionary and I have not found the name elsewhere. Does it mean "those who observe the Vedas and the Mantras especially" or has it any reference to Brahmāvarta?

‡ I have not found this elsewhere and it is not in the dictionary. Māṇḍavyas are mentioned in verse 33.

§ Or Sálveyas as they were also called (Vana-P. cclxiii. 15576-82). The Śálvas are often mentioned in the M.-Bh. They were near the Kurus (Virāṭa-P. i. 11-12) and the Trigartas (id., xxi); and in the beautiful story of Satya-vat and Sāvitrī, he was a Śálva prince and she a Madra princess (Vana-P. ccxcii, &c.). Other indications of Śálva are given in the allusions to Kṛishṇa's conquest of it, but the story is marred because the people are called Daityas and Dānavas, and Saubha which seems to have been the capital is described as a city and as situated in the air, and also as able to move about freely (Vana-P. xiv-xxii; Udyoga-P. xlvii. 1886; and Drona-P. xi. 395). The Śálva king attacked Dvāra-vatī, and Kṛishṇa in retaliation killed him and destroyed Saubha at the gulf of the sea (ibid.), which can be none other than the Rann of Kachh. From these indications it appears Śálva was the country along the western side of the Aravalli hills. Saubha is incapable of being determined. Śálva seems to have contained another city called Mārttikāvata (or Mṛittikā-vatī?), which is probably the same as the Mṛittikā-vatī mentioned in page 342, note‡ (Vana-P. xiv. 629; and

and the Nípas,* and the Śakas,† and the Ujjixx. 791). The Hari-Vaṁśa says king Sagara degraded the Śálvas (xiv. 784), but this is a late fable for the Śálva king was one of the leading monarchs in Krishṇa's time (id., cviii. 6029) and was brother of Śiśu-pála king of C'edi (Vana-P. xiv. 620-7); and other allusions shew that Śálva was a famous kingdom before that (Udyoga-P. clxxiii and clxxiv; and Anuśás.-P. cxxxvii. 6267); besides which, Satya-vat and Sávitrí rank with the noblest characters in ancient Indian story. The weird legend of Vyushitáśva's queen no doubt means her sons became Śálvas and did not originate the race (Ádi-P. cxxi. 4695-4714), as in the case of the Madras (page 315, note †).

* The Nípas began with king Nípa of the Paurava race, who established his dynasty in Kámpilya, the capital of Southern Páñc'ála, about 12 or 15 generations anterior to the Páṇḍavas; the dynasty flourished in king Brahma-datta who was contemporary with their fifth ancestor Pratípa, and it was destroyed in Bhishma's time (Hari-V., xx. 1060-73; M-Bh., Ádi-P. cxxxviii. 5512-3; and Matsya-P. xlix. 52 and 53) in the person of Janamejaya, nicknamed Durbuddhi, who after exterminating his kinsmen was himself killed by Ugráya-dha (Udyoga-P. lxxiii. 2729; Hari-V., xx. 1071-2; and Matsya-P. xlix. 59). Kámpilya is the modern Kampil on the old Ganges between Budaon and Farokhabad (Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 255). Prishata, who is said to have been the last king's grandson but was a Páñc'ála with a different ancestry, obtained the kingdom and handed down a new dynasty to his son Drupada (Hari-V., xx. 1082-1115; and xxxii. 1778-93). The Nípas who survived are mentioned in the M.-Bh. as an inferior people (Sabhá-P. xlix. 1804; and l. 1844).

† The Śakas were originally an outside race and are mentioned often in the M.-Bh. They were considered to be mleç'c'has (Vana-P. clxxxviii. 12838-9), and were classed generally with Yavanas, but also with Kámbojas, Pahlavas, Tukháras and Khasas (Sabhá-P. xxxi. 1199; l. 1850; Udyoga-P. iii. 78; xviii. 590; Droṇa-P. xi. 399; xx. 798; cxxi. 4818; Śānti-P. lxxv. 2429; and Vana-P. li. 1990; and also Rámáy., Kishk. K. xlv. 13). Their home therefore lay to the north-west, and they are generally identified with the Scythians (Lat. Sacæ). They penetrated into India by invasions, and a branch is mentioned in the M.-Bh. as in the Eastern region, apparently in Behar (Sabhá-P. xxix. 1088; and li. 1872; see also Rámáy., Kishk. K. xl. 21). Buddha Śákya-muni is considered to have been of Saka race. Their inroads continued through many centuries, and were resisted by various kings; and they are mentioned in the text as having established themselves in Madhya-deśa. The Hari-Vaṁśa makes them the descendants of Narishya one of Manu Vaivasvata's sons (x. 614 and 641); another account says they were Kshatriyas and became degraded from having no brahmans (M.-Bh., Anuśás.-

P. xxxiii. 2103; and Manu x. 43-44). The Rāmáya. has an absurd fable about their creation (Ādi-K. lvi. 3; see page 314 note *).

* Ujjihāna is given in the dictionary as the name of a region, but have not met it anywhere. Perhaps it is to be identified with the town Uryihāná, which was situated south-east of Vārana-ssthala, which is the same as Hásti-napura, or near it (Rāmáya., Ayodh. K. lxxiii. 8-10); and in that direction there is now a town called Ujhani about 11 miles south-west of Budaon.

‡ This is not in the dictionary and I have not found the name elsewhere. It may mean "those who are reckoned among Ghoshas or herdsmen," and be an adjective to Khaśas.

§ Or Khasas. They were an outside people on the north, as mentioned in page 346 note.* In one passage they are placed between Meru and Mandara near the R. Sailodá (Sabhá-P. li. 1858-9), that is somewhere in Western Tibet; according to the Matsya Purāṇa the R. Sailodaká rises at Mt. Aruṇa which is west of Kailāsa and flows into the Western Sea (cix. 19-23). Khaśa has been connected with Kashgar. The Khaśas also made incursions into India, for they are classed among the Panjab nations in a passage in the M-Bh., which shews its later age by its tone (Karna-P. xlv. 2070), and they are mentioned in the text here as settled in Madhya-deśa. Manu says they were Kshatriyas and became degraded by the loss of sacred rites and the absence of brahmins (x. 43-44).

|| "Those who live along the Saras-vatí," that is, the sacred river north of Kuru-kshetra. They are not the same as the people named in canto lviii. verse 51.

 Śūrasena lay immediately south of Indra-prastha or Delhi (Sabhá-P., xxx. 1105-6), and comprised the country around Mathurá, the modern Muttra (Hari-V., lv. 3093-3102; and xci. 4973) to the east of Matsya (Viráṭa-P., v. 144-5); and it extended apparently from the Chambal to about 50 miles north of Muttra (see Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., XX. 2). The Śūrasenas belonged to the Yádava and Haihaya race, for Mathurá the capital is specially called the capital of the Yádavas, and the kings who reigned there belonged to that race (Hari-V., lvii. 3180-83; lxxix. 4124-34; xc. 4904; cxiv. 6387; and xxxviii. 2024 and 2027). A king named Śūrasena, a son of Arjuna Kártavirya, is mentioned (id., xxxiv. 1892), who is, no doubt, intended as the eponymous ancestor of this people, for Arjuna who vanquished Rávana was slightly anterior to Ráma, and the Hari-Vamśa says Śūrasena occupied this country after Śatru-ghna's time (id., lv. 3102); see next note. The Śúrasenas constituted a powerful kingdom shortly before the Pándavas' time, and Kṛishṇa killed Kaṁsa, who was one of the chief monarchs of that age, broke up the sovereignty and betook himself to Anarta. In later times Śúrasena presumably regained importance, for it gave its name to Śaurasení one of the chief Prákṛits.

* Mathurá was the capital of Śúrasena as mentioned in the last note, and is the modern Muttra on the R. Jumna (Hari-V., lv. 3060-61). The Hari-Vaṁśa says that Madhu, king of the Daityas and Dánavas, and his son Lavaṇa reigned at Madhu-pura and Madhu-vana (lv. 3061-3); and during Ráma's reign Śatru-ghna killed Lavaṇa, cut down Madhu-vana and built Mathurá on its site (lv. 3083-96; and xcv. 5243-7); and after the death of Ráma and his brothers Bhíma of the Yádava race according to one passage (id., xcv. 5243-7) took the city and established it in his own family; and Śúrasena (see the last note) according to another passage occupied the country around (id., lv. 3102). It is said Bhíma's son Andhaka was reigning in Mathurá while Kuśa and Lava reigned in Ayodhyá (id., xcv. 5247-8). These passages seem to make a marked distinction between the population in the country and the dynasty in the city.

‡ This is not in the dictionary and I have not found the name elsewhere; but Buchanan Hamilton says there was a class of brahmans in Behar, called Jausi, the vulgar pronunciation of Jyotish (Vol. I. p. 156).

§ These are stated in the dictionary as in the text to be a people in Madhya-deśa; but I have not met the name elsewhere. The word may however be an adjective, "yellow-necked," and qualify Guḍas and Áśmakas which are joined together in a compound.

|| These are stated in the dictionary as in the text to be a people in Madhya-deśa, but I have not found the name elsewhere. Probably it is to be connected with the country Gauḍa which Cunningham says was formerly the southern part of North Kosala, i.e. the southern portion of the tract between the Ghogra and Rapti rivers (Arch. Surv. Repts. I. 327). The town Gaur in the Maldah district in Behar, which was once the capital of the Bengal kingdom, is too far east to be admissible here.

* Pañc'ála or Páñc'ála was a large country, comprising the territory on both banks of the Ganges, and bounded on the north by Sub-Himalayan tribes, on the east by the same tribes and Kosala, on the south by Súrāsena, the junction of the Jumna and Chambal, and Kánya-kubja (Ādi-P., cxxxviii. 5512-3 and Virāṭa-P., v. 144), and on the west by the Kurus and Súrāsenas (Sabhá-P., xxviii. 1061; and Bhíšhma-P., ix. 346). The Páñc'álas originated in the descendants of Ajamidha by his wife Níli, though the M.-Bh. (Ādi-P., xciv. 3722-3) and Hari-Vaṁśa (xxxii. 1776-80, with which agrees the Matsya Purāṇa, xlix. 43-4 and l. 1-4) differ in the number and names of the descendants. These passages from the Hari-Vaṁśa and Matsya Purāṇa date their rise about eight or nine generations prior to the Pāṇḍavas, and the passage from the M.-Bh. seems to point to a much earlier kingdom. The country being large was divided into two kingdoms, the Ganges being the dividing line (Ādi-P., cxxxviii. 5509-16); to the north was North Pañc'ála or Ahi-c'c'hatra, with its capital at Ahi-c'c'hatrá, the modern Alichhatr, 18 miles west of Bareilly and 7 north of Aonla (Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 255-7); and to the south was South Pañc'ála, with its capital at Kámpilya, the modern Kampil, on the old Ganges between Budaon and Faizhabad (ibid. 235). The Spriṇjayas, or descendants of Spriṇjaya, who are often mentioned in the M.-Bh. (e.g., Ādi-P., cxxxviii. 5476; and Droṇa-P., xxi. 883, 895 and 915) appear to have reigned in North Pañc'ála, and the Nípas in South Pañc'ála (see page 350 note *); on the destruction of the latter, Prishata of the former dynasty united the two kingdoms, but Droṇa conquered his son Drupada and re-established the two kingdoms, keeping North Pañc'ála himself, and restoring the South to Drupada who then reigned in Kámpilya and Mákandí (Ādi-P. cxxxviii; Hari-V., xx. 1060-1115).

† Putting aside the Utsava-sanketas (see page 319 note †), the only instance where I have met this name is in the M.-Bh. (Sánti-P., clxxiv. 6514) where it is introduced apparently as the name of a town; but there is nothing to indicate where it was, and it is not so given in the dictionary. Probably however the reading here and there should be Sáketa, that is, Ayodhyá and its people. Otherwise they are not mentioned in this group where they should be, and they can hardly be intended by the Kósálas in verse 14.

‡ These are mentioned in the M.-Bh. only as an outside race, along with the Tukháras, Sakas, Pahlavas, &c. (Sabhá-P., I. 1850; and Sánti-P., lxx. 2429) Their being mentioned here in the middle of India suggests that they must have invaded and settled there. It may be noticed also that Yudhishtira took the name Kanka during his disguised residence at Virāṭa's Court (Virāṭa-P. vii. 224).

§ I have met no people of this name elsewhere. Perhaps the reading should be Málavas, the people of Malwa (see page 341 note*); they are mentioned in verse 45 below, but their more appropriate position is here.

9 the Páripátra mountains,‡ the Kápingalas,§ Kururváhyas,||

* I have not met this name elsewhere, but it may mean the people of Kála-koṭī, which is mentioned in the M.-Bh. as a place of pilgrimage (Vana-P., xc. 8513); and which appears from the context to be between the Ganges and the Báhudá (the Ram-ganga or perhaps the Gurra east of it; see page 291 note §). Koṭī-tírtha mentioned in the Matsya Purāṇa (cv. 44) seems to be the same. Moreover Kála-koṭī may be the same as Kála-kúṭa, which is alluded to occasionally (Sabhá-P., xxv. 997; Udyoga-P., xviii. 596-601; and perhaps Adi-P., cxix. 4637), and for which the second passage indicates a similar position.

§ I have not met this name elsewhere. A river called Kapiñjalá is mentioned in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 334), but without any data to identify it. Two other readings may be suggested Kálingakas, i.e., Kalingas (see page 316, note †); or better perhaps Kálañjaras, the inhabitants of Kalinjar, an ancient and celebrated hill and fort 33 miles south of Banda in Bundelkhand; it is mentioned only as a tírtha in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., lxxxv. 8198-8200; lxxxvii. 8317; and Anuśás.-P., xxv. 1721-2).

|| This reading appears to be wrong, but it is not easy to suggest another entirely satisfactory. It is clear, however, that the Kurus are one of the races meant. Váhyas are said to be a people in the dictionary.

The Kurus occupied the country from the Sívis and Sub-Himalayan tribes on the north to Matsya, Súrāsena and South Pañc'ála on the south, and between North Pañc'ála on the east and Maru-bhúmi (the Rajputana desert) on the west. Their territory appears to have been divided into three parts, Kuru-kshetra, the Kurus and Kuru-jángala (Adi-P., cix. 4337-40). Kuru-kshetra, 'the cultivated land of the Kurus,' comprised the whole tract on the west of the Jumna and included the sacred region between the Saras-vatí and Drishad-vatí (Vana-P., lxxxiii. 5071-8 and 7073-6; Rámáy., Ayodh.-K., lxx. 12; and Megha-D., i. 49-50); it is said to have obtained this name because it was raised to honour, gra-krishṭa, by Kuru (Salya-P., liv. 3009); the Hari-V., in xxxii. 1800, inverts the course of history, and this explanation was afterwards confused and altered into that of his ploughing it (e.g., Matsya-P., l. 20-22). Kuru-jángala, 'the waste land of the Kurus,' was the eastern part of their territory and appears to have comprised the tract between the Ganges and North Pañc'ála (Rámáy., Ayodh.-K., lxxxviii. 1; and M.-Bh., Sabhá-P., xix. 793-4). middle region between the Ganges and Jumna seems to have been called simply the Kurus' country. The capital was Hāstinapura (see note† below), and Khāṇḍava-prastha or Indra-prastha, the modern Delhi, was a second capital founded by the Pāṇḍavas (Ādi-P., ccvii. 7568-94). Kuru was the eleventh ancestor of the Pāṇḍavas (id., xciv. 3738-51; and xcv. 3791-3820; and Hari-V., xxxii. 1799-1800).

* Uḍumbara is Kac'lh or Kutch according to Lassen (Ind. Alt. Map) and Cunningham (Arch. Surv. Repts., XIV. 115 and 135), and their identification may apply to the Audumbaras mentioned in Sabhā-P., li. 1869; but the Uḍumbaras here are placed in Madhya-de I have not met with the name elsewhere and it is not in the dictionary. Certain descendants of Viśvā-mitra were called Audumbaras (Hari-V., xxvii. 1466); and there was a river Uḍumbarā-vatī in the South (id., clxviii. 9511).

† The people of Hāstina-pura or Hastinā-pura, the capital of the Kurus (see page 354 note ||), which is situated on the old bed of the Ganges, 22 miles north-east of Meerut; lat. 29° 9' N., long. 78° 3' E. It is said to have been founded by king Hastin who was the fourth ancestor of Kuru (Ādi-P., xcv. 3787-92; and Hari-V., xx. 1053-4); but he is omitted from the genealogy in Ādi-P., xciv. 3714-39 and Hari-V., xxxii. 1754-6 and 1795-9. By a play on the meaning of the word hastin, 'elephant,' the city was also called Hastina-pura (Āśrama-vās.-P., xvii. 508 and xxxvi. 1010), Gaja-pura (dict.), Gajāhvayā (Udyoga-P., clxxvi. 6071), Gaja-sāhvaya (Ādi-P., cxlii. 4441 and 4460), Nāga-pura (ibid., 4461-2), Nāgāhva (dict.). Nāga-sāhvaya (Ādi-P., cxxxi. 5146) Vāraṇāhvaya (Āśrama-vās.-P., xxxix. 1098), and Vāraṇa-sāhvaya (dict.). It seems probable, however, that the derivation from 'elephant' is the real one, because of the numerous freely-coined synonyms with that meaning, and because there was another town Vāraṇāvata among the Kurus not far from Hāstina-pura (Ādi-P., cxlii, with the description of the Pāṇḍavas' subsequent movements, cxlix.-cli., and clvi. 6084-7), and also a place called Vāraṇa-sthala among the Kurus or North Pāñc'ālas (Rāmāy., Ayodh.-K., lxxiii. 8) which was perhaps the same as Hāstina-pura (see page 351, note *).

On hill Udaya-giri near Bhubaneswar, about 20 miles south of Cuttack, are a number of rock-cut caves, and one is sculptured in the form of a tiger's open mouth, and is known by the name Vyághra-mukha; can this be the hill intended here? It would be somewhat out of place here, but the grouping in this canto is far from perfect.

†† I have not found this name elsewhere, nor is it in the dictionary. Is it to be connected with the Kharak-pur hills in the south of the Monghyr District in Behar? A people called Karbukas are mentioned in the East in the Ramáy. (Kishk. K. xl. 29).

‡‡ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not met with it elsewhere; but it is no doubt to be connected with the country or town Karvatá, which is mentioned in conjunction with Tāmra-lipta and Suhma in the west of Bengal M.-Bh., Sabhā-P., xxix. 1098-9). See Karbukas in the last note.

§§ The two lines of verse 12 must, it seems, be inverted, so as to bring the word girayo next to the mountains named in verse 11: otherwise the word is meaningless.

||| For Mithilá, see page 329 note †; but the people of Videha have been mentioned already in verse 8 as situated in Madhya-deśa.

¶¶ I have not met this name elsewhere, nor is it in the dictionary as the name of a people. Probably the reading should be Suhmas; see p. 327 note *. The Sumbhas (Ramáy., Kishk.-K., xl. 25) are no doubt the same.

¶ The people of Lauhitya (M.-Bh., Sabbá-P., xxix. 1100; and li. 1864) which was the country on the banks of the R. Lohita, or Lauhitya (Sabbá-P., ix. 374; Rámáy., Kishk.-K., xl. 26; and Raghu-V., iv. 81 or Lohitá (Bhishma-P., ix. 343), and probably also Lohita-gangā (Hari-V., cxxii. 6873-6), the modern Brahma-putra. The mention of Lohita in Sabbá-P., xxvi. 1025 and Lauhitya in Anusás.-P., xxv. 1732 appears to have a different application; and a place Lohitya is mentioned in Rámáy., Ayodh.-K., lxxiii. 13, as situated between the Ganges and Go-matí. Viśvá-mitra had certain descendants called Lohitas (Hari-V., xxvii. 1465) or Lauhitas (id., xxxii. 1771) who may have been the children of his grandson Lauhi (id., xxvii. 1474).

 Sámudráḥ puruṣhādakāḥ; that is, on the coast of the Bay of Bengal which was the Eastern Ocean. They are mentioned in the Rámáy. (Kishk.-K., xl. 30).

†† This is mentioned in the dictionary, but I have not found it elsewhere.

§§ There are several hills of this name; that intended here is no doubt the hill near Rája-griha, or Rajgir. Its ancient name Cunningham says was Rishi-giri (Arch. Surv. Repts., I. 21 and plate iii), which is mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabbá-P., xx. 798-800).

||| This is not in the dictionary and I have not found it elsewhere. The proper reading is probably Kásayo, "the Kásis," the people of Benares (see page 308 note †). They are a little out of place here, and should fall within the former group (verses 6-9), but are not mentioned there, and therefore come in here probably, for the grouping in this canto is far from perfect.

¶¶ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. The first part of the word is no doubt a mistake for Mekala or Mekulá, for the liptas,* the Eka-pádapas,† the Vardhamánas,‡ and the Kósalas§ are situated in the Tortoise's face.

15 The three constellations Raudra,|| Punar-vasu, and Pushya are situated in its face.

Now these are the countries which are situated in 16 the Tortoise's right fore foot: listen while I mention them,
O Kraushṭuki.|| The Kalingas, the Bangas,†† and the Mekalas and Mekala hills are not mentioned in any other group in this canto and may be intended here, though considerably out of their proper position (see page 341 note †). There was also a town or river called Mekalā, which (if a river) was distinct from the Narmadā; but it appears to have been more on the western side (Hari-V., xxxvii. 1983) and therefore less admissible in this passage. I would suggest that the second part of the word should be Puṇḍrās, "the Puṇḍras" (see page 329 note *). The text Mekhalā-mushṭās however might mean "those who have been robbed of the triple zone" worn by the first three classes (see Manu, ii. 42) and might then be an adjective qualifying Kaśáyas.

* Or Támra-liptakas; see page 330 note *.

† "People who have only one tree;" but perhaps the reading should be Eka-páḍakás, "people who have only one foot"? It was a common belief that such people existed, see M.-Bh., Sabhā-P, l. 1838 (where they are placed in the South) and Pliny, vii. 2; and it lasted down to modern times, see Manderville's Travels, chap. XIV. See Eka-páḍas in verse 51.

§ This can hardly refer to Kosala, or Oudh (see page 308 note †) for, if so, this people would have been placed along with the people of Mithilá and Magadha in verse 12; whereas here the Kosalas are separated off from those nations by the insertion of three hills in verse 13, and are grouped with the Mekhalámushṭas, Támra-liptas and Vardhamánas. Kosala here must therefore mean Dakṣhiṇa Kosala which is mentioned in canto lvii, verse 54, as lying on the slope of the Vindhya mountains (see page 342 note ¶), and especially the north and east portions of it, for the southern part is placed appropriately in the right fore foot in verse 16.

§ There is no mention of a people called C'edi in the Eastern region in the older poems; but Cunningham repeatedly places a C'edi race in Chhattisgarh (Arch. Surv. Repts., IX. 54-57; and XVII. 24), yet in ancient times it was not so. C'edi was then one of the countries near the Kurus (M.-Bh., Virāṭa-P., i. 11-12; Udyoga-P., lxxi. 2594-5). It is placed in the Eastern region in the account of Bhīma's conquests there (Sabhā-P., xxviii. 1069-74) and also in the South region in the description of Arjuna's following the sacrificial horse (Āśva-medh.-P., lxxxiii. 2466-9); and it is also mentioned along with the Daśārṇas (see page 342 note †) and Pulindas (see page 335 note †) in the former passage. C'edi bordered on the Jumna, for king Vasu when hunting in a forest sent a message home to his queen across that river, and the forest could not have been far from his territory (Ādi-P., lxiii. 2373-87). C'edi, moreover, is often linked with Matsya and Karūṣa (e.g., Bhīshma-P., ix. 348; liv. 2242; and Karna-P., xxx. 1231; see page 307 note * and page 341 note †), and with Kāśi and Karūṣa (e.g., Ādi-P., cxiii. 4796; and Bhīshma-P., cxvii. 5446). It was closely associated with Matsya and must have touched it, for an ancient king Sahaja reigned over both (Udyoga-P., lxiii. 2732); and it seems probable that king Vasu's son Matsya became king of Matsya (Ādi-P., lxiii. 2371-93; and Hari-V., xxxii. 1804-6). From these indications it appears C'edi comprised the country south of the Jumna, from the R. Chambal on the north-west to near C'itra-kūta on the south-east; and on the south it was bounded by the plateau of Malwa and the hills of Bundelkhand.

Its capital was Sukti-matī or Sukti-sāhvayā, (Vana-P., xxii. 898; and Āśva-medh.-P., lxxxiii. 2466-7) and was situated on the R. Sukti-matī, which is said to break through the Kolāhala hills (Ādi-P., lxiii. 2367-70; see page 286 note §). This river rises in the Vindhya Range, and must be east of the R. Daśārṇa, which is the most westerly river that rises in that range (compare notes † and ‡ on page 286); it is probably the modern R. Ken, for which I have found no Sanskrit name. Hence the Kolāhala hills were probably those between Panna and Bijawar in Bundelkhand, and the capital Sukti-matī was probably near the modern town Banda. The kingdom of C'edi seems to have been founded as an offshoot by the Yādavas of Vidarbha (Matsya-Purāna, xliii. 4-7; and xlv. 14 and 28-38); and after it had lasted through some 20 or 25 reigns, Vasu Upari-

††† The people of Kaṭaka, the modern Cuttack in Orissa. This is a modern name and is mentioned in the Daśa-kumára-c'arita (Story of Soma-datta). The name given to it by the Brahmans was Váráṇasī in emulation with Benares.

nose, red eyes and copper coloured hair, and with a protuberant belly. Their name is fancifully derived from the command nishāda, "sit down," given to the first of them who was created. (Hari-V., v. 305-10; and Muir's Sansk. Texts, II. 428.) They were specially a forest people, and were scattered all over Northern and Central India. The earliest references shew, they occupied the forest tracts throughout North India. In Rāma's time they held the country all around Prayāga and apparently southwards also (Journal, R. A. S., 1895, page 237); but in the Pāṇḍavas' time they occupied the high lands of Mālwa and Central India (M.-Bh., Sabhā-P., xxix. 1085; xxx. 1109 and 1170; and Aśvamedh.-P., lxxxiii. 2472-5) and still formed a kingdom (Udyoga-P., iii. 84; and xlvii. 1884). It would seem that, as the Aryans extended their conquests, the Nishādas were partly driven back into the hills and forests of Central India, and were partly subjugated and absorbed among the lowest classes of the population as appears from casual allusions (Rāmāy., A'di-K., ii. 12; and M.-Bh., A'di-P., cxlviii; and Vana-P., cxxx. 10538-9). They are also mentioned as being pearl-divers and seamen in an island which seems to be on the west coast (Hari-V., xcv. 5214 and 5233-9). They were looked upon as very degraded in later times, but at first their position was not despicable, for Rāma and Guha king of the Nishādas met as friends on equal terms (Ayodh.-K., xlv. 20; xlvii. 9-12; and xcii. 3); and it seems Kṛishṇa's aunt Śruta-dovā married the king of the Nishādas (Hari-V., xxxv. 1930 and 1937-8).

* I have not found this name elsewhere, nor is it in the dictionary. Perhaps it is to be connected with Śrī-kākula, the modern Sreewacolum, a town 19 miles west of Masulipatam. It was founded by king Sumati of the Śāta-vāhanas or Andhras, and was their first capital (Arch. Surv. of S. India by R. Sewell, I. 55; and Report on Amarāvati, pp. 3 and 4).

†† Karkoṭaka was the name of the Nāga king whom Nala saved from a forest fire (M.-Bh., Vana-P., lxvi); where that happened is not clear, but probably it was somewhere in the middle or eastern part of the Satpura range (see page 343 note ¶); can that region be intended here? Karkoṭaka is also stated in the dictionary to be the name of a barbarous tribe of low origin, but I have not met with them elsewhere. Perhaps this word, however, may be connected with the modern Karād, a town in the Satara District, near which are many Buddhist caves. Its ancient name was Karahākaḍa or Karahākaṭa according to inscriptions (Arch. Surv. of W. India by J. Burgess, Memo. No. 10, page 16, and Cunningham's Stupa of Bharhut pp. 131, 135 and 136), and it seems to be the same as Karahāṭaka mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhā-P., xxx. 1173) and spoken of there as heretical, pāśhaṇḍa, no doubt because it was a Buddhist sanctuary as evidenced by its caves. See also Matsya P. xliii. 29 about Karkoṭaka.

§§ Or, more correctly, Konkanas. They are the inhabitants of the modern Konkan, the Marāṭhi-speaking lowland strip between the Western Ghats and the sea, from about Dombay southward to Goa. The Hari-Vaṁśa says king Sagara degraded these people (xiv. 784).

||| These people are not mentioned in the dictionary and I have not met with them elsewhere. Perhaps the reading should be the Sarpas, i.e., "the Nāgas," or the S'aravas who are named in M.-Bh. (Bhīṣma-P., 1. 2084, unless this be a mistake for Savaras.)

* See page 340 note § and page 344 note §.

† Or, better, Dása-puras, the people of Dása-pura. This was the capital of king Ranti-deva (Megha-D., I. 46-48), and seems from the context there to have been situated on or near the R. Chambal in its lower portion. But the two accounts of Ranti-deva (M.-Bh., Droṇa-P., lxvii; and Sánti-P., xxix. 1013-22) describe him as exercising boundless hospitality chiefly with animal food, and fancifully explain the origin of the river, C'armaṇ-vatí, as the juices from the piles of the hides of the slaughtered animals; this suggests that he reigned along the upper portion of the river.

|| The Canarese. Karnáṭa properly comprises the south-west portion of the Nizam's Dominions, and all the country west of that as far as the Western Ghats, and south of that as far as the Nilgiris. It did not include any part of the country below the Ghats, but its application has been greatly distorted by the Mohammedans and English. The name is probably derived from two Dravidian words meaning "black country," because of the "black cotton-soil" of the plateau of the Southern Dekhan (Caldwell, Grammar of the Dravidian Languages, 34 and 35; and Hunter's Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Karnátik). The Karnáṭakas are mentioned in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 366).

¶ Go-narda is given in the dictionary as the name of a people in the Dekhan, but I have not found either form elsewhere. Goa is said to have had a large number of names in ancient times; but this does not appear to have been one of them (Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Goa).

 The people of C'itra-kúṭa; it appears to have been the range of hills (comprising the modern mount Chitrakut) extending from south of Allahabad to about Panna near the R. Ken (see Journal, R. A. S., 1894, p. 239); but these people are very much out of place here.

†† See page 331 note ¶.

‡‡ This name does not seem to be connected with the Kolas who are mentioned in verse 25. The Kolagiras are no doubt the same as the Kolvogneyas, who are placed in South India in the description of Arjuna's following the sacrificial horse (Áśva-medh.-P., lxxxiii. 2475-7); and they would presumably be the inhabitants of Kolagiri, which is placed in South India in the account of Sahadeva's conquests there, and which appears to have been an extensive region for the whole of it is spoken of (Sabhá-P., xxx. 1171). Kolagiri may mean "the hills belonging to the Kols," but the Kols seem to be intended by the Kolas in verse 25. Kolagira may be compared with Kodagu, the ancient name of Coorg, which means 'steep mountains' (Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Coorg), and might therefore have led to the modification of the final part of the name to agree with the Sanskrit giri: but see page 366 note †. The name Kolagira somewhat resembles the Goldāngula of canto lvii, verse 45; and Goldāngula might be a corruption of Kodungalūr, which is the modern town Cranganore, 18 miles north of Cochin. It had a good harbour in early times, and was a capital town in the 4th century A.D. Syrian Christians were established there before the 9th century, and the Jews had a settlement there which was probably still earlier. It is considered of great sanctity by both Christians and Hindus (Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Kodungalūr).

* Jaṭā-dhara; the dictionary gives it as a proper name. Jaṭā also means "long tresses of hair twisted or braided together, and coiled in a knot over the head so as to project like a horn from the forehead, or at other times allowed to fall carelessly over the back and shoulders."

† This was no doubt the county of which Krauñc'a-pura was the capital, for dvīpa appears to have had the meaning of "land enclosed between two rivers," the modern doab; cf. Sākala-dvīpa, the doab in which Sākala (see page 315 note †) was situated, and the Seven dvīpas all in North India (Sabhá-P., xxv. 998-9). The Hari-Vaṁśa says Sārāsa, one of Yadu's sons, founded Krauñc'a-pura in the South region in a district where the soil was copper-coloured and champaka and aśoka trees abounded, and his country was known as Vana-vāsi or Vana-vāsin (xcv. 5213 and 5231-3); and also that that town was near the Sahya Mts., and was situated apparently south of a river Khaṭvāngī and north of Gomanta hill (xcvi. 5325-40). If Gomanta was the modern Goa, these indications agree fairly well with the Krauñc'ālaya forest mentioned in the Rāmāy. (Araṇ.-K., lxiv. 7), which appears to have been situated between the Godavari and Bhima rivers (Journal, R. A. S., 1894, page 250). But the town Bana-vāsi or Banavāsi, which was a city of note in early times, is in the North Kanara district, on the R. Warda (tributary of the Tungabhadra), 14 miles from Sirsi, in lat. 14° 33' N., long. 75° 5' E. (Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Banavasi; Arch. Surv. of W. India, No. 10, pp. 60 note and 100); and this is south of Goa. This was the country of the Vana-vāsakas (see page 333 note *).

I have not met with them elsewhere, and neither is in the dictionary as the name of a hill. Sukti can hardly be an error for the Sukti-mat range (see page 306 note §).

§ This is the Satpura range, for the Páṇḍavas in their pilgrimage went from Vidarbha and the R. Payoshnī (the Purna and Tapti, see page 299 note †), across these mountains, to the R. Narmadá (Vana-P., cxx. and cxxi). This range was placed in the Southern region (ibid., lxxxviii. 8343), and also apparently, as Vaidúrya-sikhara, in the Western region (ibid., lxxxix. 8359-61); and in the former of these two passages it is called mañi-maya.

it seems to have some connexion with the Kusumas of canto lvii verse 46;
 see page 332 note †.

* This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. Perhaps it is to be connected with the Okhalakiyas mentioned in Arch. Surv. of W. India, no. 10, pp. 34-35.

‡ I have not found this name elsewhere and it is not in the dictionary. Perhaps the reading should be Kambu-nāyakas or Kombu-nāyakas, and mean the people of Coorg. "According to tradition, Coorg was at this period (16th century A.D.?) divided into 12 kombus or districts, each ruled by an independent chieftain, called a nāyak" (Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Coorg). The similarity of the names is very remarkable.

§ This name is not in the dictionary and I have not met with it elsewhere. Perhaps it should be Kārushas (see page 341 note †), and the people intended are a southern branch of that nation.

|| These are the people mentioned in the Rāmāy. (Kishk.-K., xli. 16) and M.-Bh. (Kārṇa-P., viii. 237) and Hari-Vaṃśa (cxix. 6724-6). There was also a river called the Rishikā (M.-Bh., Vana-P., xii. 493) which may be connected with the same people. I have found no further data for fixing their position. See page 332 note †; the Māshikas mentioned there may perhaps be the people dwelling on the R. Musti, the tributary of the Kistna on which Haidarabad stands (Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Kistna).

¶ I have not met this name elsewhere nor is it in the dictionary. Perhaps it refers to the descendants of ascetics, see page 339 note †.

 These are, no doubt, the inhabitants of Rishabha-parvata mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., lxxxv. 8163-4) and placed there between Śrī-parvata and the Kāverī. Śrī-parvata is on the Kistna in the Karnul district (see page 290, note †). The Rishabha hills are therefore probably the southern portion of the Eastern Ghats, but none of the ranges there appears to have any name resembling this.

†† The people of Ceylon. They are named in the M.-Bh.; it is said the Simhāla king attended Yudhishtīra's Rāja-sūya sacrifice (Sabhā-P., xxxiii. 1271; and Vana-P., li. 1989); and the Simhālas brought to him presents of lapis lazuli, which is the essence of the sea (samudra-sāra), and abundance of pearls and elephants' housings (Sabhā-P., li. 1893-4). They are also named as fighting on the Kauravas' side in the great war (Droṇa-P., xx. 798).

- 28 Kāñc'ī*, the Tilangas,† and the peoples who dwell in Kuñjara-dari‡ and Kac'c'ha,§ and Tāmra-parṇi,||—such is the Tortoise's right flank.
- 29 And the constellations, the Last Phálgunis, Hastá and C'itrá are in the Tortoise's right flank.

This name is not I believe given to Ceylon in the Rámáy., but the name Simhiká is given to a terrible female Rákshasa who dwelt in the middle of the sea between India and Ceylon, and whom Hanúmán killed as he leapt across to the island (Kishk.-K., xli. 38; and Sund.-K., viii. 5-13).

* This is Kāñc'ī-puram or Kāñc'ī-varam, the modern Conjevaram, about 37 miles south-west of Madras. It is not, I believe, mentioned in the Rámáy. or M.-Bh., unless the Kāñc'īyas who are named as fighting in the great war (Karna-P., xii. 459) are the people of this town, but the proper reading there should probably be Káśyas, the people of Káśi or Benares. Conjevaram, nevertheless, is a place of special sanctity, and is one of the seven holy cities of India. Hwen Thsang speaks of it in the 7th century A.D. as the capital of Dráviḍa. It was then a great Buddhist centre, but about the 8th century began a Jain epoch, and that was succeeded by a period of Hindu predominance (Imp. Gaz. of India, Art. Conjevaram).

† This form is not in the dictionary; but it is no doubt the same as Tailanga or Tri-linga, that is Telinga, the modern Telugu country. It coincided more or less with the ancient kingdom of Andhra (see page 337 note §). I have not found this name in any shape in the Rámáy. or M.-Bh.; Andhra is the name which occurs in those books.

‡ This probably means "the valleys of the Kuñjara hills," and the reference may be to mount Kuñjara, which is mentioned in the Rámáy. as situated in the South, but not in a clear manner (Kishk.-K., xli. 50). I have not met the name elsewhere, but as this place is joined with Kac'c'ha in one compound (see next note) it may mean part of the Travancore hills. Kuñjara-dari is given in the dictionary as the name of a place.

§ This is Kochchi, the modern Cochin, in Travancore. It is not I believe mentioned in the Rámáy. or M.-Bh., except once in the latter book in the account of Sahadeva's conquests in the South (Sabbá-P., xxx. 1176). Both Christians and Jews are said to have settled here early in the Christian era, and they were firmly established here by the 8th century.

|| This is the name of the modern river Chittar in the extreme South (see page 303, note ††), and also of the district near it. It appears, moreover, to be the name of a hill in the extreme South (Bhishma-P., vi. 252). It is also the name of a town in Ceylon, after which the name was extended to the whole island (dictionary). The island seems to be meant by the words Támraḍvaya dvīpa in the M.-Bh. (Sabbá-P., xxx. 1172).

- 30 And next is the outer foot.* The Kámbojas,† and Pah-lavas,‡ and the Baḍavá-mukhas, § and the Sindhus || and Sau-
 31 víras, ¶ the Anartas,  the Vanitá-mukhas, †† the Drávanas, ‡‡ the Sár-gigas, §§ the Súdras, ||| the Karṇa-prádheyas ¶¶

* Váhya-pádas; the right hind foot is meant as is stated expressly in verse 33, but (because perhaps this word is vague) the names that follow are sadly confused and belong to all regions in the west and north-west.

† See page 318, note §; they are out of place here.

§ This should perhaps be connected with Baḍavá, a tirtha apparently in Kashmir (M.-Bh., Vana-P., lxxxii. 5034-42). A river of the same name is mentioned (id., cxxi. 14232), but that seems from its context to be rather in South India. Baḍavá-mukha (which means 'submarine fire') may also mean "having faces like mares"; and a people called Áśva-mukhas are mentioned in Matsya Purāṇa, cxx. 58, as dwelling north of the Himalayas: see also verse 48 below.

 See page 340 note §. The name is derived from an eponymous king Anarta, who was the son of Saryāti one of the sons of Manu Vaivasvata (Hari-V., x. 613 and 642-9).

†† "Those who have faces like women." I have not met this name elsewhere. It seems, however, to be a proper name and not an adjective.

‡‡ This as a name is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere.

§§ Or "and the Argigas or Árgigas," as the text may be read. These names are not in the dictionary and I have not met with them elsewhere. Perhaps the correct reading should be Sáryátas. They were a tribe, so-called from their chief Saryáta the Mánava, who settled down near where the ṛishi C'yavana dwelt, and gave his daughter Su-kanyá to the ṛishi to appease his wrath (Sata-P. Bráh., IV. i. 5). He is called Saryāti in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., cxxi. 10312; and cxxii.) where the same story is told rather differently; and also in the Hari-Vamśa, where he is said to be a son of Manu and progenitor of Anarta and the kings of Anarta (x. 613, and 642-9). From all these passages it appears the Sáryátas were in the West, in Gujarat; and C'yavana as a Bhárgava is always placed in the West, near the mouths of the Narbada and Tapti. But perhaps the most probable reading is Bhárgavas; they were in the West (see page 310, note †).

¶¶ This name is not in the dictionary and I have not found it elsewhere. It can have nothing to do with Karṇa one of the heroes of the M.-Bh., for he and Varvaras,* the Kirátas,† the Páradas,‡ the 32 Páñdyas§ and the Páraśavas,|| the Kalas,¶ the Dhúrtakas, the Haimagirikas,†† the Sindhu-kálaka-reigned in Anga in the East. Prádheya means a descendant of Prádhá, one of Daksha's daughters, and that also is inadmissible. It suggests Rádheya, which was a metonymic of Karṇa, but that is equally unsuitable. It seems therefore the words must be taken as a whole forming one name, and then it suggests comparison with Karṇa-právára which would be the same as Karṇa-právarana (see page 346, note †).

* See page 319, note *. This word is compounded with the preceding name; it hardly seems to be in place here.

† See page 322, note ||; they seem to be out of place here, unless any Kirátas inhabited the southern part of the Aravalli hills or the extreme western part of the Vindhya mountains, and that seems improbable. See also Adhama-kairátas in verse 44 below, and Kirátas are mentioned again in verse 50.

§ These people are out of place here; see page 331, note §; they should be properly in the right flank.

|| I have not met this name elsewhere; but, no doubt, it denotes some people, who claimed descent from Paraśu-Rāma and who would therefore be somewhere on the western coast between Bombay and the Narmadā; see page 310, note †. It is said there was a dynasty of Páraśava kings after the great Paurava line came to an end (Matsya Purāṇa, I 73-76) but it does not appear where.

¶ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not met it elsewhere. It suggests a connexion with the Kálíbalas of canto lvii, verse 49; but Kala also means, "emitting a low or inarticulate sound," and it was an old fable that a people existed, who could not speak articulately, but hissed like serpents, see Mandeville's Travels, chap. xviii. and xix. Kala occurs again in verse 36.

 I have not found this elsewhere as the name of a people. The word however means "a rogue" and may be an adjective to Haima-girikas.

†† The people of Hema-giri. This is not given as the name of a place in the dictionary, but it may be a synonym for Hema-kúṭa or Hema-śringa. It is said in the M.-Bh. the latter is the portion of Himavat from which the Ganges issued formerly (Ādi-P., clxx. 6454-5), and Hiraṇya-śringa is probably the same (Bhīshma-P., vi. 237). Hema-kúṭa was near the rivers Nandá and Apara-nandá and between the sources of the Ganges and Kauśikí (Vana-P., cx. 9968-87); and it is alluded to in other passages but they are not clear (e.g., id., clxxxix. 12917; Bhīshma-P., vi. 198, 202, 236 and 246). The last of

And the Svátis,¶ Visákhá and Maitra are the three corresponding constellations.

34 The hills Maṇi-megha,†† and Kshurádri,‡‡ and Khañjana,§§ these passages says the Guhyakas dwell on Hema-kúṭa. The Matsya Purāṇa says Hema-śringa is south-east of Kailāsa, and the R. Lauhitya, or Brahma-putra, rises at its foot (cix. 10-12); and that two rivers rise in Hema-kúṭa which flow into the eastern and western seas (ibid., 64-5).

* This seems to be erroneous, yet it is not easy to suggest an amendment. The first part, no doubt, refers to the R. Sindhu and the Sindhu people but the latter part appears unintelligible. Perhaps the reading should be Sindhu-kúṭa-suvṛakáḥ or Sindhavás c'a suvṛakáḥ meaning the Sindhus and the Suviras (see page 315, notes * and †); but these two people have been mentioned already in verse 30.

§ The Dráviḍas are often alluded to in the M.-Bh. (e.g., Sabhá-P., xxxiii. 1271; Vana-P., li. 1988; Kārṇa-P., xii. 454; &c.), but are not mentioned in the Rámáy., I believe, except in the geographical canto (xli. 18). They are sometimes closely connected with the Pāṇḍyas (Sabhá-P., xxx. 1174), but the name was applied in a general way to denote the southern branches of the races now classed as Dravidian, and it is the same as Tamil (Caldwell's Grammar of the Dravidian Languages, pp. 12-15). Their territory included the sea coast in early times (Vana-P., cxviii. 10217). It is also said they were kshattriyas and became degraded from the absence of brahmins and the extinction of sacred rites (Anuśās.-P., xxxiii. 2104-5; Manu, x. 43-44).

|| I have not met this name elsewhere. It means "dwelling by the ocean," and is probably an epithet of Dráviḍas, for they bordered on the sea as mentioned in the last note.

¶ The plural seems peculiar.

 Or Ana-rádhá.

†† I have not met this elsewhere. It may be the same as Mt. Maṇi-mat (Droṇa-P., lxxx. 2843); which appears to be also intended in Vana-P., lxxxii. 5043, and if so would denote the range of hills enclosing Kashmir on the south, according to the context. It may also be the same as the "jewelled mountain Su-megha" mentioned in the Rámáy. (Kishk.-K., xliii. 40).

‡‡ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere.

§§ This is not in dictionary as the name of a mountain, and I have not found it elsewhere.

and Asta-giri;* the Aparántika people,† and Haihayas,‡

* This does not appear to be the name of any particular mountains, but rather denoted in a vague way mountains in the west behind which the sun sets. It is mentioned in the Rámáy. as Asta-giri (Kishk.-K., xxxvii. 22), and as Asta-parvata (id., xliii. 54).

‡ The Haihayas were a famous race, the descendants of an eponymous king Haihaya, who is said to have been a grandson or great-grandson of Yadu, the eldest son of Yayāti (Hari-V., xxxiii. 1843-4; and Matsya Purāṇa, xliii. 4-8. Yadu is said to have been king of the north-east region (Hari-V., xxx. 1604, 1618), but the references to the earliest movements of the Haihayas are hardly consistent. Mahish-mat, who was fourth in descent from Haihaya, is said to have founded the city Māhish-matī on the Narmadā (see page 333, note †; and id., xxxiii. 1846-7), and his son Bhadra-sreṇya is said to have reigned in Kāśī or Benares, which the Vītahavya branch of the Haihayas had previously conquered from its king Haryaśva, but Haryaśva's grandson Divodāsa defeated them and regained his capital (M.-Bh., Anuśās.-P., xxx. 1949-62; Hari-V., xxix. 1541-6; and xxxii. 1736-40). The great king Arjuna Kārtavīrya, who was ninth in descent (Hari-V., xxxiii. 1850-90; and Matsya P., xliii. 13-45), reigned in Anūpa and on the Narmadā and had the great conflict with Rāma Jāmadagnya, which ended in the overthrow of the Haihayas (M.-Bh., Vana-P., cxvi. 10189—cxvii. 10204; and Sānti-P., xlix. 1750-70; and pages 333 note *, and 344 note *). The Haihayas and Tāla-jāṅghas in alliance with Śakas, Yavanas, Kāmbojas and Pahlavas are said to have driven Bāhu king of Ayodhyā out of his realm, but his son Sagara drove them out and recovered the kingdom (Vana-P., cvi. 8831-2; and Hari-V., xiii 760—xiv. 733).

The Haihaya race comprised the following tribes, Vīti-hotras (or Vīta-havyas?), Śāryātas, Bhojas, Avantis, Taṇḍīkeras (or Kuṇḍīkeras), and Tāla-jāṅghas; the Bharatas, Sujātyas and Yādavas are added, and the Śūrasenas, Anartas and C'edis also appear to have sprung from them (Hari-V., xxxiv. 1892-6; and Matsya-P., xliii. 46-49). Comparing the territories occupied by these tribes, it appears the Haihaya race dominated nearly all the region south of the Jumna and Aravalli hills as far as the valley of the Tapti inclusive of Gujarat in ancient times (see pages 333 note †, 335 note §, 340 note §, 342 note †, 344 all the notes, 351 note , 352 note *, and 368 note §§); and Cunningham says that two great Haihaya States in later times had their capitals at Manipur in Mahā Kosala (or Chhattisgarh) and at Tripura (or Tewar) on the Narbada (Arch. Surv. Repts., IX. 54-57).

* I have not met this elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary as the name of a people. It may be the same as the Sásikas (M.-Bh., Bhishma-P., ix. 354; perhaps the Súsakas in Vana-P., ccliii. 15257 are the same); or the reading may be Sákalas, the people of Sákala, the capital of Madra (see page 315, note, †).

† This is not in the dictionary and I have not met it elsewhere. It appears to be a proper name and not an adjective.

‡ This is not in the dictionary and I have not found it elsewhere. Perhaps the reading should be Kokanadas, a people in the north-west classed with the Trigartas and Darvas (M.-Bh., Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1026), or Kokarakas who seem to be the same (Bhishma-P., ix. 369).

§ This is given in the dictionary as the name of a people, but I have not met it elsewhere. Perhaps a better reading would be Pañc'odakas or Pañc'-anadas, "the people living beside the R. Pañc'anada," which appears to be the single stream formed by the confluence of the five rivers of the Panjab (M.-Bh., Vana-P., lxxxii. 5025; Bhishma-P., lvi. 2406; and dictionary); but this name seems to be also applied to the five rivers collectively (Vana-P., ccxxi. 14229), and to the country watered by those five rivers (Sabhá-P., xxxi. 1193; Udyoga-P., iii. 82; and xviii. 596-601; Karna-P., xlv. 2100 and 2110; &c.; Hari-V., xcii. 5018; and Rámáy., Kishk.-K., xliii. 21), and to the inhabitants of it (Bhishma-P., lvi. 2406; and Karna-P., xlv. 2086): see also Lassen's map (Ind. Alt.).

|| This is given in the dictionary as the name of a people, but I have not found it elsewhere. Perhaps a better reading would be Vánaras, who are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., ix. 362), or Vandýavas. There was a district called Vandýu or Vándýu, which appears to have been situated in the north-west, and which was famous for its breed of horses (M.-Bh., Bhishma-P., xci. 3974; Droṇa-P., cxxi. 4831; Karna-P., vii. 200; and Rámáy., Ádi-K., vi. 24). It appears to be the modern Bunnu in the north-west of the Panjab.

 This is not in the dictionary, and I have not met with it elsewhere; but Tárákshutí and Tárákshiti are given as the name of a district to the west of Madhya-deśa. There was also a kingdom called Turushka in later times (Arch. Surv. of W. India, Memo. No. 10, p. 7). The Turushkas are the Turks, and their country Turkestan. A people called Tárkshyas are mentioned in M.-Bh., Sabhá-P., li. 1871.

* I have not found this elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary. A place called Anga-loka is assigned to the west in the Rámáy. (Kishk.-K., xliii. 8). and Angas and Anga-lokyas are mentioned to the north of India in the Matsya Purāṇa (cix. 44 and 45).

† This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. A river Sárkarādvatī is mentioned (Bhāgavata Purāṇa-V., xix. 17), but appears to be in the south. A great house-holder and theologian Jana Sárkarākshya is alluded to (C'hándogya-Up.-V., xi. 1). Perhaps the reading may be Sákakas, the people of Sákala the capital of Madra (see page 315, note †).

‡ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. It suggests śāla-veśmakas, "those who live in houses with spacious rooms," and it may be an adjective to Sárkaras. Perhaps we should read Sálvas as the first part of the word (see page 349, note §) but, if so, the latter part seems unrecognizable.

§ I have not met with this elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary. It may be an adjective, "deep-voiced," describing the Phalgunnakas. Perhaps the reading should be Gurjaras. They appear to have been settled in the Panjab or Upper Sindh, and to have been driven out by the Bálas about 500 A.D., and pushed gradually southward, till at length they occupied the country around the peninsula of Kathiawar, thence called Gujarat after them (Cunningham, Arch. Surv. Repts., II 64-72). Or perhaps the reading might be Gurusthala; a river Guru-nadī is mentioned in the west region, but without data to identify it (Hari-V., clxviii. 9516-8).

|| Or better, Phalgunnakas. I have not met with it elsewhere. A similar name Phalgulukas occurs just below.

¶ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not met with it elsewhere. It occurs again in verse 39. A people called Venikas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., li. 2097).

 This resembles Phalgunnakas above. I have not found it elsewhere. A mountain called Phena-giri or Phala-giri is mentioned in the Rámáy. as situated in the west near the mouth of the Indus (Kishk.-K., xliii. 13-17, and Annotations).

†† These are no doubt the same as the Ghorakas mentioned in the M.-Bh., Sabhā-P., li 1870; but I have not found any data to fix their position.

‡‡ I have not met this elsewhere, but it is stated in the dictionary to be the name of a people in Madhya-deśa, and the word is also written Guduha, Gulaha and Guluha.

* This has occurred before in verse 31.

† "The one-eyed." It was an old belief that such people existed. "Men with only one eye in their forehead" are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Sabhā-P., l. 1837); the Cyclopes are famous in Greek and Latin literature; and a one-eyed race is spoken of as dwelling somewhere in the Indian Ocean by Mandeville (Travels, Chap. XIX).

‡ "Those who have hair or manes, like horses." I have met no such name elsewhere, except that the synonymous name Aśva-keśas occurs in the next line of this verse. Neither is it in the dictionary.

§ "The long-necks." I have met no such name elsewhere.

|| This name is the same as the C'ūlikas mentioned in canto lvii verse 40, but the position does not quite agree; these are in the west and the others in the north. A people Vindha-c'ulakas are named in the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 369) and appear to be in the north. A dynasty of kings called C'ūlikas is said to have reigned after the great Paurava line came to an end (Matsya Purāṇa, l. 73-76).

¶ "Those who have hair, or manes, like horses." It is the same as Vāji-keśas mentioned above.

 For Aindra-mūlam read Aindram mūlam. Aindra is the same as Jyeshthā.

†† They are mentioned again in verse 46. They may be a tribe which claimed descent from the rishi Māṇḍavya, to whom Janaka king of Videha is said to have sung a song (M.-Bh., Śānti-P., cclxxvii), and whose hermitage is alluded to, as situated somewhere perhaps between Oudh and North Behar (Udyoga-P., clxxxvii. 7355); but Māṇḍavya-pura is said in the dictionary to be situated on the R. Godavari. A people called Maṇḍikas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., ccliii. 15243). The Vimāṇḍavyas are named in verse 6 above.

‡‡ I have not met this name elsewhere, nor is it in the dictionary; but it suggests Kandahar, and the position agrees. A people C'arma-khaṇḍikas are mentioned in canto lvii. verse 36.

§§ This seems a compound. The first part appears to be the Aśvakas; they are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., ix. 351), and are placed in the north-west and identified with the Aspasii and Assakani by Lassen (Ind. Alt., Map). The latter part however is very doubtful. A people Lalitthas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Droṇa-P., xvii. 692) and appear from the context to have been a north-western race.

* This appears to mean the same people as the Kuṇyākāḡuṇas of the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 360). It seems to be a compound, but the component names are very uncertain. The latter part may be Laḡakas; they are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., l. 2083), though there are no data to identify them; but Laḡaha is given in the dictionary as the name of a people. As regards the first part Kuṇapa and Kunaha are given in the dictionary as the name of a people; and Kulattas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Bhishma-P., ix. 373) and Matsya Purāṇa (cx. 44) as a people to the north of India. A country Kolūka is placed in the west in the Rāmāy., and Kolūta seems to be another name for it (Kishk.-K., xliii. 8, and Annotations). A country Kulūta is also mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Karna-P., xii. 475 and 485).

† I have not met this elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary. It may perhaps mean "those who live apart from women;" but the reading is more probably Strī-rājya. This was the name of a country and people, mentioned in the M.-Bh. and situated apparently north of the Himalayas, near the Hūpas and Taṅgaṇas (Vana-P., li. 1991; and Sānti-P., iv. 114). Strī-loka is mentioned apparently as a place north-west of India in an alternative reading to Rāmāy., Kishk.-K., xliii. 20 (Gorresio's Edition, Annotations).

‡ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. The reading should probably be Bāhlikas or Vāhlikas, see page 311, note *.

§ "The men-lions." I have not met this elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary as the name of a people.

|| This is not in the dictionary and I have not found any river of this name in the north-west. It has been mentioned in verse 36 above.

¶ Valāva-stha; this might also be read as Vala + avasthā. I have not met either word elsewhere. A town or river Balākā is mentioned in the M.-Bh. as situated in North India (Anuśās.-P., xxv. 1706).

 "Those who are firmly attached to the Law"; or perhaps Dharma-buddha, "those who are enlightened in the law." It seems to be an adjective rather than a proper name, and may qualify Alūkas. I have not met with it elsewhere as a proper name, and the nearest resemblance to it is Bāhu-bādha of the Bhishma-P. list (ix. 362); see page 317, note §. The Madhumattas of the same list (ix. 360) are probably the same people.

†† This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. The people intended are no doubt the Ulūkas, and the text should read tatholūkā instead of tathālūkā. For the Ulūkas see page 346, note †.

† For pārśve read paś́ce?

‡ This verse closes with the word bhāḡure; it is not in the dictionary and seems to be erroneous. Should the reading be bhāsure, "brilliant," an epithet to Āśhādhā and Śravaṇā?

§ This mountain is of course constantly mentioned throughout Sanskrit literature, and the references indicate that it was on the north of the middle portion of the Himalaya range. The name is given in modern maps to the range of mountains which is situated immediately north of the Mánasa lakes, and in which the Indus rises.

|| This is given in the dictionary, but I have not met with it elsewhere. It may perhaps refer to Himavat; see canto lvii verse 59, where the range is compared to a bow in shape.

¶ I have not found this elsewhere and it is not in the dictionary as the name of a hill. It may perhaps mean "abounding in wealth" and qualify Himavat.

 These are no doubt the people who dwelt near the Krauñc'a group of mountains. This group is called the son of Maināka, which is called the son of Himavat, and therefore appears to have been a portion of the Maināka mountains in the great Himavat mountain system (Hari-V., xviii. 941-2). It is mentioned in the Rāmāy. as having lake Mánasa on its summit with Maināka lying beyond (Kishk.-K., xlv. 32-37); but in the Megha-Dūta Krauñc'a is placed south of that lake, and there is said to be a pass through it leading to the lake (I. 58 and 59 with commentary). The pass must apparently be the valley of the source of the Sariu or Ghogra, and the Krauñc'a mountains would therefore be the portion of the Himalaya chain bounding Nepal at the extreme north-west.

‡‡ These are mentioned in the dictionary, but I have not found them elsewhere. A people called Varvas are alluded to in the Matsya Purāṇa (cxx. 47).

and the people who are called Kshudra-vīnas,* the Rasālayas,† and the Kaikeyas,‡ the Bhoga-prasthas,§ and the *Yāmuna*s,||

* "Those who have small lutes." This is not in the dictionary and I have not met with it elsewhere. A people called Kshudrakas are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Kārṇa-P., v. 137); they lived in north India and are generally named in conjunction with the Málavas (Sabhá-P., li. 1871; Bhíshma-P., li. 2106; lxxxviii. 3853; Droṇa-P., lxx. 2435), and are said to be the Greek Oxydraci.

† I have not found this elsewhere. It may mean "those who dwell near the river Rasá" which is mentioned in the Ríg-V. (x. 75, 6). I have met with no other allusion to it, but Dr. Muir thinks it is probably an affluent of the Indus (Sansk. Texts, II. 356 and 357).

§ I have not met with this word elsewhere, though it is given in the dictionary as the name of a people. Perhaps the reading should be Bhoja-prastha, as a synonym of Bhoja-nagara, which is mentioned in the M.-Bh. as the capital of king Uśínara or Ushínara, father of king Sivi (Udyoga-P., cxvii), both of whom were famous monarchs and are often alluded to in the M.-Bh. (e.g., Vana-P., cxxxi. 10582-94; cxvii. 13274; Droṇa-P., lviii; and Sánti-P., xxix. 932-7). According to the genealogies given (Hari-V., xxxi. 1674-9; and Matsya Purāṇa, xlviii. 15-21) various Panjab races claimed descent from Uśínara, but the name Uśínaras was especially appropriated to the descendants of Sivi (Vana-P., cxxxi. 10582). The Uśínaras are alluded to occasionally (e.g., Kārṇa-P., v. 137; Aitar. Bráh., viii. 3, 14; and Kaushít. Up., iv. 1), but Sivi or Sibi is the name which is generally used in the M.-Bh. From these passages and others (e.g., Sabhá-P., xxxi. 1189; li. 1870; Vana-P., cxvii. 13249-55; cclxv; cclxx. 15718 and 15743; Bhíshma-P., xviii. 688-90; and li. 2104) it appears the Sivis were grouped with the Trigartas, Madras, and other Panjab nations on one side and with the Kurus, Sárasenas and Matsyas on the other side, that is, with all the nations which surrounded Brahmāvarta; and that their territory was near the Jumna and close to Tri-vishtāpa or Tri-pishtāpa which was part of Brahmāvarta (Vana-P., cxxx. 10556—cxxxi. 10595; with lxxxiii. 6054-5 and 7073-8; and page 290, note ||). The Sivis or Uśínaras therefore appear to have possessed the country at the upper part of the Sarasvatí, Drishad-vatí and Jumna, from Seharanpur to Patiala; with the Ambashthas to the north-west (see page 379 note ‡). In later times they shared the degradation which the brahmins pronounced on the nations of the north-west because of the absence of brahmins among them (Anuśās.-P., xxxiii. 2103).

|| These are mentioned in the Bhíshma-P. list (ix. 358) and were the people who inhabited the Yāmuna hills. The Pāṇḍavas in returning from their visit beyond the Himalayas came to the Yāmuna hills, and then to the Sarasvatī (Vana-P., clxxvii. 12346-62). The hosts collected on the Kauravas' side before the great war overspread all the country from Pañcānada (the Panjab) to Ahic'hatra (see page 353. note *) including the Yāmuna hills (Udyoga-P., xviii. 596-601). Hence it appears these hills were the portion of the Himalayas, in which the Jumna has its sources, and which separate it from the Sutej.

* Dvīpa in this connexion cannot mean any island, and must mean a doāb (see page 364, note †). The Antar-dvīpas then would mean "those who dwell within the doabs." I have not met with this word elsewhere, and here it is probably an adjective to the Trigartas, to whom it is very appropriate.

‡ I have not found this elsewhere, and it is not in the dictionary. The proper reading should no doubt be Āgneyas. They are mentioned in the M.-Bh. (Vana-P., ccliii. 15256). A rishi or man called Āgneya Su-darśana is spoken of who dwelt in Kuru-kshetra (Annās.-P., ii. 102-172); and the Āgneya Salya-kīrtana is alluded to in the same region (Rāmāy., Ayodh.-K., lxxiii. 3). It seems probable therefore that the Āgneyas were a small tribe inhabiting the northern part of Kuru-kshetra.

§ Or perhaps "and the Ardana peoples." I have not met with either name elsewhere, nor are they in the dictionary.

|| These are mentioned in the Matsya Purāṇa (cxx. 58). The synonymous name Baḍavā-mukhas occurs in verse 30 above. It may be noted here that it was an old belief there were people who had heads like dogs, Cynocephali (Pliny, vi. 30; Mandeville's Travels, chap. xviii).

¶ I have not found this elsewhere. It may perhaps mean the people called Vadhras or Badhnas in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 363).

 This is not in the dictionary, but C'ivuka or C'ibuka is given. I have not however met any of these names elsewhere. The word c'ipiṭa means "flat-nosed."

§§ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. It seems to be formed on the same plan as Vāta-dhāna and Yātu-dhāna. It may perhaps mean "those who place their dead in receptacles," yet it seems rather to be a name.

† The Greek Taxila. It is mentioned in the M.-Bh. The name is generally connected with Takshaka king of the Nágas; it is said he killed Arjuna's grandson king Parikshit according to a curse; and that king's son Janamejaya invaded Taksha-sílá and conquered it (Adi-P., iii. 682-3 and 832-4; xl-xliv; and xlix. 1954; l. 1991). It appears however to have been named from the Takkas, whose capital it was, and Cunningham has identified it near the modern Shah-dheri or Dheri Shahan in the Panjab. It was a large and famous city and the Takkas held all the country around (Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 6, 111, 112; XIV. 8). It appears to have contained a great Buddhist university also.

‡ These would be the people of Ambála. This name is a late one. It may probably be derived from the old Ambashṭha, the name of a people often mentioned in the M.-Bh. They are said to have been descendants of king Uśínara and to have been closely related to the Sívís; see page 377, note § (Hari-V., xxxi. 1674-9; Matsya Purāṇa, xlviii. 15-21). They were in the north-west and are generally mentioned along with north-western nations especially the Sívís and Trigartas (M.-Bh., Sabhā-P., xxxi. 1189; Bhīshma-P., xviii. 688-90; cxviii. 5486; cxx. 5649; and Droṇa-P., vii. 183). It seems, very probable therefore that they occupied the country between Ambála, and the Sntlej with the Sívís on their east and south and the Trigartas on their north-west.

¶ This is not in the dictionary, and I have not found it elsewhere. A people called Vepikas are mentioned in M.-Bh., Bhīshma-P., li. 2097.

 I have not met with this elsewhere.

†† These people are mentioned in the Rámáy., as situated in the West (Kishk.-K., xliii. 23, alternative reading; Gorresio's Edition, Annotations). A river Piṅjalá is included in the Bhīshma-P. list (ix. 385). But perhaps Piṅgala is an adjective here, "light brown," and qualifies Húnas; for the Huns appear to have been a light-complexioned people; see note §§ below.

‡‡ I have not met this as a name elsewhere. It may be an adjective, "quarrelsome through pride," and qualify the Húnas.

§§ The Huns. They are mentioned as an outside people to the north along with Cínas, &c., (Vana-P., li. 1991; Bhīshma-P., ix. 373; and Sánti-P., cccxxvii. 12229), but are not often alluded to at first. In the Raghu-Vaṁśa they are placed on the northernmost part of the Indus, and the commentator calls them Mujjanapadākkhyāḥ kṣhattriyaḥ (iv. 67-68). They appear to have been of a light complexion, for their women are pictured as having made their cheeks pale red (pāṇala) by beating them in grief (ibid.). For the Ephthalites or White Huns, see Cunningham's Arch. Surv. Repts., II. 75-79. All the valley of the Upper Sutlej is called Hundes. A people called Hāra-hūṇas are also alluded to in the M.-Bh. as an outside people to the north-west (Sabhā-P., xxxi. 1194; and l. 1844).

* I have not found this elsewhere, but it seems to be the same as the Kokarakas (Bhīṣma-P., ix. 369) and Kokanādas (Sabhā-P., xxvi. 1026), both of whom appear to have been a tribe to the north of the Panjab.

† See page 374, note ††.

‡ I have not met this elsewhere. Perhaps it should be connected with Bhūti-laya, which was a place in the north of the Panjab (Kārṇa-P., xlv. 2062-3).

§ I have not found this elsewhere.

|| This is not in the dictionary and I have not met with it elsewhere.

¶ I have not found this elsewhere; it seems to mean a people who live on a river Yaśo-mati.

 See page 314, note ‡.

†† I have not met this elsewhere and it is not in the dictionary. Certain Khara-patha countries are alluded to in the Matsya Purāṇa (cx. 56); but the name in the text should probably be split up into two names.

‡‡ These people are generally mentioned along with the Trigartas, Mādras and other Panjab nations (Sabhā-P., li. 1870; and Kārṇa-P., v. 137), and the epithet adri-ja, "mountaineer," seems to be applied to them (Droṇa-P., clxi. 7208). They are said to have been descended from king Uśinara, like the Sivis and Ambashthas (Hari-V., xxxi. 1674-8). I have not found any thing more to indicate their position, but judging from the portions of the Panjab occupied by other nations the Yaudheyas may perhaps be placed north of the Mādras near Lahore.

§§ Or Dāsamiyas, as they were also called (Sabhā-P., l. 1825). They were a people in the Panjab; they are called out-castes and are denounced in the Kārṇa-P. of the M.-Bh. like the other Panjab nations (xlv. 2054-6, and 2069; and xlv. 2090), but I have found no data to fix their position.

‡ They are Pūrva-bhādra-padā and Uttara-bhādra-padā.

§ The word Yena must be a mistake, and the name meant should, no doubt, be joined with Kinnara-rājyam. The proper reading may be either Yauna-kinnara-rājyam, or better perhaps, C'ina-kinnara-rājyam. For C'inas, see page 319, note ‡. Yauna appears to be an abbreviated form of Yavana and is rarely met with (see M.-Bh., Śānti-P., ccvii. 7560); the Yavanas were in the north-west; see page 314, note §, yet they are mentioned again in verse 52.

|| The Kinnaras are said in the dictionary to be mythical beings with a human figure and the head of a horse; such creatures have been already alluded to, see Baḍavā-mukhas in verse 30, and Aśva-mukhas in verse 43. They were placed on Mount Gandha-mādana (Vana-P., cxliii. 10964-8), on Mount Mandara (Drona-P., lxxx. 2848-52), and generally in the central region of the Himalayas (Raghu-V., iv. 78); and they are probably meant by the Kiṅkaras in Rāmāy., Kishk.-K., xlv. 13. The Kinnaras were to some extent identified with the Kimpurushas, though both are mentioned separately in the Matsya-Purana, cxx. 48-49. It is stated in the dictionary that this occurred in later times, but the chief of the Kimpurushas is said in the M.-Bh. to have dwelt at Gandha-mādana (Udyoga-P., clvii. 5352) which was the Kinnaras' territory. The Kimpurushas are described as forming a kingdom in the Pāṇḍavas' time and owning the country beyond Sveta-parvata (Sabhā-P., xxvii. 1038-9; Hari-V., xcii. 5013-5; and xcix. 5493-5). They are alluded to as being men of an inferior type (Āitar. Brah., II. i. 8), and as being forest-men (Śānti-P., clxix), and also as skilled in the use of the bow (Udyoga-P., clvii. 5352).

¶ This is, no doubt, a mistake for Paśu-pāla which is stated to be the name of a country and people to the north-east of Madhya-deśa (dict.). They are mentioned along with Kirātas and Tanganas and are placed among the lower Himalayan ranges in the Rāmāy. (Kishk.-K., xlv. 20). Another reading in that passage is Pāśāpālas (see Annotations).

 The text is sa-kic'akam. This seems to be the region of the reeds or bamboos called kic'akas; they are said to line the banks of the R. S'ailodā in the North (Rāmāy., Kishk.-K., xlv. 76-79; M.-Bh., Sabhā-P., li. 1858-9;

 50 the Vana-ráshtrakas,¶ the Sairishthas, the Brahmaand Raghu-V., iv. 73). It is not clear where this country was. The R. Sailodá is placed between Meru and Mandara in the passage from the M.-Bh., and the Khasas, Páradas and Tangaṇas dwelt near it. The R. Sailodaká is said to rise at the foot of Mount Aruṇa, west of Kailása, in the Matsya Purāṇa (cxx. 22-23).

A people called Kic'akas are mentioned in the M.-Bh., as being near the Matsyas, Trigartas and Páñc'álas, i.e., in Madhya-deśa (Ādi-P., clvi. 6084-7), and Kic'aka was the name of the general of Virāṭa king of Matsya (Virāṭa-P., xiv. 376-7). The dictionary states that they were a tribe of the Kekayas (see page 317, note ||) and that Eka-c'akrá was one of their towns; but Eka-c'akrá seems rather to have been in Madhya-deśa (Ādi-P., clvii. 6104-9; clx. 6207; clxiv. 6306; and Vana-P., xi. 388-415), and Arrah in Behar claims to be that town. Perhaps there may be some confusion with Kíkāṭa, the old name of Behar, in this.

* Kásmírakam ráshṭram; it is called Kásmíraka-mandala (M.-Bh., Vana-P., cxxx. 10545-6; and Anuśās.-P., xxv. 1695); see page 323, note ‡. It is quite out of place here.

† This was a country in the north of the Panjab and its capital was Abhisára (M.-Bh., Sabhá-P., xxvi. 1027; and Bhishma-P., ix. 361). It is not often mentioned (Karna-P., xiv. 540-1; and see also perhaps Droṇa-P., xciii. 3379-80), unless the Abhisháhas or Abhisháhas are the same people (Bhishma-P., xviii. 688; cxviii. 5485; Droṇa-P., clxi. 7207). But Abhisára is quite out of place here in the north-eastern region.

‡ This is not in the dictionary. I have met with it elsewhere only in Hari-Vaṁśa, xcix. 5503-4, but there it is a mistake for Darada; compare xcii. 5022-3, and xci. 4966-70. The Daradas are out of place here; see page 318, note, ||. They are mentioned in verse 32 also.

|| This is not in the dictionary, but a people called Kulati are mentioned there. I have not found it elsewhere. The word resembles Kuláta (Karna-P., xii. 475 and 485) and Koláta and Kolúka (Rámáy., Kishk.-K., xliii. 8, and Annotations) which seem to be the modern Kulu near the source of the R. Bias, but it is out of place here. A similar name Kuruṭas is mentioned in verse 51.

¶ The Gandharvas were fabled to be heavenly musicians, but they are also spoken of as a people dwelling beyond lake Mánasa, and it is said Arjuna conquered them and brought back a tribute of fine roan horses (tittirī-kulmásha) from their country (Sabhā-P., xxvii. 1041-3). It is said the Gandharvas are more powerful by night (Ādi-P., clxx. 6504). It is also fabled that the gods obtained Soma from them because they lust after women (Āitar. Brah., I. v. 27); and they were said to possess or inspire people (id. V. v. 29; and Br̥h. Araṇ. Up., III. iii. 1 and vii. 1).

nets; and loss of good is produced by the evil results which spring from these very planets, O lordly bráhmaṇ.

- 64 I have described to thee what is the position of the Tortoise among the constellations. But this community of countries 65 is inauspicious and also auspicious. Therefore a wise man, knowing the constellation of his particular country and the occultation of the planets, should perform a propitiatory rite for himself and observe the popular rumours, O best of men.
66 Bad impulses* both of the gods and of the Daityas and other demons descend from the sky upon the earth; they have been called by sacred writings "popular rumours"† in the world.
67 So a wise man should perform that propitiatory rite; he should not discard the popular rumours. By reason of them 68 the decay of corrupt traditional doctrine‡ befits men. Those rumours may effect the rise of good and the casting off of sins, also the forsaking of wisdom,§ O bráhmaṇ; they cause the 69 loss of goods and other property. Therefore a wise man, being devoted to propitiatory rites and taking an interest in the popular rumours, should have the popular rumours proclaimed 70 and the propitiatory rites performed at the occultations of planets; and he should practise fastings devoid of malice, the praise-worthy laudation of funeral monuments and other objects of veneration, prayer, the homa oblation, and liberality 71 and ablution; he should eschew anger and other passions. And a learned man should be devoid of malice and shew benevolence towards all created things; he should discard evil 72 speech and also outrageous words. And a man should perform the worship of the planets at all occultations. Thus all terrible things which result from the planets and constellations 73 are without exception pacified with regard to self-subdued men.

75 station, each resorting to his own constellation. Thus, in its middle are Agni, the Earth, and the Moon, O bráhmaṇ. In its middle are Aries and the next two constellations;* in its 76 mouth are Gemini and the next constellation; and in the south-east foot Cancer and Leo are situated; and in its side are placed the three signs of the zodiac, Leo, Virgo 77 and Libra: and both Libra and Scorpio are in its southwest foot; and at its hinder part† is stationed Sagittarius 78 along with Scorpio; and in its north-west foot are the three signs Sagittarius and the next two; and Aquarius and 79 Pisces have resorted to its northern side; Pisces and Aries are placed in its north-east foot, O bráhmaṇ.

The countries are placed in the Tortoise, and the constella-80 tions in these countries, O bráhmaṇ, and the signs of the zodiac in the constellations, the planets in the signs of the zodiac.‡ Therefore one should indicate calamity to a country when 81 its particular planets and constellations are occulted. In that event one should bathe and give alms and perform the homa oblation and the rest of the ritual.

This very foot of Viṣṇu, which is in the midst of the planets, is Brahmá.

classification* in these ages, O bráhmaṇ. Four, three and 3 two hundreds and one hundred of autumns men live here in the Kṛita, Tretá and two other ages respectively, O bráhmaṇ.

Hear from me of the continent Bhadrásva, which is situated 4 east of the magnificent eastern mountain Deva-kúṭa.

Both Sveta-parṇa, and Níla, and the lofty mountain Śaivála, 5 Kaurañja, Parṇa-sálágra—these indeed are the five mountain ranges. There are many small mountains besides, which are 6 offshoots of those ranges; the countries there are distinguished by them, they are of various shapes and occur in thousands.
 Moreover they are like white water-lilies and are auspicious 7 with their pure summits. Such-like and diverse also are other hills by hundreds and thousands. The Sítá, the 8 Śaṅkhávatí, the Bhadrá, and the C'akrávartá and many other rivers spread abroad there, bearing down volumes of cold water. In this country mankind are lustrous as shells and 9 like pure gold;† they associate with the celestials; they are holy; their lives last a thousand years; neither inferior nor 10 superior exists among them; they are all of equal appearance; they are endowed naturally with patience and the seven other good qualities.

And there the god Janárdana has a horse's head and four 11 arms; with head, chest, penis, feet and forearms resembling a horse's, and he has three eyes. And thus the objects of sense are perceptible by him, the lord of the world.

12 Now hear from me about the continent Ketumála which is on the west.

13 Viśála, Kambala, Kṛishṇa, Jayanta, Hari-parvata, Viśoka, and Vardhamána—these seven are the mountain ranges.
 There are other hills by thousands, among which a multitude 14 of people dwell. Those people dwell there in hundreds, the Maulis‡ huge in stature, the Śákas, Potas and Karambhakas,§

* C'atur-varṇyo, a masc. abstract noun.

 tains and rivers in these continents are named, and it seems most natural and reasonable to take these words as names.

15 and those who are distinguished by their thumbs,* who drink of the great rivers, the Vaṅkshu, the Śyámá, the Śvakambalá, the Amoghá, the Káminí, the Śyámá, and of others in 16 thousands. And here life is equal to the above-mentioned lives in Bhadrásva. And here the adorable Hari wears a boar's shape and resembles a boar in feet, face, chest, back and 17 flanks. And the lunar constellations are beautiful in that country which enjoys three constellations only. Such is this continent of Ketumála, which I have described to thee, O best of munis.

18 Next I will tell thee of the Northern Kuru; hearken to me now.

There the trees yield sweet fruit, they bear blossoms and 19 fruit in constant succession; and they produce garments and ornaments inside their fruits; verily they bestow all one's 20 desire; they yield fruit according to all one's desire. The ground abounds with precious stones; the air is fragrant and always delightful. Mankind are born there, when they quit 21 the world of the gods. They are born in pairs; the pairs abide an equal time, and are as fond of each other as c'akravákas.
 22 Their stay there is fourteen and a half thousands of years indeed. And C'andra-kánta is the chief of the mountains, 23 and Súra-kánta is the next; they are the two mountain ranges in that continent. And in the midst thereof the great river Bhadrá-somá flows through the earth with a volume of 24 sacred and pure water. And there are other rivers by thousands in that northern continent; and some flow with milk 25 and others flow with ghee. And there are lakes of curdled milk there, and others lie among the various hills. And fruits 26 of various kinds, which taste rather like amṛita, are produced by hundreds and thousands in the woods in those continents.
 And there the adorable Viṣṇu has his head turned to the 27 east and wears a fish's shape. And the lunar constellations are divided† into nine parts, three and three, and the regions of the sky are divided into nine parts, O best of munis.

* Āṅgula-pramukkhá.

† For vībhakto read vībhaktir?

- 28 And in the ocean are the islands C'andra-dvīpa, and next Bhadra-dvīpa; and there also within the ocean is the famous island Puṇya, O great muni.
- 29 Thus I have described this northern continent of Kuru, O brāhman. Hearken while I tell thee of Kim-purusha and the other continents.

 CANTO LX.

The description of the Earth concluded.

Mārkaṇḍeya briefly describes the continents, Kim-purusha Hari-varsha, Ilāvṛita, Rāmyaka and Hiraṇ-maya, and their inhabitants.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 I will tell thee, O brāhman, what the continent Kimpurusha is; where men with real bodies live ten thousand 2 years; where men and women are indeed free from sickness and free from sorrow, and there the fig-tree* is called śhaṇḍa; 3 it grows very high, it is like a grove.† Those men are always drinking the juice of its fruit; and the women are born with lasting youthfulness and are fragrant as the lotus.‡
- 4 Next to Kim-purusha is mentioned Hari-varsha. There 5 mankind are born of the appearance of gold; they all descend there from the world of the gods, and are shaped like the gods in all respects. In Hari-varsha all the men quaff 6 fine sugar-cane juice; neither old age afflicts them there, nor do they suffer from decay at all; and they live in truth for the whole of their time free from sickness.
- 7 I have mentioned Ilāvṛita, which is in the middle, the continent of Meru. The sun does not burn there, nor do men 8 suffer from decay; and they do not grasp at selfish gains.§

* Plaksha.

‡ Utpala-gaṇḍhikāḥ; this word, neuter, also means a species of sandal of the colour of brass and very fragrant.

§ Labhante nātma-lābhān c'a; it seems impossible to take these words with rāsmayaś c'andra-sūryayoḥ.

The rays of the moon and the sun, of the constellations and planets there are the sublime lustre of Meru. Mankind are born there bright as the lotus flower, fragrant as the lotus flower; they feed on the juice of the jambu fruit; and their eyes are as wide as the lotus leaf. And their life there lasts for thirteen thousand years. There is a saucer-shaped expanse in the middle of Meru* in Ilāvṛita; therein is the great mountain Meru; thus is made known Ilāvṛita.

Next I will tell of the continent Ramyaka; hearken thereto. And there the green-leaved Indian fig-tree† is the lofty tree. And the people there pass their time drinking the juice of its fruit. There the men who eat its fruit live for ten thousand years; they are pre-eminent for sexual pleasures and are pure; they are free from old age and ill odours.

And north of that is the continent famed by name as Hiran-maya; where the river Hiran-vatī gleams with abundant lotuses. Mankind there are born with great strength, full of vigour, with large bodies, eminently good, wealthy and benign of look.

The Story of the Brāhman in the Svāroc'isha Manvantara.

Mārkaṇḍeya begins the relation of the Svāroc'isha Manvantara—A young brāhman, by virtue of a magic ointment applied to his feet, visits the Himālaya mountains in half a day—The scenery there described—He wishes to return home, but the magic ointment has been dissolved by the snow, and he loses his way—The Apsaras Varīthini meets him, and falling in love with him begs him for his love—He refuses all her entreaties, and at length appeals to the gārhapatya fire to help him homeward.

Kraushtuki spoke :

Thou hast duly related what thou wast asked, O great muni, namely, the constitution of the earth, ocean, &c., their dimensions, also the planets and their dimensions, and the constitution of the constellations, and the bhúr-loka and the other worlds, and all the Lower Regions. And thou hast declared the Sváyambhuva Manvantara to me, O muni. Next I wish to hear about the Manvantaras which succeeded that, the deities who ruled over the Manvantaras, the ṛishis, and the kings who were their sons.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

I have made known to thee the Manvantara which is called Sváyambhuva. Now next to that hear about another which is named after Svároçisha.*

There lived a certain bráhmaṇ eminent among the dvijas in the town Aruṇáspada on the bank of the Varuṇá; and he surpassed the Ásvins† in beauty of form. He was gentle in disposition, upright in conduct, he had studied all the Vedas and Vedāṅgas; always gracious to guests, he was the refuge of all persons who arrived at night. Now he had this intention, "I will see the earth which has most charming forests and gardens, and is embellished with many a town."

Now a certain guest once arrived at his abode, who was acquainted with the powers of various medicinal herbs, and skilled in the magic art. Now being requested by the former, whose mind was purified by faith, he described to him both countries and charming towns, forests, rivers,‡ and mountains, and holy sanctuaries. Then the former filled with astonishment said to that best of bráhmaṇs, "In that thou hast seen many countries thou art not worn with excessive toil, thou art not very old in life, nor hast thou long passed thy youth; how dost thou roam the earth in a short time, O bráhmaṇ?"

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 12 By the power of spells and medicinal herbs my course is rendered free, O bráhmaṇ ; verily I travel a thousand yojanas in half a day.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 13 Then the bráhmaṇ made him this answer in return with due 14 respect, believing * the word of that wise bráhmaṇ, “ Ador-15 able Sir, give me the favour that comes from the power of 16 spells ; I have an intense desire to see this earth.” And 17 that bráhmaṇ of exalted intellect gave him an ointment 18 for the feet ; and offered careful counsel † regarding the 19 region which the other mentioned.
 20 Now the bráhmaṇ, with his feet anointed by the other,
 21 went to see the Hima-vat range, where many a cascade 22 pours down, O best of dvijas, for he thought, “ Since I can 23 indeed travel a thousand yojanas in half a day, ‡ I will cer-24 tainly return in the other half of it.” He reached the top 25 of Hima-vat, not much fatigued in body, O bráhmaṇ. Then 26 he roamed about there over the surface of the snowy moun-27 tain. Now the ointment on his feet, which was extracted 28 from the choicest medicinal herbs, became washed off by the 29 melting snow which accumulated on his feet. Thereupon 30 he grew slack in his walk, as he wandered about hither and 31 thither. He saw the peaks of the snowy range which most 32 fascinate the mind. Gazing at those peaks which are loved 33 of the Siddhas and Gandharvas, and where the Kin-naras 34 disport themselves, which are delightful here and there for 35 play and pastime among the gods and other heavenly beings, 36 and which were thronged with hundreds of bevy of heavenly 37 Apsaras, the bráhmaṇ, whose hair stood erect with delight, 38 was not satiated, O muni. Filled with rapture he gazed 39 at the mighty mountain range Hima-vat, which in one place
 40 captivated him with the fall of the broken water from a

 24 the cries of peacocks as they danced, and which was thronged here and there with pied-crested cuckoos,* lapwings and other pretty birds, and with cock-kails and humming bees, 25 which captivated the ear, and which was fanned by breezes perfumed with scents from trees that were in full blossom.
 26 And after viewing the mighty mountain Hima-vat as it thus was, the young bráhmaṇ resolved to go homewards, 27 intending to see it again the next day. Now he had lost the ointment from his feet, his step was slow by reason of his 28 long walking, he pondered "What is this? I have acted unwisely, if the ointment is destroyed, having dissolved off me by the melted snow; and this mountain is very difficult 29 of access, and it is a long distance that I have come here. I shall suffer loss in my rites. How shall I kindle a fire and do my dutiful homage and all else that is needful? I have fallen 30 into a terrible strait. 'This is charming! that is charming!'— with my sight so engrossed on this fine mountain, I shall not 31 be satiated even in hundreds of years. The melodious talk of the Kin-naras ravishes my ears all around, and my nose eagerly 32 seeks the scents from the trees that are in full blossom, and the breeze is delightful to the touch, and the fruits are full of juice, and the charming lakes forcibly captivate the mind.
 33 In these circumstances then if I may chance to see some ascetic, he may point out the road for me to go homeward."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

34 The bráhmaṇ, reflecting so, wandered yet on the snowy mountain; having lost the efficacy of the medicinal herbs 35 from his feet, he sank into intense fatigue. And Varúthíní saw him, that goodly muni, as he was wandering; she a choice Apsaras, of high station, the daughter of Múli,† and felt her heart drawn towards that noble bráhman by love, 37 in truth she was immediately filled with affection. She thought, "Who then is this, of most fascinating appearance?

 38 My birth may reach its reward if he do not despise me. How handsome his shape! How graceful his gait! How deep his 39 gaze! Where is there his equal on the earth? I have seen the gods and the Daityas, the Siddhas, the Gandharvas and the Nágas; how is it there is not even one who rivals this 40 high-souled man in figure? If he should fall in love with me as I have fallen in love with him, the store of merit 41 which he has acquired may be attainable by me here. If he should cast a really loving glance on me to-day, then there would be no other woman in the three worlds, who has gained more merit than I."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

42 So reflecting the heavenly maiden, who was sick for love, 43 showed herself in very lovely form. Now on seeing her, gracefully-formed Varúthini, the young bráhman approached 44 with deference and spoke this word—"Who art thou, O maiden bright as the lotus-cup? Or on whom dost thou attend? I am a bráhman, I have come here from the city 45 Aruṇáspada. The ointment on my feet, by the power of which I came here, has perished being dissolved by the melting snow here, O maiden of fascinating glance!"

Varúthini spoke :

46 I am the daughter of Múli, of high station; I am well-known by name as Varúthini. I roam here at all times 47 indeed on this charming mountain. Being such I am compelled by the sight of thee, O bráhman, to declare my love.
 Do thou enjoin me what I must do, I am now submissive to thee."

The bráhman spoke :

48 O benign sweet-smiler, tell me the means whereby I may go to my own home. Loss is befalling us in all our actions, 49 and grievous loss befalls a bráhman in the perpetual and occasional ceremonies. Therefore, O lady, do thou deliver me 50 from the Himálaya mountains. Absence from home is never commended in bráhmans. I have not sinned, O timid one; 51 it was my curiosity to see other countries. All actions and the perpetual and occasional ceremonies are accomplished by a bráhmaṇ when he stays at home; so they are lost if he 52 dwells away from home. Such as thou art, why should I say much. Do then, O illustrious lady, so that I may see my own abode ere the sun sets.

Varúthini spoke :

53 Speak not so, illustrious Sir ; let not that day come for me, in which abandoning me thou shalt resort to thy own abode !
 54 Ah ! since heaven is not more charming, O young bráhmaṇ, 55 then abandoning the gods' abode we will stay here. Sporting with me on this beloved snowy mountain, thou thyself, 56 O my beloved, wilt not remember thy mortal kinsmen. Seized and rendered submissive by love, I too will give thee here garlands, garments, ornaments, loving joys,* and dainty food 57 and unguents. Charming is the song of the Kin-naras, accompanied with the strains of the lute and flute ; the 58 breeze brings gladness to the body ; there is warm food, the water is pure. Longed for by the mind is the bed, fragrant is the ointment. While thou remainest here, illustrious Sir, 59 what more wilt thou have in thine own house ? While thou remainest here, never will old age light on thee. This is the 60 land of the thirty gods ; it gives fullness to youth ! " Having spoken thus, the lotus-eyed maiden, full of affection, exclaiming sweetly " Be thou gracious ! " suddenly embraced him in the eagerness of her mind.

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

 O worthless one ! I have been wooed in one way, thou indeed worlds ; the whole of these three worlds is established on the oblation to the gods, O foolish one !

Varúthini spoke :

- 63 Am I not dear to thee, O bráhmaṇ ? Is not the mountain charming ? Leaving aside the Gandharvas, the Kin-64 naras and the others, whom dost thou desire ? Surely, Sir, thou shalt go away from here to thy own abode without doubt ; enjoy with me for a very little while the delights that are hard to be won.

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 65 I continually desire the gárhapatya and the two other fires ; the fire-place is charming to me ; my dear wife is the goddess who diffuses herself about me.*

Varúthini spoke :

- 66 Compassion, O bráhmaṇ, is the foremost of the eight good qualities of the soul ; why dost thou not display it towards 67 me, O cherisher of truth and righteousness ? Forsaken by thee, I do not live ; and I am full of affection for thee ; I say not this falsely ; be gracious, O gladdener of thy family !

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 68 If thou art in truth full of affection, and dost not speak to me out of mere politeness, then tell me the means by which I may go to my own home.

Varúthini spoke :

- 69 Surely, Sir, thou shalt go away from here to thy own abode without doubt ; enjoy with me for a very little while the delights that are hard to be won !

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 70 Striving after delights is not at all commended in bráhmans, O Varúthini ; † such striving in bráhmans tends to weariness in this world, and yields no fruit after death.

† For Varúthini read Varúthini.

Varúthini spoke :

- 71 If thou savest me who am at the point of death, thou wilt have the fruit of merit itself in the next world, and delights 72 in another life ; and thus the two things will procure thee prosperity in this world ; if thou dost refuse, I shall die and thou wilt incur sin.

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 73 My spiritual preceptors have told me that one should not covet another's wife ; therefore I long not for thee ; bewail thy love or be thou withered !

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 74 Having spoken thus, the illustrious bráhmaṇ, self-controlled and pure, touched water and prostrating himself addressed 75 the gárhapatya fire with this muttered prayer,—“O adorable Gárhapatya fire ! thou art the source of all rites ; from thee and thee alone come the áhavanīya fire and the dakṣhiṇa 76 fire ! By the nourishment given by thee the gods subsist who cause the rain, the crops and other benefits ; by the crops, 77 and them alone, the whole world subsists. Thus this world subsists through thee—by this truth I adjure thee that I may 78 see my home to-day, ere sets the sun ! By this truth I adjure thee that I may behold the sun to-day while I sit in my house, so that I may not neglect the Vedic rites at the proper 79 time ! And that, as the thought of and the longing for another's goods and another's wife have never occurred to me, so this virtue may be perfected in me !”

About the Svárociśha Manvantara.

*The young bráhmaṇ is succoured by Agni and returns home—
A Gandharva Kali sees Varúthini disconsolate and in the guise of the bráhmaṇ gains her love.*

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Now as the young bráhmaṇ thus spoke, the Gárhapatya
2 Fire in sooth appeared at hand upon his body ; and with it surmounting him, he stood amid a circle of light, and illumined that place as if he were Agni in bodily form. Now vehement love seized upon the heavenly maiden as she beheld the bráhmaṇ, who stood there in so glorious a form. Then the young bráhmaṇ,* surmounted by that Fire, immediately started to go as before; and he departed in haste while the slender-shaped heavenly maiden gazed after him as far as her eye could reach, her throat quivering with sighs. Then in one moment from that time the bráhmaṇ reached his own abode and performed all the rites as he had mentioned.

Now she, the beauteous in every limb, remained with soul and mind clinging fast to him, and passed the remainder of the day and also the night in almost ceaseless sighing. And the faultlessly-shaped maiden sighing and crying "Ah! Ah!" continually, reproached herself, "O luckless one that I am!" though her eyes were fascinating. Neither in sport, nor in food, nor yet on delightsome forest, nor on the charming glens did she then fix her joy. She turned her desire towards a pair of billing śakravākas. Forsaken by him the finely-shaped maiden reproached her own youthful womanhood, "How happened it † that I came to this mountain, forcibly attracted by evil fate? And how happened it that he, such a man as that, crossed the range of my eye? If that grand man shall not come to me to-day, verily the intolerable fire of my love for him will consume me away. The song of the cock-koil which was so delightful, this self same song when disunited ‡ from him is burning enough, as it were, to me to-day."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

Thus she poured forth her words, O bráhmaṇ,§ absorbed in love, and her passion for him grew every moment then.

15 Now a Gandharva named Kali was enamoured of her, and 16 had been rejected by her before. He beheld her in that condition. Then he pondered, "Why now is this Varúthiní, who moves as gracefully as an elephant, faded by the hot 17 blast of sighing on this mountain? Has she been wounded by some muni's curse, or has any one treated her with dishonour, since she keeps on bedewing her face copiously with 18 tears?" Then Kali through curiosity meditated on that matter full long, and perceived the truth by the power of 19 concentrated thought. Comprehending that matter of the muni,* Kali pondered again, "I have well accomplished this, 20 by reason of fortunate actions done before. Though often entreated by me who love her, she, this very maiden, rejected 21 me; to-day I shall gain her. She is in love with a human being; by virtue of that fact she shall all-unsuspectingly bestow her love on me while I assume his shape. Why then do I delay?"

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

22 Thereupon he assumed that bráhmaṇ's shape by his inherent power, and moved to where sits Varúthiní disconsolate.
 23 Seeing him, a little wide grew the eyes of the finely-shaped maiden. In her slender form she approached him and ex-24 claimed "Be kind!" again and again; "Bereft of thee I shall assuredly abandon my life; thereby thou wilt incur very sore unrighteousness, and thy sacred ceremonies will 25 come to ruin. Joining with me in this charming glen among the great glens, thou wilt certainly acquire right-26 eousness by saving me. Life verily has some remnant† for me, O wise bráhmaṇ! Sarely thou hast returned for that reason, and bringest gladness to my heart."

Kali spoke:

27 What am I doing? My ceremonies suffer harm while I linger here. Dost thou tell me such a tale as this, O slender-

Varúthini spoke :

- 29 Be kind ! What thou sayest, that I will do for thee without falsehood—I say this without fear—whatever I must do now for thy sake.

Kali spoke :

- 30 Thou must not gaze on me while we meet in union in the wood to-day ; thou must close thine eyes, O lady with beautiful brows, the while thou dost unite with me.

Varúthini spoke :

- 31 So be it as 't is good to thee ! As thou wishest, so let it be ! Truly I must remain submissive to thee now in every way.

CANTO LXIII.

About the Svároç'isha Manvantara.

The Apsaras Varúthini had by the Gandharva Kali a son who was named Sva-roç'is—He delivered a maiden Mano-ramá and her father the Vidyá-dhara Indivara from a curse—and married her.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Then with her he sported on mountain tops, which charmed the heart with their blossoming forests, and midst
2 charming lakes, and in pleasant glens, and on sand-banks in the rivers, and in other delightful places, with merry
3 heart, O bráhmaṇ. With eyes closed fast during their embraces, she thought by reason of his ardour that his form was 4 that of the young bráhmaṇ surmounted with fire. Then after a time she conceived a child, O best of munis ; it took its form from the Gandharva's energy and her dwelling in thought on

- 5 the bráhmaṇ. Then he having soothed Varúthini in her pregnant condition departed, still assuming the bráhmaṇ's shape; she gave him a loving dismissal.
- 6 The child was born a boy, with a splendour like the blazing orb of light, illuminating all the regions of the sky with his own lustre like the sun. Because he shines with his own lustre,* like the sun, the boy became therefore famed by the appropriate name Sva-rocis. And the noble boy grew day by day in age and with a multitude of good qualities, just as the new moon increases with its daily increments; he acquired skill in archery, and learnt the Vedas in due order and the sciences; then the noble boy entered on the period of early manhood.
- 10 Once upon a time, while he who was fascinating in his ways was roaming on Mount Mandara, he saw a lonely maiden helpless with fear on the mountain's slope. Seeing him, at once she uttered the words "Save me!" "Fear not!" he exclaimed to her whose eyes were flooded with fear;
- 12 "Why is this?" said the high-souled youth in heroic speech. Thereupon she gave him this account, in words broken by her palpitating breath.

The maiden spoke :

- 13 I am indeed the daughter of the Vidyá-dhara Indívara, Mano-ramá by name; I was born of Maru-dhanvan's daughter.
- 14 Vibhá-varí daughter of the Vidyá-dhara Mandára was my friend, and Kalá-vatí, the muni Pára's daughter, was my other
- 15 friend. With them I went to Kailása's lofty† slope. There I saw a certain muni; exceedingly thin was his face through
- 16 his austerities, wasted was his neck through hunger, vigourless was he, deep sunk were the pupils of his eyes. I laughed
- 17 at him, and then he grew enraged and cursed me, in a very infirm voice and with his shoot-like lower lip somewhat quivering‡—"Since thou hast laughed at me, O ignoble and
- 18 bad ascetic maiden, a Rákshasa shall therefore overcome thee

in no long time indeed." But when the curse was pronounced, my two friends upbraided the muni—"Fie! through thy want of forbearance, done is thy brāhman-hood, done all thine austerities! Thou art violated through thy wrathfulness, thou art not greatly worn out* through austerities. The dwelling-place of forbearance is verily brāhman-hood; the controlling of wrath is the performance of austerities." Hearing this the sage of measureless glory cursed both of them also,—“Leprosy in the limbs shall light on one of you, and consumption on the other.” Exactly as he said, it befell them both immediately.

So on my track also a mighty Rākshasa is approaching. Dost thou not hear his loud roar, as he thunders forth, even close at hand? To-day is the third day that he quits not my back. Now out of all the multitude of weapons I give thee the weapon which strikes to the heart; save me from this Rākshasa, O high-minded youth! Rudra, who wields the bow Pināka, himself gave it to Sváyambhuva originally; Sváyambhuva gave it to Vāśishṭha the chief of the Siddhas; he moreover gave it to C'itráyudha, my mother's father; he again, as father-in-law, himself gave it to my father as a wedding gift. I, though a maiden, learnt, O hero! from my father how to use this Heart of all weapons, which destroys every foe. This is it, take it quickly, the essence of all weapons, then slay this vile-souled Rākshasa who has come into conflict with sacred spell.†

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

“Yea!” then quoth he, and she sprinkling water on it gave him the Heart of weapons together with the spell for stopping its secret virtue.

In this interval appeared that Rākshasa. Then with a appalling aspect, and roaring with a loud roar, he came hastily on. He looked at that demon who was exclaiming—“Overpowered by me, to what dost thou resort for deliverance? Come

- 32 Seeing him at hand, Sva-roṣis thought, “Let him seize her, so will the great muni’s word become true with regard to her.”
- 33 The Rákshasa approaching with haste seized the maiden of beauteous waist, as she was piteously bewailing, “Save me, 34 Save me !” Then Sva-roṣis enraged looked at the active and most terrible weapon, and plunging it into that Rákshasa 35 looked on it with unwinking eyes. Vanquished thereby * the night-stalking demon then quitted her and said—“Be gracious !
36 let the weapon be kept in peace, and hearken ! I have been delivered by thee, O most glorious hero ! from a very grievous curse, which was inflicted by wise and exceedingly fierce 37 Brahma-mitra. It is a benefit (none other greater can I receive from thee, O illustrious hero !), whereby I have been delivered from a great and most sore curse.”

Sva-roṣis spoke :

- 38 Why wert thou cursed formerly by the high-souled muni
Brahma-mitra, and what kind of curse was imprecated on thee ?

The Rákshasa spoke :

- 39 The bráhmaṇ Brahma-mitra had mastered the thirteen sections of the Atharva Veda, and had just studied the Āyur-40 veda which is divided into eight parts. And I was well known by the name Indivara ; I was the father of this maiden.
I was the son of the swordsman Nala-nábha king of the 41 Vidyá-dharas. And at first I besought the muni Brahma-mitra, “Deign, adorable Sir !† to communicate to me the 42 whole of the Āyur-veda.” But though entreated often by me who remained bent with respect, he did not bestow on me the 43 science of the Āyur-veda, O hero : then indeed I gained the science of the Āyur-veda, as he was communicating it to his disciples, by rendering myself invisible ‡, O sinless man. § 44 Now when the science was gained after a space of eight months, I gave way to excessive and repeated fits of laughter 45 out of my great delight. Recognizing me by the laughter, the muni, enraged and with quivering neck spoke thus to 46 me in harsh words—"Since thou in invisible form, like a Rákshasa, * hast snatched the science from me, O evil-minded 47 one, and despising me hast indulged in laughter ; therefore thou shalt be assuredly cast out as a terrible Rákshasa by 48 my curse, O wicked one, after seven nights." On his uttering this, I propitiated him by prostrating myself before him and by other acts of deference ; the bráhmaṇ with his mind 49 immediately softened, said to me again—"What I have uttered will assuredly come to pass, O Gandharva ; it can not happen otherwise ; but after becoming a Rákshasa, thou 50 shalt regain thy own form, when with memory dead and in anger thou shalt wish to devour thy own child. Thou shalt be turned into a night-stalking demon ; when smarting with 51 the fire of thy child's weapon, thou shalt again obtain thy own consciousness, and recover thy own body, and likewise thy 52 own station in the Gandharva world." Since such I am and since I have been delivered by thee, O illustrious hero, from this most fearful demon-condition, therefore perform my re-53 quest. This maiden give I thee as wife, accept her ; and take, O high-minded man, the whole of the Ayur-veda with its eight parts, which I acquired from beside that muni.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

54 Having so spoken he, gleaming in heavenly raiment, bedecked with garlands and ornaments, and bearing his pris-55 tine heavenly body, bestowed the science. After bestowing the science, he next proceeded to give his daughter. Then the maiden spoke to her father who had regained his own form, 56 "Although love † has sprung up exceedingly with me, even at first sight, for this high-souled man, who is especially my 57 benefactor, O father ; yet this maiden is my friend and that one al-

I am and since those two maidens are afflicted with pain for my sake, O father, I will likewise remain in their pain, burnt with the fire of their grief."

Sva-rocís spoke:

- 60 By the favour of the Ayur-veda I will make thy two friends fresh again, removing thy great grief, O maiden with beautiful waist.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 61 Then Sva-rocís married that beauteous-eyed maiden, whom her father himself gave, according to the rites on that mountain.
62 And having comforted * the proud maiden then given away, the Gandharva departed then to his own city by a heavenly course.
63 And then Sva-roc'is also, accompanied by the slender maiden, went to that garden, where the pair of maidens dwelt speechless 64 and diseased † through that curse. Then unconquered Sva-rocís, knowing their condition accurately, brought them both back to a healthy body by means of medicines and po-65 tions which cure disease. Then the two maidens, most resplendent, freed from disease, beautiful, rendered that mountain more luminous ‡ than the regions of the sky by their own beauty.

About the Svároç'isha Manvantara.

Sva-roç'is had three sons whom he settled in separate kingdoms, Vijaya in a city Vijaya in Kâma-rûpa, Meru-nanda in Nanda-varî in the North, and Prabhâva in Tâla in the South.—One day he met the goddess of a forest, and had by her a son Dyuti-mat Svároç'isha, who became a Manu.—Sva-roç'is, being again admonished by a conversation between two ducks, gives himself up to a religious life and dies.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

human form; how shall there be union between such as me and thee?

The doe spoke:

- 20 If thy mind has any regard for me, do thou embrace me; or if thou dost think good, I will do as thou desirest. I shall be supremely honoured by thee, Sir, such as thou art.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 21 Sva-rocis then embraced the doe; and as soon as he em-22 braced her, she assumed a heavenly body. Then filled with astonishment said he, "Who art thou?" And she told him this story in words rendered slow by love and modesty.—
23 "I have been besought by the gods, I the goddess of this forest, with the demand that 'Verily a Manu must be begotten 24 of me by thee.' O magnanimous man! Beget that son, who shall guard the terrestrial world, of me who am full of love. I speak to thee according to the gods' * behest!"

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 25 Forthwith he begat in her a son marked with every aus-
26 picious mark, full of energy like unto himself. And as soon as he was born, heavenly instruments of music sounded forth, the Gandharva princes sang, and bands of Apsarases danced;
27 the celestial elephants bedewed him with drops of water, and the fishis rich in austerities and the gods scattered also 28 a shower of flowers around. Beholding his splendour his father himself bestowed on him the name Dyuti-mat, since the 29 regions of the sky were illuminated by his splendour. The boy named Dyuti-mat possessed great strength and valour; since he was son of Sva-rocis, he became known as Svároçisha.
30 Sva-rocis also once, while roaming by a charming mountain 31 cascade, saw a duck attended by his mate. He said then to his mate, who was full of continuous longings, — "Restrain 32 thyself, I have played with thee full long. What dost thou need with pleasures at all times? Old age has fallen on us, the time to relinquish them has come to me and thee also, O water-roamer !”

* For davánám read devánám.

The female duck replied :

- 33 What time is unfit for pleasures ? The world is all composed of pleasures. Bráhmans with souls subdued perform sacri-34 fices in order to get pleasures. Moreover people of discrimination, being eager for pleasures experienced and not yet experienced, both give alms and perform the full round of 35 righteous acts. Why then dost thou not wish for pleasures ? Pleasure is the reward of effort among men who have discrimination and among brute animals, how much more among those who have subdued their souls ?

The duck spoke :

- 36 The mind of those who are not attached to pleasures is with the Supreme Soul. And when will it be so among those 37 who have contracted attachments towards relatives ? Creatures perish when attached to son, friend and wife, just as 38 aged wild elephants when sunk in lake or mire or sea. Or dost thou not see, lady, how Sva-roéis, in whom attachments have grown up and who has been devoted to his lusts from his boyhood, has sunk in the watery mire of affection ?
39 Sva-roéis' mind was exceedingly sunk in his wives in his youth, now in his sons and grandsons ; whence will it obtain 40 deliverance ? I am not the equal of Sva-roéis, nor am I one to be distressed by females, O water-roamer ! I possess also discrimination in pleasures, and I have desisted therefrom now.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 41 Sva-roéis hearing this speech from a bird felt disturbed in mind ; taking his wives he departed to another grove to practice 42 austerities. After performing severe austerities there with his wives, he, lofty in mind, reached the pure worlds with every stain removed.

CANTO LXVII.

The Story of Sváro'isha concluded.

Márkaṇḍeya mentions the gods, ṛishis and kings in the Sváro'isha Manvantara.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Then the adorable god made the Prajapati named Sváro-císha Dyuti-mat a Manu. Listen to his Manv-antara ; who
- 2 were the gods during that period, who were the munis and their sons, who were the princes, listen while I tell of them, O Kraushṭuki.
- 3 The gods in that period were the Párávatas and also the Tushitas. O bráhmaṇ ; and in Svárocísha's period the
- 4 Indra was famed as Vipráś-śit. Urja, Tamba and Práṇa, Dattoli and Ṛishabhā, Nisícara and Cárva-vírat were these seven
- 5 ṛishis in that period. And seven sons had that high souled Manu, C'aitra, Kim-purusha, &c., very valiant, guardians of
- 6 the earth. So long as his Manv-antara lasted, all this earth was enjoyed among the outspreadings of his family. That was the second Manv-antara.
- 7 Now the man who hears of Sva-rocí's deeds and Svárocísha's birth, and believes them, is delivered from his sins.

CANTO LXVIII.

*A description of the Nidhis.

Márkaṇḍeya tells of the knowledge called Padmíní, of the eight Nidhis connected with it, and of the influences which they exercise over men.

Kraushṭuki spoke :

- 1 Adorable Sir ! thou hast related it all fully to me, both Sva-rocí's deeds and Svárocísha's birth. Now tell me at

*These are demi-gods who preside over and influence men's propensities, pursuits, pleasures, tastes, &c.

2 length about the knowledge named Padminí which compasses all pleasures, and about the Nidhis who are allied thereto, 3 and about the nature of the eight Nidhis who exist, and the composition of their wealth. I desire to hear it expounded by thee thoroughly, O guru !

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

4 The knowledge which is named Padminí has Lakshmi for its deity, and the Nidhis for its supporters. Listen while I 5 tell thee of it. The Nidhis therein are Padma and Mahápadma, and Makara, and Kaśhapa, Mukunda and Nandaka, Níla, and Śaṅkha is the eighth Nidhi. These live in real 6 good-fortune* ; verily perfection springs from them. These eight Nidhis indeed have been proclaimed to thee, O Kraush-7 ũuki†. By means of the gods' favour and by attendance on good men a man's wealth is always watched over by them, 8 O muni. Listen while I tell thee what their nature is like.

First, the Nidhi named Padma belongs, O bráhmaṇ, to 9 Maya,‡ to his son, and to the sons and grandsons of his son perpetually. And a man dominated thereby may become the 10 perfection of politeness, since this Nidhi is supported by goodness, yields great enjoyment and is sincere. And he amasses 11 immense quantities of gold, silver, copper and other metals, and buys and sells them ; he also makes sacrifices, and be-12 stows the sacred fee ; and he causes a palace to be built and temples for the gods, applying his mind thereto.

And another Nidhi who is supported by goodness is 13 known as Mahá-padma. He has goodness for his chief quality.
And a man dominated thereby amasses rubies and other gems, 14 pearls and coral, and buys and sells them ; and he gives to those whose disposition is towards religious devotion, and 15 has dwellings constructed for them ; and he himself develops into that disposition. And from him are born others of simi-

16 lar disposition in the descent of sons and grandsons. This Nidhi comes only from prior good-fortune *, and does not depart for seven generations.

The Nidhi who is composed of darkness † is named 17 Makara. And a man on whom he looks ‡ is indeed born characterized chiefly by ignorance, though good in disposi-18 tion. He gathers together arrows, swords, spears and bows, and shields and rope, and attains to friendship with kings;
 and he gives to kings who occupy themselves with heroic 19 deeds, and to those whom they esteem; and he finds pleasure in buying and selling weapons and in nothing else.
 This Nidhi belongs to a man singly, and does not descend to 20 his progeny. Such a man may meet § death for the sake of wealth at the hands of robbers and also in battle.

And the man on whom the Nidhi, who is called Kaśhapa, 21 casts his eye is dominated by ignorance, because that Nidhi is characterized by darkness; and he performs all the rules 22 of life || along with men who have acquired merit, and makes all those rules consist in mere acts; he confides in no one.
 23 Just as a tortoise draws all its limbs in, so drawing in all his thoughts while unharmed he remains with diffuse mind. ¶
 He gives not nor does he enjoy, being afraid of destruction 24 thereby; he makes his resting-place on the earth. That Nidhi also is limited to men singly.

And another Nidhi, who is named Mukunda, is composed 25 of the quality of passion.  The man on whom he looks becomes of the same quality, O bráhmaṇ. He gathers together lutes, flutes and drums, and any musical instrument of per-26 cussion; he bestows wealth on singers and dancers, and on minstrels, bards, sycophants and those who are skilled in 27 drama; he bestows pleasures on them day and night, and enjoys life along with those companions, O bráhmaṇ; and he finds no delight in women of loose character, nor with other 28 folk of that kind. He forms a single union, the man to whom this Nidhi resorts. —

And composed of passion and darkness is another great 29 Nidhi called Nanda. The man on whom he looks attains to eminent firmness.* He gathers together all kinds of miner-30 als and precious stones and trade-wares,† grain and other articles, and also buys and sells the same; he is the support 31 of his own family and of each visitor and guest; he does not brook disrespectful language although it be very slight,
 O great muni! and when praised he entertains strong affec-32 tion and proffers it; and whatever object of desire he wants, he has recourse to tenderness to obtain it. He has many 33 wives, who are prolific and very beautiful to his delight. And the Nidhi Nanda passes down to seven generations, and when strongly developed passes on to the next descendant with an 34 eighth portion, O best of men! and he bestows length of life on all men. Nanda verily provides support to kinsmen 35 indeed, and to those guests who have arrived from afar; and he is not held in honour in the next world; affection does not belong to him, but is born among those who dwell together; 36 he causes laxity among those who were former friends, and affection with others.

Moreover the great Nidhi who contains goodness and 37 passion is termed Līla.‡ A man united with him may become of that disposition. He leads a man to collect clothing, cotton 38 cloth, grain and other fruit and flowers, also pearls, coral, and shells, and small shells and other similar things, timber and other materials and whatever else is produced in water, 39 O muni; he leads him to buy and sell other things. In nothing else does his mind delight; and he constructs ponds

* Or solidity: stambha.

40 and tanks and places for pleasure; and such a man makes embankments across rivers and plants trees; and after enjoying unguents, flowers and other objects of delight he is 41 born again. And this Nidhi named Nīla persists for three generations.

And composed of passion and darkness is another Nidhi 42 who is named Śaṅkha. And the man who is lord of this Nidhi is led by him to possess the same qualities, O brāhman.
 He exists in a man singly, and does not pass on to another 43 generation. Listen, O Krauṣṭuki, to the character of a man who possesses the Nidhi Śaṅkha. It is when quite alone that he enjoys food and clothing such as he himself has made; 44 his family eat wretched food and wear no bright clothing; he makes no gift to friend, wife, brother, son, daughter-in-45 law and other relatives. Always intent on his own nourishment is the man who possesses Śaṅkha.

Thus these Nidhis have been described, the deities of wealth 46 among men. When their looks are blended, the blended Nidhis produce results according to their natures, just as each nature described above springs indeed from the aspect of a particular Nidhi. And in sovereignty over them all sits Lakṣmī, who is this knowledge called Padminī of the dvijas.

CANTO LXIX.

About the Auttāna Manv-antara.*

King Uttama banished his queen to a forest because of her persistent unloving behaviour.—A brāhman whose wife had been carried off invokes the king's help to recover her.—The king in searching for her reaches a muni's hermitage, and is censured by the muni for his conduct to the queen.

Krauṣṭuki spoke :

1. O brāhman, thou hast described to me the Svárociṣha

* This should be Auttama; see canto liii, verse 7, and lxxii, verse 39. It seems to be a mistake caused by the fact that Uttama was son of Uttāna-pāda, see verse 3. It occurs in the next canto, but is corrected in canto lxxi.

- 2 manv-antara at length and also the eight Nidhis, whom I asked about. Thou didst tell me of the Sváyambhuva manvantara before that. Tell me of the third manv-antara which is named after Uttama.*

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 3 There was a son of Uttána-páda named Uttama, son of 4 Su-rucí,† famous, great in strength and valour, and righteous of soul, and magnanimous, a monarch rich in valour. Excell-5 ing all created beings he shone in valour like the sun. He was the same both to foe and friend, to his city and to his son, being one who understood righteousness ; and he was like Yama to the wicked, and like Soma to the good, O great muni !
6 A knower of righteousness, Uttána-páda's son Uttama married a maiden of Babhru's race named Bahulá, as supreme 7 Indra married famous Śáci. His mind was always exceedingly affectionate to her, O noble bráhmaṇ,‡ just as is the moon's 8 mind which has fixed its abode in Rohiṇí. Verily his mind felt no attachment to any other object ; in sleep also that king's mind rested on her. And the king at the very sight 9 of her, who was most beautiful in every limb, was continually touching her body, and at the touch of her body he became 10 one with her. § The king's words, although kindly, caused annoyance to her ears, and she deemed his special respect as 11 humiliation from him. She contemned a garland when given by him, and his beautiful ornaments ;—and she arose as if pained in body when he drank the choice nectar of her lips ; 12 and only a moment did the king hold her by the hand when he enjoyed her. She ate very little food, O bráhmaṇ, and 13 that with no great delight. Thus she was not favourable to the magnanimous king who was favourable to her ; yet more abundant and excessive love did the king show.
14 Now once the king, when engaged in drinking, respectfully caused that wilful queen to hold a drinking cup which 15 had been cleansed with wine, he being then surrounded with accomplished attendants* who were melodious in their singing, and who were assiduously singing and chanting while kings 16 looked on; but she does not wish to take that cup, turning her face away from it, in the sight of the kings. Thereat 17 the king was enraged. Breathing hard like a serpent, when set at nought by his dear queen, as if a husband not dear 18 to her, he called the door-keeper and said,—“O door-keeper!

 Take this lady of evil heart to a desolate forest and abandon her forthwith! Deliberate thou not on this my command!”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

19 Thereupon the door-keeper, deeming the king's word was not to be questioned, mounted the beautiful-browed lady in a 20 chariot and left her in a forest. And she, when abandoned thus by the king in the forest and being away from his sight, 21 held he had done her the greatest favour. And king Auttána-pádi, with soul and mind burning with the anguish of love 22 for her, took no other wife. He remembered her who was beauteous in every limb, day and night bereft of ease, and ruled his kingdom, governing his people righteously.
 23 While he ruled his people, as a father his own children, a certain bráhmaṇ suffering in mind arrived and spoke thus—

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

24 O Mahá-rája! in grievous suffering am I; hearken while I speak. Men's deliverance from pain comes from no where 25 but the king! Some one carried off my wife by night while I slept, without unlocking the house door. Deign to bring her back to me.

The king spoke :

26 Knowest thou not, O bráhmaṇ, who carried her off or where has she been taken? With whom shall I strive in fight? or whence shall I bring her back?

* Vāra-mukhyaiḥ; the dictionary gives only the fem., vāra-mukhyá, “a royal courtesan.”

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 27 While I slept just as I was, with the door fastened, O king, why and by whom my wife was carried off—this thou, Sir, 28 knowest. Thou art our guardian, O king, whose due is the levy of a sixth part of our wealth.* Therefore men sleep at night, freed from anxiety about justice.

The king spoke :

- 29 I have not seen thy wife. Tell me what is she like in body, and what is her age; and of what disposition is the bráhmaṇ lady ?

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 30 Sharp-eyed is she, very tall, short-armed, thin-faced, ungainly in form, O king. I defame her not by this description;
31 very harsh in speech, and ungentle is she in disposition,
O king—thus I have described my wife; she is a do-nothing, 32 unpleasant in look, and she has slightly passed early womanhood, O king. Such is my wife in form; true is this I have spoken.

The king spoke :

- 33 Enough hast thou had of her, O bráhmaṇ. I will give thee another wife. An excellent wife tends to one's happiness, 34 such a one as that is verily a source of pain. Bodily beauty consists in healthfulness,† O bráhmaṇ, its cause is a noble disposition. She who has neither beauty nor good disposition should be abandoned for that very reason.

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 35 "A wife must be guarded," O king—such is our highest divine teaching. When a wife is guarded, the offspring is guar-36 ded. For the Soul ‡ is born in her, hence she must be guarded, O king. When the offspring is guarded, the Soul is guarded.
37 When she is not guarded, there will arise confusion among the castes; that will hurl one's forefathers down from 38 Svarga, O king. And I may have loss of righteousness from day to-day, while I remain wifeless; and that, through the destruction of the perpetual ceremonies, will tend to my downfall. And in her will be my offspring, O king. She will give thee the sixth part; she will be a cause of righteousness. For that reason I have declared this to thee. Bring back my wife who has been carried off, my lord, since your honour is placed supreme for our protection.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

The king, on hearing him so speak, took thought, and mounted his great chariot which was furnished with every useful requisite. Hither and thither he wandered over the earth with that *bráhma*n, and saw a fine hermitage of ascetics in a large forest; and alighting there he entered and saw a muni, seated on a silken cushion, and blazing as it were with splendour. Seeing the king arrived, he rose in haste, and welcoming him with full respect commanded his disciple to bring the arghya offering. His disciple said to him quietly —“Why should the arghya be given to him, O muni? Think well of it and command me, for I carry out thy command.” Then the *bráhma*n being acquainted with the king’s history, with self-possession did him respect in conversation and by giving him a seat.

The ṛishi spoke :

Why hast thou come here, Sir; and what dost thou wish to do? I know thee, O king, to be Uttána-páda’s son Uttama.

The king spoke :

A *bráhma*n’s wife was carried off from his house by some one whose person is unknown, O muni: to seek her I have come here. Deign, adorable Sir, in compassion to tell me, who have reached thy house and am prostrate before thee, what I ask thee!

The ṛishi spoke :

Ask me, O king, without fear what thou must ask. I will tell thee truthfully if I ought to tell it thee.

The king spoke :

Why is the arghya offering kept back, which thou wast prepared to give me on first seeing me on my arrival at thy house, O muni?

The rishi spoke :

- 52 When through agitation at the sight of thee, O king, I commanded this disciple to give it, then I was cautioned by him.
 53 Through my favour he knows the future in this world, as 54 I know both the past and the present thoroughly. When he said, "Consider and give thy order," then I also knew it; hence I did not give thee the arghya according to precept.
 55 Truly O king, thou art worthy of the arghya and thou belongest to the race of Sváyambhuva; nevertheless we deem thee Uttama not fit for the arghya.

The king spoke :

- 56 What then have I done, O bráhmaṇ, whether wittingly or unwittingly, that arriving after a long time I am not worthy of the arghya from thee?

The rishi spoke :

- 57 Hast thou forgotten, both that thou didst abandon thy wife in the forest, and that along with her thou didst abandon 58 all thy righteousness, O king. Through neglect of religious acts a man becomes unfit to be touched by his adherents, like one on whom ordure and urine have been showered;* thou 59 hast neglected an act of permanent observance. Just as a complaisant wife must bear with her husband though he be of bad disposition, so a wife although of bad disposition must be cherished by her husband, O king. Ungracious indeed was that bráhmaṇ's wife who was carried off; nevertheless he, being a lover of righteousness, very much excels † 60 thee, O king. Thou establishest other men in their proper ways of righteousness when they swerve therefrom, O king. What other person will establish thee when thou swervest from thy righteousness?

* Vārshikī, a noun, not given in the dictionary; it must apparently mean "a shower."

† Ud-yāti-tarām. The only meanings assigned to ud-yā in the dictionary are, "to go up or out, to rise, originate."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 62 A gazing-stock was the king when thus addressed by the wise rishi; and saying "So be it!" he enquired about the 63 bráhmaṇ's wife who had been carried off—"Adorable Sir, who has taken away the bráhmaṇ's wife, or where is she?
Thou Sir knowest unerringly the past and the future in this world."

The rishi spoke:

- 64 A Rákshasa named Valáka, son of Adri, has captured her,
and thou shalt see her now in Utpalávataka forest, O king.
65 Go, unite the bráhmaṇ with his wife quickly. Let him not become a seat of sin as thou art day after day.

CANTO LXX.

*About the Auttána * Manv-antara*

King Uttama finds the bráhmaṇ's wife in the forest and is courteously received by the Rákshasa, who says he carried her off in order to impair the bráhmaṇ's religious merit.—At the king's request the Rákshasa consumes her evil disposition and restores her to her husband.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 1 Then the king prostrated himself before the great muni, and mounted his chariot, and went to the forest Utpalávata 2 mentioned by him. And the king saw † the bráhmaṇ's wife, in appearance such as her husband described her, eating the 3 fruit of the bel tree; ‡ and asked—"How didst thou come to this forest, lady? tell me plainly; art thou the wife of Sū-sarman Vaiśāli? *

The brāhman woman spoke :

- 4 I am daughter of the brāhman Ati-rātra, who dwells in the forest, and wife of Viśāla's son whose name thou hast uttered.
5 Being such, I was carried off by the evil-minded Rākshasa
Valāka, while asleep at the extremity of my house, and parted 6 from my brothers and mother. May that Rākshasa become ashes, by whom I have been parted thus from my mother,

7 Bringing me to this very dense forest he has cast me off.
I know not what is the reason he neither has intercourse with me nor devours me.

The king spoke :

- 8 Perchance thou knowest, where has the Rākshasa gone after leaving thee? I have been sent here by thy husband indeed, O brāhman lady.

The brāhman woman spoke :

- 9 The night-stalking demon stands at the edge of this very forest. Enter and see him, Sir, if thou dost not fear him.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 10 Then he entered by the path that she showed, and saw the 11 Rākshasa attended by his retinue. Then the Rākshasa hurry-ing, the moment he saw him, touching the earth with his head from afar indeed, approached his feet.

The Rākshasa spoke :

- 12 Thou hast done me great favour in that thou hast come to my abode here. Give me thy command. What shall I do, 13 such as I am here? I dwell within thy country. Accept thou this arghya offering, and let this seat be placed for thee. We for the plant itself. It has numerous other vernacular names, and Roxburgh says bela is one of them, but this seems doubtful.

* Son of Viśāla; see next verse.

The king spoke :

- 14 Thou hast done everything, even every rite due to a guest.*
 Why hast thou brought the bráhmaṇ's wife here, O night-15 stalker ? She is not comely ; there are others comely, if thou didst carry her off for a wife : if to devour her, why hast thou not eaten her ? Tell me this.

The Rákshasa spoke :

- 16 We do not feed on men ; such are other Rákshasas. But we eat the fruit that springs from a good deed, O king ; and we 17 consume the natural disposition of men and women, being treated with disrespect, and yet honoured ; we are not eaters 18 of living creatures. When we have eaten the patience of men, they become enraged ; and when we have eaten their 19 evil nature, they also become virtuous. We have Rákshasís who are fascinating, rivalling the Apsarases in beauty, O king, while they are with us, how should we delight in the females of mankind ?

The king spoke :

- 20 If she is not for sensual enjoyment nor for food, O night-roamer, why then didst thou enter the bráhmaṇ's house and carry her off ?

The Rákshasa spoke :

- 21 That excellent bráhmaṇ, learned in spells, keeps on expelling me, when I go to sacrifice after sacrifice, by uttering spells that 22 destroy Rákshasas, O king. By reason of his spells and ex-pulsive rites we were a-hungered ; where shall we go ? that 23 bráhmaṇ† is the priest at every sacrifice. Therefore we

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

27 While he thus thought, O muni, the Rákshasa spoke again to the king, bowing in obeisance and placing his hands together respectfully—"O king, favour with thy command 28 me, thy servant, prostrate before thee*, a dweller within thy realm."

The king spoke :

29 Since thou hast said, O night-roamer—"We feed on a person's disposition," hear then from me what deed we solicit.
 30 Do thou consume this bráhmaṇ woman's evil disposition this day; since she will have her evil disposition eaten by thee,
 31 she may then become good in behaviour. Take her to his house whose wife she is, O night-roamer. When this is done, thou hast done all for me who am come as a guest to thy house.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

32 Thereupon the Rákshasa, entering within her though his own faculty of illusion, devoured her evil disposition by his

The Rákshasa spoke:

- 37 I will cause her to reach her husband's house at thy command, my lord. Enjoin me whatever else should be done for thee, O king!

The king spoke:

- 38 When this is done, thou hast done all for me, O night-roamer. And thou must come, O hero, at the time of action when I recall thee to mind.†

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 39 "So be it!" then quoth the Rákshasa, and taking the bráhmaṇ woman conveyed her, purified then by the removal of her evil disposition, to her husband's house.

CANTO LXXI.

About the Uttama Manv-antara.

King Uttama visits the rishi, learns his queen has been taken to Pátála by a Nága king, who then curses his daughter for hiding the queen from him—and he is also told his unhappy married life was caused by adverse planetary influence.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 1 Now the king, after despatching the woman to her husband's house, sighed and thought, "What good deed may there be 2 in this? The high-minded muni declared I was wretched because of my unfitness for the arghya offering; and this night-roaming demon spoke of 'impaired condition' with 3 reference to the bráhmaṇ. Being such, what shall I do, for I abandoned her, my wife? Or shall I enquire of that best of munis who has the eye of knowledge?"
4 Thus pondered the king, and mounting the chariot went where dwelt the great muni, righteous in soul, who knew the approached and prostrated himself before that munī, and related how happened his meeting with the Rákshasa, and his interview with the bráhmaṇ woman, and the removal of her evil disposition,* and her despatch to her husband's house, and what was his business in coming back.

The ṛishi spoke :

7 I knew this before, which thou hast done, O king, and 8 the whole of thy business in coming back to me. Ask me here " what must I do ? " with anxious mind ; and since 9 thou art come, O king, hear what thou must do. A wife is a potent cause of righteousness, wealth and love among men ; and in particular one who forsakes her has in sooth 10 abandoned righteousness. A wifeless man, O king, is not fit for his own works, be he bráhmaṇ or kshatriya, vaiśya or 11 even súdra, O king. No brilliant deed didst thou do, Sir, when thou didst abandon thy wife ; for as women must not forsake a husband, so men must not forsake a wife.

The king spoke :

12 Adorable Sir, what shall I do, such as I am ? It was the maturing of my actions, that I abandoned her because she was not favourably disposed to me while I was favourable 13 to her Whatever one does, that one endures with one's mind burning, even that with one's inmost soul terrified at 14 the pain of separation thereby, adorable Sir. But now I know not where she when abandoned in the forest has gone, or whether she has been devoured by lions, tigers and night-roaming beasts in the forest.

The ṛishi spoke :

15 She has not been devoured by lions or tigers or night-roaming beasts, O king, but she is now in Rasátala with unblemished character.

The king spoke :

16 Who conveyed her to Pátála ? How dwells she there uncorrupted ? Most wonderful is this, O bráhmaṇ ; deign to tell me of it as it happened.

* For doḥ-śilyāpagamaṁ read dauḥ-śilyāpagamaṁ ?

The ṛishi spoke:

- 17 In Pátála is a Nága king and he is famed as Kapotaka.
 He saw her when abandoned by thee she was wandering 18 in the great forest. Enamoured of her then he declared his object and carried the beautiful young queen to Pátála, O 19 king. Now that wise Nága king has a beautiful-browed 20 daughter named Nandá, O king, and a charming wife. That daughter saw thy beautiful queen, and thinking, "this bright lady will become a rival wife to my mother," brought her to her own house and concealed her in the women's apartments.
 21 But Nandá, when entreated, continually refuses to answer the king; then the father cursed her his daughter that she should 22 become dumb. Thus did he curse his daughter; and she, thy wife, remains there, O king, carried off by that Nága king, detained by his daughter, and still chaste.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 23 Rejoicing greatly thereat, the king asked the eminent bráhmaṇ * what was the reason of his ill-fortune with regard to his darling wife.

The king spoke:

- 24 Adorable Sir! I meet with the utmost affection from all the world, what then is the reason, why my own wife is not 25 very tender? On the one hand I dearly long for her even beyond my own life, O great muni, and on the other she is ill-disposed towards me. Say, what is the reason, O bráhmaṇ.

The ṛishi spoke:

- 26 When thou didst take her hand in marriage, the Sun and Mars and Saturn looked on thee, and Venus and Jupiter 27 looked on thy wife. At that moment the moon was favour- able to thee, and Mercury to her. Those two groups of planets are mutually hostile; hence they have been exceed- wife, rule the earth in thy righteousness, and perform every rite that pertains to righteousness !

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

About the Auttama Manv-antara.

The bráhmaṇ performs a sacrifice which turns the queen's heart to the king, and the Rákshasa brings her back from Pátála—The bráhmaṇ frees the Nága princess from the curse, and she coming to thank the king promises him a son who shall be a Manu—Accordingly a son is born who was the Manu Auttama.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Then arriving at his city, the king saw the joyful bráhmaṇ accompanied by his wife also who was sweet-dispositioned.

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 2 O noble king, successful am I inasmuch as righteousness has been preserved by thee, who art wise in righteousness here and who bringest back my wife.

The king spoke :

- 3 Successful art thou, O bráhmaṇ, because thou observest thy own laws of righteousness. I am in a strait, who have no wife at home, O bráhmaṇ.

The bráhmaṇ spoke :

- 4 O king, if she, thy queen, has indeed been devoured by wild beasts in the forest, away with her ! Why dost thou not take another's hand in marriage ? Falling under the dominion of danger thou didst not preserve righteousness.

The king spoke :

- 5 My darling wife is not devoured by wild beasts ; indeed she is alive, with character unblemished. How shall I act in this matter ?

The bráhmaṇ spoke:

- 6 If thy wife lives and has not gone astray, why then dost thou commit a sin which will render thee wifeless in another birth ?

The king spoke:

- 7 In sooth, although she were brought back, she is ever opposed to me, O bráhmaṇ, she would tend to unhappiness, not to happiness; enough ! her friendship is not at all towards me. Do thou so strive for me that she may become submissive unto me.

The bráhmaṇ spoke:

- 8 The Vara sacrifice* is beneficial for mutual affection between thee and her. I will perform the Mitra-vindá † 9 sacrifice which those perform who wish for friends; for it produces affection between two persons who love not each other; it creates ‡ the warmest § affection between wife and husband, O king. I will perform that sacrifice for thee.
10 Fetch thy beautiful-browed wife from wherever she is now, O king; she shall feel the warmest love for thee !

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 11 Thus admonished, the king then collected all the materials
12 requisite, and the bráhmaṇ performed that sacrifice. Seven times then the bráhmaṇ performed the sacrifice in repetition 13 in order to procure for the king his wife. When the great muni deemed that he had aroused friendliness within her towards her husband, then he, the bráhmaṇ, addressed the 14 king—"Fetch her, O king, who is dear to thee, close to thy soul; enjoy all enjoyments with her, and offer sacrifices, being duly respected."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 15 Thus exhorted by the bráhmaṇ the king a-wondering then recalled to mind the very valiant, truthful, night-roaming

The queen spoke :

- 20 If thy mind is inclined with favour to me, O king, then I make thee this request; do thou do it as an honour to me.

The king spoke :

- 21 Speak out fearlessly whatever thou desirest from me, lady. Thou shalt certainly obtain it, timid one! I am all docile towards thee and not otherwise.

The queen spoke :

- 22 On my account the Nága cursed his daughter who is my friend; he said "Thou shalt become dumb," and she became

27 Thereupon Garga* spoke to the maiden, who had recovered her speech, in Rasātala—"This most difficult benefit has been effected by thy friend's husband."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

34 While the king lived in pleasure there along with her and 35 ruled his subjects, a very long time passed by. Then the son was born of her to the high-souled king, like the lovely full-orbed moon at the period of full-moon. At the birth of that high-souled chilū all the people rejoiced, heavenly drums sounded forth, and a shower of flowers fell.

End of the Auttama Manv-antara.

Márkaṇḍeya names the gods of the Auttama Manv-antara and their lord, and mentions the kings and ṛishis.

About the Tāmāsa Manv-antara.

King Sva-ráshṭra being driven from his kingdom by enemies became an ascetic, and met his deceased queen in the shape of a doe during a great flood.—He begot a son by her who became the Manu Tāmāsa.—The gods, rishis and kings of that manv-antara are named.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 There lived on the earth a famous king, by name Sva-ráshṭra, valiant, an offerer of many sacrifices, wise, invincible
- 2 in battles. The sun being invoked by his ministers gave him a very long life; and he had a hundred happy wives,
- 3 O bráhmaṇ. The wives of that long-lived king were not very long-lived, O muni; and in time his servants, ministers
- 4 and people came to their end. And he, being bereft,* of his wives and his servants who were his equals in age, was dejected in mind and dwindled in vigour day and night.
- 5 A neighbouring king named Vi-marda ousted him then from his kingdom, failing as he was in vigour, deprived of his
- 6 devoted adherents, greatly afflicted. And being ousted † from his kingdom, he went to a forest, despairing in mind, and taking up his abode on a sandbank in the Vitastá,
- 7 illustrious as he was, he practised austerities. Undergoing the five fires in the hot season,‡ exposing himself naked to the showers § in the rainy season, and lying in water in the cold season, he lived abstaining from food, strict in his devout rites.
- 8 Afterwards there occurred, while he practised his austerities, a great flood day after day in the rainy season, with the distinguished, nor the south, nor the west, nor the north ; 10 everything looked as if besmeared with darkness. The king, forced then in the excessive flood to seek the river bank, could not reach it although seeking it, being carried away 11 by the exceedingly furious current. Now the king, after being carried a long way by the swollen water, chanced upon 12 a Rauha doe in the water and seized her by her tail. Borne along by that flood he passed over the surface of the land hither and thither in the darkness ; at length he reached a 13 bank. Crossing an expanse of mud, which was extremely hard to be crossed, the king being drawn along by her still, 14 gained another charming forest. The Rauha doe dragged the illustrious king along in the darkness there, while he clung to her tail, enfeebled throughout his nervous system.

 15 And he experienced an intense pleasure which arose from touching her, as he wandered continually in the darkness, 16 with his mind drawn out in love to her. Perceiving that the king was enamoured of her, and was engrossed in touching her back, the doe verily spoke to him within that forest:—

17 “ Why dost thou touch my back with trembling hand ?
 18 Quite otherwise has this affair turned out, O king. To no unsuitable object has thy mind gone forth ; not unapproachable am I to thee, O king ; but this Lola creates an obstacle to my union with thee.”

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

19 And the king, on hearing the doe say thus, was aroused to curiosity and spoke thus to the Rauha doe.
 20 “ Tell me, who art thou ? How dost thou, a doe, speak language* like human beings ? And who is this Lola who creates an obstacle to my union with thee ? ”

The doe spoke :

21 I was formerly thy darling Utpalāvati, O king, thy wife, thy queen above a hundred others, Dṛiḍha-dhanvan's daughter.

* Mṛigī-vākyaṇ seems preferable as two words and not a compound.

The king spoke :

- 22 What deed then didst thou do,* that thou hast reached this animal condition ? And true to thy husband, devoted to righteousness, such as thou wert, how hast thou thus become like this ?

The doe spoke :

- 23 While a girl in my father's home I went with my companions to a wood to play, and saw a deer united with a 24 doe. Then approaching close I struck the doe. Frightened by me she fled away, and then the deer enraged said to me, 25 "Silly girl ! why art thou so insane ? Fie on this thy evil disposition, by which thou hast rendered this period of 26 impregnation fruitless for me !" Frightened then at hearing him speaking language as of a human being, I said to him—
 "Who art thou who hast reached this animal condition ?" 27 Thereupon he replied—"I am son of the rishi Nirvṛiti-śakshus, by name Su-tapas, but being-enamoured of this doe I became 28 a deer, and followed her in love, and she longed for me in this wood. Thou hast parted us, O naughty girl, therefore 29 I inflict a curse on thee." And I said—"Knowing thee not,
 I have sinned, O muni ; be gracious ! deign not Sir to cast a 30 curse on me." And so addressed the muni gave me this reply, O king,—“I do not inflict a curse on thee, if I may 31 give myself to thee." And I said—"I am not a doe, nor of deer-like form ; in this wood thou wilt find another doe ; 32 meanwhile let thy feeling towards me be repressed." When thus addressed he exclaimed, his eyes red with anger, and his lower lip quivering—"No doe am I' saidst thou !
 33 thou shalt become a doe, O silly girl." Then exceedingly agitated I fell prostrate before the highly-enraged muni, who had resumed his own form, and exclaimed "Be 34 gracious !" again and again ; "a girl is unskilled in words, hence I spoke as I did ; assuredly women who have no 35 father choose a husband themselves ; and since I have a father, how can I choose, O best of munis, or do wrong ?

 prostrate, exclaiming repeatedly, "Be gracious! be gracious," O high-minded king, that lordly muni spoke—"My uttered 37 word never goes amiss. After thy death thou shalt become a doe in this very wood in thy next birth; and in the doe-38 condition thou shalt conceive within thee the muni Siddha-vírya's mighty-armed son named Lola, O proud lady; and 39 when the embryo is conceived within thee, thou shalt remember thy former life; regaining thy memory, ~~thou~~ 40 shalt also utter human language. After his birth thou shalt be freed from the doe-condition and be honoured by thy husband; thou shalt attain to the worlds which * are un-41 attainable by those who commit sin. And he, Lola, mighty in valour, shall indeed strike down his father's foes, and conquer the whole earth and then become a Manu."
- 42 Incurring this curse I died and reached this brute condition,† and through thy touch that embryo has come into 43 being in my womb. Hence I say—To no unsuitable object has thy mind gone forth in coming to me, nor am I unap-proachable;‡ but this Lola who is conceived within me creates an obstacle.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 44 Being thus addressed the king also experienced intense joy then, thinking, "My son will conquer my enemies and become a Manu on the earth."
- 45 Afterwards the doe brought forth that son marked with the auspicious marks; and at his birth all created things 46 rejoiced, and especially the king. At the birth of that mighty son the doe was freed from the curse and attained 47 to the sublime worlds. Then all the ṛishis assembled, O best of munis, and perceiving the future prosperity of that 48 high-souled child gave him a name—"He was born of his

- 49 Then Tāmāsa was brought up by the father in the forest.
When he reached the age of intelligence he spoke thus to his 50 father, O best of munis,—“Who art thou, dear father? and how am I thy son? and who was my mother? and why hast thou come here? Tell me this truly.”

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 51 Thereupon his father, the large-armed king, narrated to his son how he was ousted from his kingdom and all other 52 events. And on hearing all that, he invoked the sun and obtained celestial weapons together with the spells that 53 controlled them in their completeness. Having mastered the use of the weapons he vanquished those enemies, and bringing them near his father released them, when they were permitted by the father to depart, observing thus his own 54 righteousness. And his father, after seeing his son's face happy, quitted his body and attained to the worlds, which he had won for his own by austerities and sacrifices.

Tāmāsa, became a Manu by name Tāmāsa. Hear about his 56 manv-antara: who were the gods, who was the ruler,† and who was the lord of the gods, and who were the ṛishis, and who

Haris, these were the classes of gods therein, seven and 58 twenty in number, O muni. And Śikhi Indra, mighty, great in valour, distinguished by a hundred sacrifices, became the 59 lord of those gods. Jyotir-dhāman, Prithu, Kāvya, C'aitra, Agni, and Valaka, and also Pivara, these seven, were the CANTO LXXV.

Raivata's Manv-antara.

The rishi Rīta-vác' had a son who was bad because born under the constellation Revatī, and the rishi made the constellation fall with his curse.—A daughter was born therefrom whom the rishi Pramuc'a adopted and named Revatī.—King Durgama visited Pramuc'a and married Revatī, and the constellation was restored to its place at the marriage.—They had a son, the Manu Raivata.—The gods, rishis and kings in his period are named.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 1 Moreover the fifth Manu was the famous one named Raivata. Listen ! I tell thee fully about his birth.
- 2 There was an illustrious and famous rishi named Rīta-vác'. To that high-souled rishi who had no son a son was born at
- 3 the termination of the constellation Revatī. He performed the birth ceremony and all other rites for that son according to the ordinances, and also the investiture with the sacred
- 4 thread and other ceremonies. And he was of bad disposition, O muni. And even from his son's very birth the rishi, that lordly muni, became afflicted with a lingering disease; his
- 5 mother suffered extreme pain, being attacked with leprosy and other diseases. And his father in his affliction pondered—
- 6 "Why is this?" And that his son also, being exceedingly wicked in mind, took another muni's son's wife whom he met.
- 7 Then dejected in mind Rīta-vác' spoke thus—"Better is it
- 8 for men to have no son than a bad son ! A bad son is always causing trouble to his father's and mother's heart; and casts
- 9 downwards his ancestors who dwell in Svarga. He benefits not his friends, he satisfies not his ancestors, he causes suffering to his parents—fie on the birth of that son who
- 10 commits evil deeds ! Happy are they whose sons are commended by all the world, who benefit others, who are peaceful,
- 11 who are devoted to good work ! Uneasy and dull, averse to the next world, tending towards hell and not towards beatitude
- 12 is our life which depends on our son. A bad son brings misery on his friends and joy to his adversaries, and he assuredly brings untimely old age on his parents."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 13 With his thoughts thus burning through the conduct of his exceedingly perverse son, the muni questioned Garga * as to what had happened.

Rita-vác spoke :

- 14 Keeping my religious vows strictly I learned the Vedas formerly according to precept; after acquiring the Vedas 15 I married a wife according to precept. Along with my wife, the rites to be performed, those enjoined by revealed religion, those enjoined by tradition, the oblations made in fire with the exclamation vashaṭ, I have never failed to perform to the full 16 unto this day, O great muni. Following the ordinances prescribed concerning conception, without gratifying † my lust and in order to have a son, I begot this son, I who fear the 17 hell named Put, O muni. Is it through his own fault or through my fault, that this son has been born, bringing suffering on us and causing grief to his kinsmen by his bad disposition, O muni ?

Garga spoke :

- 18 O best of munis, this thy son was born at the termination of the constellation Revatí; therefore he causes thee suffering 19 since he was born at an evil time. This is no transgression by thee nor yet by his mother, nor by thy family; but the termination of Revatí befell as the cause of his bad disposition.

Rita-vác spoke :

- 20 Because this my only son's bad disposition sprang from the termination of Revatí, let that Revatí therefore fall quickly !

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 21 When he uttered this curse, the constellation Revatí verily fell, while all the world beheld with minds pervaded with as-

22 tonishment. And the constellation Revatí, falling on and around the mountain Kumuda, suddenly illuminated* its 23 woods, ravines and cascades. And the mountain Kumuda, by reason of her down-fall, became famous as Raivataka,† a mountain exceedingly charming through the whole earth.
 24 But the beauty of that constellation became the lake Pañkajini;‡ therefrom a maiden was born then exceedingly 25 brilliant in form. The muni Pramuća saw her who was born from Revatí's beauty, and so gave her a name, the name 26 Revatí, O Bháguri. And illustrious Pramuća nourished her, who had been born near his hermitage, in that same land.
 27 Now seeing the maiden grown to the bloom of youth, and beautifully formed, the muni bethought—"Who may be 28 her husband?" While he thus pondered a long time passed by, O muni; nor did the great muni light upon a bridegroom 29 equal to her. At length the muni Pramuća entered his room where the sacred fire burned, to ask Agni about a bridegroom 30 for her. Agni replied to the questioner,—“Great in strength, great in valour, kind of speech, fond of righteousness, the king named Durgama shall assuredly be her husband.”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

31 And immediately there reached his hermitage, O muni, in 32 the course of hunting that wise king Durgama, who was sprung from Priya-vrata's lineage, great in strength and prowess, Vikrama-śila's son, born of Kálindí's womb. The 33 king entered the hermitage and, not seeing the ṛishi, hailed the slender maiden with the word “Dear!” and asked:—

The king spoke:

34 Whither has he gone from this hermitage, the adorable lordly muni? I wish to pay him my affection here. Tell him so, O bright maiden!

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

35 The bráhmaṇ, who was in the room where the sacred fire

- burned, heard that his speech and the hailing her as "Dear!"
 36 and came out in haste. The muni saw high-souled king Durgama, bearing the royal insignia, bowing respectfully before him.
 37 Now on seeing him he spoke at once to his disciple Gautama — "Gautama! bring quickly the argha offering for this king.
 38 At length he has come alone after a long time, this king and in particular my son-in-law; I deem him worthy of the argha."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 39 Thereat the king pondered on the reason for his using the term son-in-law and understood it not; therefore keeping 40 silence the king accepted the argha. When the king had taken a seat and accepted the argha, the bráhmaṇ, the great
 41 muni, addressed him a welcome — "I trust thou farest well in thy home, in thy treasury, and army, in thy friends, in thy servants and ministers, and in thy own self whereon 42 rests every thing, O king of mighty arm! And thy wife fares well; since she is indeed at hand, I ask not therefore about her, but I hope thy other wives fare well!"

The king spoke:

- 43 Through thy favour I have no ill-fortune any where, O strict observer of vows; and my curiosity is aroused, what wife have I here, O muni?

The ṛishi spoke:

- 44 Most noble Revatí, beautiful even through the three worlds, is thy wife of exquisite figure; dost thou not know her, O king?

The king spoke:

- 45 My lord! Su-bhadrá, Śánta's daughter, Káveri's daughter, and Su-játá born in Su-ráshṭra, and Varútha's daughter 46 Kadambá, Vipáthá, and Nandiní — these I know as my wives, O bráhmaṇ; they remain at my home. I know not Revatí, adorable Sir; who then is she?

The ṛishi spoke:

- 47 She is this maiden of beautiful complexion, whom thou didst address just now as "Dear!" Hast thou forgotten, O king? Worthy of praise is this lady of thy house!

The king spoke:

- 48 In truth I said so, but no improper feeling had I, O muni.
Deign not to be angry with me for this, I beseech thee, Sir!

The ṛishi spoke:

- 49 Thou speakest truly, O king; no improper feeling hadst thou. Thou didst utter this word, being impelled by Agni, 50 O king. I asked Agni, "Who shall be her husband?" O king; and he replied that thou thyself, Sir, shouldst verily 51 be her bridegroom this day. Take her then; I give thee the maiden, O king, and thou didst hail her as "Dear!"
How dost thou decide?

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 52 At his address the king then kept silence; and the ṛishi 53 prepared to perform her wedding ceremony. The maiden spoke a little thing to her father who was prepared for the marriage, her countenance bent downward with respect—54 "If thou lovest me, dear father, deign to give me a favour; perform then my marriage in the constellation Revatí, since I have won thy favour."

The ṛishi spoke:

- 55 Fair maiden! the constellation Revatí is not declared to be one that unites with the moon. The constellations appropriate to thy marriage are others, O beautiful-browed!

The maiden spoke:

- 56 Dear father! without that constellation the time appears to me unprofitable. How may the marriage of such as me take place at an unprofitable time?

The ṛishi spoke:

- 57 The famous ascetic named Rīta-vác was enraged against Revatí; in his anger he caused the constellation to fall down.
58 And I have promised thee as wife to this king, O maiden with intoxicating eyes; and if thou desirest not the marriage, we have fallen into a strait!

The maiden spoke :

- 59 Dear father ! Why did that muni Rīta-vác perform austerities in that fashion ? Have I nought to do with thee as father ? Am I the daughter of an unworthy bráhmaṇ ?

The rishi spoke :

- 60 Thou art not the daughter of an unworthy bráhmaṇ, nor of an ascetic, O maiden. Thou art daughter to me who am striving to make other gods.*

The maiden spoke :

- 61 If my father is a practiser of austerities, why then does he not raise this constellation to the sky and perform my wedding under the constellation ?

The rishi spoke :

- 62 Be it so ! prosperity be thine, fair maiden ; be thou affectionate ! I raise the constellation Revatī to the moon's pathway for thy sake.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 63 Then by the power of his austerities the great muni placed the constellation Revatī as before in conjunction with the 64 moon, O bráhmaṇ. And full of affection he celebrated his daughter's marriage accompanied with sacred texts according 65 to rule, and said to his son-in-law again, " Tell me, O king, what shall I give thee as a wedding gift ? I will give even that which is hard to be obtained, for irresistible are my austerities."

The king spoke :

- 66 Of Manu Sváyambhuva's lineage † I am sprung, O muni. I choose as gift a son who shall reign over a manv-antara through thy favour.

The rishi spoke :

- 67 This thy wish shall be fulfilled. As a Manu thy son shall enjoy the whole earth, and shall be wise in righteousness, O king.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 68 Then taking her the king went to his own city. From him 69 was born of Revatī a son, the Manu Raivata, possessed of all righteousness, unconquered by mankind, who understood the meaning of every sacred book, who knew the Vedas, the sciences and the books of practical arts.
- 70 Hear most composedly, O bráhmaṇ, about the gods, the munis, the lord of the gods and the kings in his manv-antara, 71 as I mention them. The gods therein were the Su-medhases.
 And the kings were Vaikuṇṭha and Amitábha, fourteen and 72 fourteen, O bráhmaṇ. And now the lord of those very four classes of gods was named Vibhu, who was the regarder of 73 a hundred sacrifices, O king. Hiraṇya-loman, Veda-śrī, and also Urdhva-báhu, Veda-báhu, and Su-dháman and the 74 great muni Parjanya, and illustrious Vaśiṣṭha who was thoroughly versed in the Vedas and Vedánta—these were 75 the seven rishis also in Manu Raivata's period. Bala-bandhu mighty in valour, and also Su-yashtáva, and Satyaka and others were Manu Raivata's sons.
- 76 Now these are the Manus down to Raivata, whom I have told thee about; they were indeed connected with Sváyambhava, except * Manu Svárociṣa.†

- 1 Thus I have narrated these five manv-antaras to thee.*
Hear about this sixth period, that of the Manu C'ákshusha.
2 In another birth he was born from the eye† of the supreme deity, hence in this birth also he retained the condition‡ of 3 C'ákshusha, O bráhmaṇ.§ His mother repeatedly makes him prattle|| as he lies in her lap after his birth, and embraces 4 him lovingly and then again makes him prattle.¶ Being indeed born with a recollection of his previous existences, he 5 laughed as he lay on his mother's lap. His mother said to him angrily then—"I am frightened; what is this, my child, that there is laughter in thy mouth? Thou art born with premature intelligence. Perhaps thou seest something bright!"

The son spoke :

- 6 Dost thou not see, a cat in front wishes to devour me?
And another, the hag who seizes newly-born children, has 7 vanished. And since thou, lady, looking on me lovingly in thy affection for thy son, dost keep on making me prattle and 8 dost embrace me much, while thy hair rises up and thine eyes are suffused with tears springing from love, therefore 9 I chanced to laugh. Hear also the reason of it. The cat intent on its own object looks on me who am attached to thee; and the other also, the hag who seizes newly-born 10 children, has vanished. Just as these two, with hearts solicitous for their own self-interest,†† were busy over me, even so thou appearest to me to be engaged in thy own self-interest. But the cat and the hag who seizes newly-born children aimed at enjoying me; thou on the other hand desirest to obtain good results from me which shall be enjoyed gradually. Thou dost not know me who I am, nor the benefit that I have conferred. Our meeting is for no very long time, a period of five and seven days. Nevertheless thou lovest and embracest me excessively with tears in thine eyes; sincerely thou callest me "dear child" and "lovely darling."

The mother spoke :

"It is not for the sake of a benefit that I embrace thee lovingly, my darling, nor shall I be deprived of thee, if this shall be for thy pleasure.* I have now relinquished any self-interest which shall accrue to me from thee."†

So saying she left him and went out of the lying-in house. The hag Jāta-hārinī then seized him when left, his body and external organs of sense being apathetic, his heart and soul pure. Having seized the boy she placed him then as a new-born child on the bed of king Vi-krānta's wife, and took his new-born son and carried him‡ to another house, and taking a son from that house she, Jāta-hārinī, in regular course devoured this third child. Now carrying children off in succession she devours the third child, totally devoid of pity; but she makes a substitution thus with the other two day after day.

And then king Vi-krānta performed the purificatory rites, which appertain to a prince, for that very son; and as father king Vi-krānta gave him the name Xuanda according to rule, being himself filled with intense joy. Now when as a youth he had donned the sacred thread, his spiritual guide ordered him—"Approach before thy mother respectfully and salute her!" Hearing that his guru's speech, he smiled and spoke thus—"Which of my mothers shall I praise, her who gave me birth or her who has nourished me?"

The guru spoke :

- 24 Not the latter, indeed ! Thy mother who bore thee, noble youth, is -Rutha's daughter, Vi-kránta's chief queen, Haiminí by name.

Ananda spoke :

- 25 She is the mother of C'aitra, who dwells in the village Viśála, as son of the leading bráhmaṇ Bodha, and who was born of her. I come from elsewhere.

The guru spoke :

- 26 Whence art thou ? tell me, O Ananda. What C'aitra again dost thou mention ? It appears to be a great difficulty. Where wast thou born ? What dost thou say of this ?

Ananda spoke :

- 27 I was born in a kshatriya king's house of his wife Giribhaadrá, O bráhmaṇ. The hag that steals new-born children
28 took me ; she left me here, and taking Haiminí's son also carried him further to the house of the leading bráhmaṇ
29 Bodha, and devoured the bráhmaṇ Bodha's son. Haiminí's son has been consecrated with the sanctifying rites of a bráhmaṇ 30 there. I have been consecrated here by thee as guru, illustrious Sir. I must obey thy command: which mother shall I approach, O guru ?

The guru spoke :

- 31 Extremely intricate, my child, is this great difficulty that has befallen. I understand it not at all, for my wits are wandering as it were through enchantment.

Ananda spoke :

- 32 What case of enchantment is there here, while the world is thus constituted ? Who is whose son, O bráhmaṇ ṛishi ?
33 Or who is not whose kinsman ? Beginning from his birth, whatever man enters into connexions, the others who are connected with him are made to pass away by death, O
34 bráhmaṇ. Moreover when he is born here, whatever connexion-he has with kinsmen, that also ceases with the ending of his body. This is the entire process. Hence I say, 35 "Who is not a kinsman to one who dwells in this worldly existence? Or who is a kinsman for ever?" Is thy mind 36 bewildered? I have had two fathers indeed in this very birth, and two mothers; is it wonderful that it should be 37 otherwise in the recurring birth of the body? Being such, I will practise austerities. Do thou bring here C'aitra, who is indeed the son of this king, from the village Viśála.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

38 Thereupon the king was astonished with his wives and kinsmen; withdrawing his feeling of ownership from that 39 boy, he permitted him to depart to the forest. Fetching his son C'aitra he made him worthy of the kingdom, after honouring the bráhmaṇ who brought him up in the belief that he was his son.

40 And he, Ananda, a mere boy, practised austerities in the great forest, in order to consume away his actions which 41 were adversaries in the path to final emancipation. And to him then as he practised austerities spoke the divine Prajá-pati—"Why art thou performing severe austerities my child? tell me that."

Ananda spoke:

42 Desirous of purity of soul I perform austerities, adorable lord! setting my face towards consuming the actions which tend to fetter me.

Brahmá spoke:

43 He who is lord over consumed actions is fit for final emancipation, not he who engages in action. Hence Sir! thou shalt obtain final emancipation, when thou hast the lordship of 44 goodness. Thou must be the sixth Manu; go; do accordingly! Enough of austerities for thee! When thou hast done that, thou shalt obtain final emancipation.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

45 Being thus exhorted by Brahmá, he then the high-minded replied, "So be it!" and went directing himself to that 46 pursuit. He ceased indeed from austerities. Turning him away from austerities Brahmá addressed him as C'ákshusha;

formerly he was known by that name ; he became famous as Manu C'ákshusha.

47 He married Vidarbhá, daughter of king Ugra, and begot by her sons celebrated for valour.

48 Hear, O bráhmaṇ, who were the gods of the period, while he reigned over the manv-antara ; and who were the rishis,

49 and who was the Indra, and who were his sons. The gods therein were named Aryas ; they formed one group of eight persons ; it was composed of those who had done famous deeds, who partook of the oblations at the sacrifice, O bráhma-

50 ṇ, of those who were famous for strength and valour, who were hardly to be gazed at because of their halo of splendour. And the second class of gods was called Prasú-

51 tas, consisting of eight persons. There was another class of gods also called Bhavyas, consisting of just eight persons ; and a fourth class therein was called Yútha-gas, which also

52 consisted of eight persons. There were, moreover, other gods called Lekha in a fifth class also in that manv-antara,

53 O bráhmaṇ ; those so named fed indeed on amṛita. And the Indra was Mano-java, who offered a hundred sacrifices and became their lord ; he was reckoned the eater of a por-

54 tion of the sacrifices. And Su-medhas, and Vi-rajas, Havishmat, Un-nata, Madhu, Ati-náman, and Sahishṇu were the seven rishis. Manu C'ákshusha's sons, chief of whom were 55 Urú,* Puru, and Sata-dyumna, very great in strength, were the kings of the earth.

56 Thus I have narrated to thee the sixth manv-antara, O bráhmaṇ, both the birth and the exploits of high-souled

57 C'ákshusha. He who subsists at the present time is named Manu Vaivasvata ; hear from me about the gods and other chief personages in his, the seventh, period.

The Vaivasvata Manv-antara.

The Sun married Tvashtri's daughter Sañjñá, and their children were Manu Vaivasvata and Yama—Márkaṇḍeya narrates, how the Sun's splendour was pared down by Tvashtri because she could not endure it.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 The Sun Mártaṇḍa's wife was Viśva-karman's illustrious
- 2 daughter, by name Sañjñá. The Sun begot of her a son, a
- Manu, of celebrated fame, learned in many sciences : since
- he was Vivasvat's son, he was called Vaivasvata in sooth.
- 3 And Sañjñá used to shut her eyes when the Sun gazed on
- her, and the Sun in anger thereat spoke sharply to Sañjñá—
- 4 "Because thou dost always imprison thine eyes when thou
- seest me, O silly one, thou shalt therefore give birth to Yama,
- the prisoner* of mankind."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 5 Thereupon the goddess, unnerved by fear, became wild-
- eyed, and the Sun seeing her agitated glances addressed her
- 6 again—"Since thine eye-sight has become agitated,† now
- that thou hast seen me, thou shalt therefore give birth to a
- daughter, the river Vi-lolá."‡

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 7 Hence through that her husband's curse Yama verily was
- born of her, and also Yamuná this famous and very great
- 8 river. And it was with pain that Sañjñá, the noble lady,
- endured the Sun's splendour; and then unable to bear the
- 9 splendour she fell into thought—"What am I to do? Where
- am I to go? Where shall I go that I may find ease? And
- 10 how shall the Sun, my husband, control his wrath?" So
- pondering in many ways, the Prajá-pati's illustrious daughter

- then thought much of actually taking refuge with her father.
- 11 Thereupon the famous lady having resolved to go to her father's house fashioned her body, that the Sun loved, in shadow-form, and addressed her shadow-self—"Remain thou here in the Sun's house even as I; and behave thou becomingly to the children even as to the Sun And though questioned say nothing of this my going away; say always this, 'I am she indeed, Sañjñá by name.'"

The Shadow-Sañjñá spoke :

- 14 "O lady, I will obey thy order and will so declare, as far as suffering my hair to be seized and as far as undergoing curses; it is performed indeed as far as drawing curses down upon myself."
- 15 The goddess*, receiving this assurance, then went to her father's abode. She saw Tvasht̥ri there cleansed from stain
- 16 by means of austerities. And being honoured by him, Vísvakarman, with much respect, she remained in her father's
- 17 house some time, unreproached. Then her father spoke to the beautiful lady, his daughter, when she had dwelt there not very long, after praising her and prefacing his speech with love and much respect—
- 18 "Now while I have been seeing thee my child, the days though very many may be reckoned as equal to half a moment; nevertheless righteousness suffers loss. Dwelling a long time among kinsmen brings no good repute to women; kinsmen hold a woman's proper residence is in her husband's
- 20 house. Such art thou, and thou art mated to a husband, the Sun, the lord of the three worlds; deign not my daughter
- 21 to dwell a long time in thy father's house. Being such, go thou to thy husband's home. I am pleased; thou hast been honoured by me. Thou must come again to see me, my beautiful one."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 22 Thus was she admonished by her father then, and she agreeing saluted her father respectfully and went to the

* For daví read deví.

- 23 Northern Kurus, O muni, disliking the Sun's heat, afraid of his splendour; and there she practised austerities, changed into a mare's shape.
- 24 The lord of day thinking the shadow-form was Sañjñá, begot
- 25 of that other two sons and a charming daughter. Now the Shadow-Sañjñá was very affectionate to the other children just as to her own; Sañjñá did not use to show special attention to her daughter and two sons daily by caresses * and other marks of pleasure. Manu accepted that affection from
- 26 her; Yama did not bear it patiently from her, and indeed he lifted his foot in anger to kick her, but, again moved with forbearance towards her, did not strike it against her body.
- 27 Thereupon, O bráhmaṇ, the Shadow-Sañjñá in anger cursed Yama, her upper lip quivering slightly, and her delicate
- 28 hand shaking—"Because thou spurnest me, thy father's wife, disrespectfully with thy foot, this thy foot shall therefore fall this very day to the earth."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 30 Yama, terrified on hearing the curse that his mother had pronounced on him, went to his father and falling prostrate before him spoke:—

Yama spoke:

- 31 O father, this great marvel was never seen by any one, that a mother casting love away imprecates a curse on her
- 32 son. She is not mother to me in the same way as Manu calls her his mother; no mother would abandon her good qualities even towards sons devoid of good qualities.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 33 Hearing this speech from Yama, the adorable Dispeller of darkness called the Shadow-Sañjñá and asked her—"Where
- 34 has she gone?" And she answered—"I am Tvasṭṛi's daughter Sañjñá, O god of fire, thy wife; through thee these children
- 35 were begotten of me." Now when, as Vivasvat was thus questioning her repeatedly, she did not speak further, the Sun
- 36 enraged thereat prepared to curse her. Thereupon she told the Sun what had happened, and the god knowing the truth went to Tvashṭri's abode.

- 37 He then paid honour to the Sun, the god honoured by the three worlds, who had visited his house, with sublime faith.
- 38 Viśva-kṛit on being asked about Sañjñā, then told him—
- 39 “She came indeed here to my house, saying she had been verily sent by thee.” And the Sun, collecting his mind in meditation, perceived her in mare's shape practising austerities among the Northern Kurus, and the Sun understood the purpose of her austerities, namely, ‘May my husband become mild in body, beautiful in form.’ “Pare down my splendour now” quoth the Sun also to Sañjñā's father Viśva-karman,
- 42 O brāhman. And Viśva-karman thereupon pared down the splendour of the year-revolving Sun, and obtains the praises of the gods.

CANTO LXXVIII.

*The Birth of Vaivasvata in the Sāvarnika Manv-antara.

Mārkaṇḍeya relates how the gods praised the Sun, what became of the splendour pared off from the Sun, and how the Sun regained his wife—He mentions the positions assigned to the Sun's children.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke:

Then the gods and the devārshis assembling praised in words the Sun, who is worthy of being praised by the entire three worlds.

The gods spoke:

- 2 “Adoration to thee who hast the nature of the Rīc! adoration to thee who hast the nature of the Sāman! adoration to thee whose form has the nature of the Yajus! to thee who
- 3 hast the glory of the Sāmans! Adoration to thee who hast become the sole domain of knowledge, to the cleanser of darkness! to thee who hast the nature of pure light! to the lent, to the desirable one! to the utmost one, to the supreme a disciple and having given also the guru his fee one may hear of intelligence,† with everything moveable and immoveable, thou are composed of the Ric', O lord of the world, and thou 13 indeed art composed of the Yajus, and composed also of the Sáman, therefore, O lord, thou art composed of the three! Thou verily art Brahmá's form; thou art the 14 highest and the lowest also! Moreover thou art material and non-material; thou art minute and yet thou dost exist in moments, káshṭhas and other divisions of time, yet subject to decay! Be gracious! Of thine own will mitigate the innate splendour of thy form!"

* Nishṭháyai.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

15 Being extolled thus by the gods and devarshis, the imperishable globe of splendour shed his splendour then.
16 That portion of the Sun's splendour which was composed of the Ric' became the earth, and of that portion composed of 17 the Yajus was made the sky, and that portion composed of the Sáman became heaven.* Of the fifteen shreds of his splendour which were pared off by Tvasht̥ri, the high-souled adorable lord bears only a sixteenth part. His splendour was pared off by Viśva-karman into fifteen parts.

21 Then assuming a horse's form the Sun went to the Northern 22 Kurus, and saw Sañjñá there disguised in mare's shape. And she, seeing him approaching and afraid of a strange male, went towards him face to face, intent on guarding her rear.
23 And thereupon as the two met there and joined their noses, two sons issued from the mare's mouth, Násatya and Dasra; 24 and at the termination of the flow of semen Revanta was born, bearing sword, shield and armour, mounted on horse-25 back, furnished with arrows and quiver. Then the Sun displayed his own peerless form, and she gazing upon his true 26 form felt a keen joy; and the Sun, the robber of the waters, brought home this his loving wife Sañjñá restored to her own shape.

27 Her eldest son then became Vaivasvata Manu; and her second son Yama became the righteous-eyed judge because

The Ásvins were made the gods' physicians by their high-souled father. And Revanta also was appointed king of the Guhyakas. Hear also from me the places assigned to the Shadow-Sañjñá's sons. The eldest son of the Shadow-Sañjñá was equal to Manu the eldest-born; hence this son of the Sun obtained the title Sávarṇika. He also shall be a Manu when Bali shall become Indra. He was appointed by his father as the planet Saturn among the planets. The third of them, the daughter named Tapatí, had a son Kuru, king of men, by king Sambarāṇa.†

The praise of Vaivasvata in the Sávarṇika Manv-antara.‡

Márkaṇḍeya names the deities, munis and kings of the Vaivasvata Manv-antara.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

CANTO LXXXI.

Commencement of the Deví-Máhátmya.

The slaughter of Madhu and Kaiṭabha in the account of the Sávarṇika Manv-antara.

King Su-ratha being defeated and driven from his kingdom took refuge in the forest with a muni—He met a vaiśya who had been driven from his home by his relatives, and both asked the muni about the selfish feelings which still possessed them.—He ascribes those feelings to the goddess Mahá-máyá or Great Illusion, and relates how Brahmá lauded the goddess at the end of a former kalpa in order to seek deliverance from the demons Madhu and Kaiṭabha, and how Vishṇu awaking slew the demons.

Om ! Reverence to C'aṇḍiká.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- Súrya's son Sávarṇi is he who is called the eighth Manu.

 reason of the authority of the Great Illusion‡ that illustrious son of the Sun, Sávarṇi, became the king of the eighth manv-antara.

- 3 In times ago in the Sváro'isha period, a king named Su-
 4 ratha, sprung of the race of O'aitra, reigned over the whole 5 earth. And while he guarded his subjects duly as if they were his own children, there arose hostile kings, who did 6 not destroy the Kolas.* He the bearer of a very powerful 7 sceptre had war with them, and was defeated in war by 8 them, inferior though they were, those non-destroyers of the 9 Kolas. Then coming to his own city he reigned as king over 10 his own country. That illustrious king was attacked then by 11 those powerful enemies. His powerful and corrupt ministers, 12 who were evil-disposed to a weak person, thereupon robbed
 13 him of treasury and army even there in his own city. Hence 14 the king deprived of his sovereignty departed alone on horse-15 back to a dense forest under the pretence of hunting. There he saw the hermitage of the noble dvija Medhas, inhabited by wild animals which were peaceful, graced by the muni's disciples; and he dwelt there some time, honoured by the muni. And roaming hither and thither in that fine hermitage of the muni, he fell into thought there then, his mind being distraught by selfishness, egotistical—"Lost indeed is the city which I guarded formerly. Whether it is guarded righteously or not by those my servants of wicked conduct, I know not. My chief war-elephant, always ardent, has passed into the power of my foes; what pleasures will he obtain?
 They who were my constant followers now assuredly pay court to other kings with favour, riches and food. The treasure which I amassed with great difficulty will go to waste through those men, addicted to unbecoming expenditure, who are squandering it continually." These and other matters the king thought of continually.

* Kolávidhvamsinah. This is an adjective in the nom. plural, agreeing with bhūpāḥ, and not a gen. case; and it is also a single compound, as appears from the next verse. Besides various fanciful explanations, the commentator renders kola as śúkara, and the whole word as "Yavanas." It seems plain that the Kolas mean aboriginal races, the Kols, and the whole word denotes some enemies who were in alliance with the Kolas.

- Near the bráhmaṇ's hermitage there he saw a solitary 16 vaiśya, and asked him, "Ho! who art thou? and what is the 17 reason of thy coming here? Why appearest thou as if full of sorrow, as if afflicted in mind?" Hearing this speech of the king, which was uttered in friendly mood, the vaiśya, 18 bowing respectfully, replied to the king, "I am a vaiśya, Samádhi by name, born in a family of wealthy folk, and have been cast out by my sons and wife, who are wicked through 19 greed for wealth. And bereft of riches, wife and sons, taking my wealth I have come to the forest, unhappy and cast out 20 by my trusted kinsmen. In this state I know not what is the behaviour of my sons as regards prosperity or adversity, 21 nor of my family nor of my wife. Here I dwell. Is welfare theirs at home now or ill-luck? How are they? Are my sons living good or evil lives?"

The king spoke :

- 22 Why dost thou, Sir, fix thy mental affection on those covetous folk, thy sons, wife and others, who have cast thee out from thy wealth?

The vaiśya spoke :

- 23 This very thought has occurred to me, just as thou hast uttered it, Sir. What can I do? My mind does not enter-24 tain implacability; and my mind, which bears affection as of a master to his family, is affectionate to those very persons, who have abandoned affection for a father and driven me 25 out in their greed for riches. I do not comprehend, although I know it, O high-minded Sir, how it is that the mind is prone 26 to love even towards worthless kinsmen. On their account my sighs flow and distress of mind arises. What can I do since my mind is not relentless to those unloving relatives?

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 27 Thereupon they both, the vaiśya named Samádhi and the 28 noble king approached the muni, O bráhmaṇ, and having both observed the etiquette worthy of him, as was proper, they sat down and held various discourse, the vaiśya and the king.

The king spoke :

29 Adorable Sir ! I desire to ask thee one thing ; tell me that ; since it tends to afflict my mind without producing submis-30 siveness of my intellect. I have a selfish feeling for my kingdom, even with regard to all the requisites of regal administration, although I know what it is, yet like one who 31 is ignorant ; how is this, O est of munis ? And this man has been set at nought and cast off by his children, wife and servants ; and when forsaken by his family he is nevertheless 32 exceedingly full of affection towards them. Thus he and I also are both excessively unhappy ; our minds are drawn by selfish thoughts to this matter, even though we perceive the 33 faults in it. How happens this then, illustrious Sir, that we are deluded although aware of it, and that this state of delusion besets me and him, who are each blind in respect of discrimination ?

The rishi spoke :

34 Every animal has this knowledge in objects cognizable by the senses and an object of sense reaches it thus in divers ways, 35 illustrious Sir ! Some living beings are blind by day, and others are blind at night ; some living beings can see equally 36 well by day and at night. Mankind know what is true, but not they alone indeed, because cattle, birds, wild animals 37 and other creatures all certainly know it ; and men have * the same knowledge which those wild animals and birds have,
 and equally both wild animals and birds have the other know-38 ledge which those men have. Though they have such knowledge, look at these birds, which, though distressed by hunger themselves, are yet because of that same delusion assiduous in 39 dropping grains into the beaks of their young ones. Human beings are full of longings towards their children, O hero ; do they not pass from greed for self unto mutual benefaction ; †

* The Bombay edition reads na instead of c'a, "men have not the same knowledge, &c."

† This is very noteworthy. The altruistic virtues are here said to have been evolved out of the parental virtues.

40 dost thou not perceive this? Nevertheless they are hurled into the whirlpool of selfishness which is the pit of delusion ; through the power of the Great Illusion* they make worldly 41 existence permanent.† Marvel not then at this. This is the contemplation-sleep of the lord of the world, and the Great Illusion that comes from Hari ; by it the world is completely 42 deluded. Verily she, the adorable goddess, Great Illusion, forcibly drawing the minds even of those who know, presents 43 them to delusion. By her is created this whole universe both moveable and immoveable ; she it is who when propitious bestows boons on men with a view to their final emancipation, 44 She is Knowledge supreme ; she is the eternal cause of final emancipation, and the cause of the bondage of worldly existence ; she indeed is the queen over all lords.

The king spoke :

45 Adorable Sir ! Who then is that goddess whom thou stytest Mahá-máyá ? How was she born, and what is her sphere of 46 action, O bráhmaṇ ? And what is her disposition, and what is her nature, and whence did she originate, the goddess—all that I wish to hear from thee, O thou most learned in sacred knowledge !

The rishi spoke :

47 She exists eternally, embodied as the world. By her this universe was stretched forth. Nevertheless her origin is in 48 many ways ; hear it from me. When she reveals herself in order to accomplish the purposes of the gods, it is then said in the world that she is born ; she is also named the

Thou art gentle, yea more than gentle, exceedingly beautiful to those who are wholly gentle; thou art indeed beyond the highest and the lowest, Queen supreme! And whatever or wherever a thing is, whether good or bad, thou art the energy which all that possesses, O thou who art the soul of everything. Can I extol thee more than this? || By thee, who art such, he indeed, who created the world, who protects the world, ¶ who consumes the world, is brought under the dominion of sleep. Who is able here to extol thee? Since Vishnu, I and Śiva have been made by thee to assume bodies, who then may be powerful enough to extol thee? Being such, do thou, O goddess, lauded thus, bewitch these two unassailable Asuras, Madhu and Kaiṭabha, with thy exalted powers, and let the imperishable master of the world be lightly brought back to consciousness, and let him rouse up his intelligence to slay these two great Asuras!

The ṛishi spoke :

- 68 Then the goddess of darkness, extolled thus by the Creator
there in order to awaken Viṣṇu to slay Madhu and Kaiṭabha, 69 issued forth from his eyes, mouth, nose, arms and heart and breast, and stood in the sight of Brahmá whose birth is 70 inscrutable; and Janárdana, master of the world, being quitted by her, rose up from his couch in the universal ocean; 71 and he saw those two then, Madhu and Kaiṭabha, evil of soul, excelling in heroism and prowess, red-eyed through anger, 72 fully prepared to devour Brahmá. Thereupon the adorable lord Hari rose up and fought with those two, striking them 73 with his arms, for five thousands of years. And they, exceedingly frenzied with their power, deluded by the Great Illusion, exclaimed to Keśava, "Choose a boon from us!"

The god spoke :

- 74 Be ye both now content with me; ye must both be slain by me! What need is there of any other boon here? Thus much indeed is my choice.

The ṛishi spoke :

- 75 Gazing then at the entire world which was nothing but water, those two, who had been thus tricked, spoke to the adorable lotus-eyed god,—"Slay us where the earth is not overwhelmed with water."*

The ṛishi spoke :

- 76 "Be it so" said the adorable wielder of the conch, discus and club, and cutting † them with his discus clove them both asunder, heads and buttocks.
77 Thus was she born when praised by Brahmá himself. Now listen again, I tell thee of this goddess' majesty.

CANTO LXXXII.

The Devī-māhātmya.Slaughter of the army of the Asura Mahisha.

The gods were defeated in a great battle formerly by the Asuras and driven from heaven, and the Asura Mahisha became supreme.—All the gods gave forth their special energies, which combined and formed the goddess C'aṇḍikā.—They gave her their weapons, and she fought with and destroyed the Asuras.

The ṛishi spoke :

Of yore there was a fight for a full hundred years between the gods * and Asuras, when Mahisha was lord of the Asuras
 2 and Indra lord of the gods ; in it the army of the gods was vanquished by the Asuras who excelled in valour, and the Asura Mahisha after conquering all the gods became the 3 Indra. Then the vanquished gods, placing the Praja-pati Brahmā at their head, went where abode Śiva and Viṣṇu.
 4 The thirty gods described to them accurately what had happened, the full story of the gods' discomfiture which 5 had been wrought by the Asura Mahisha,—“ He, Mahisha, in his own person domineers over the jurisdictions of the Sun, Indra, Agni, Vāyu and the Moon, of Yama and Varuṇa
 6 and of the other gods. Cast out by that evil-souled Mahisha from Svarga all the hosts of the gods wander on the earth
 7 like mortals. It has now been related to you both, all that has been wrought by the foe of the Immortals, and we have sought you both as a refuge ; let his destruction be devised ! ”
 8 Having thus heard the words of the gods, Viṣṇu was wroth and Śiva also ; both their faces became furrowed with 9 frowns. Then issued forth great energy † from the mouth of Viṣṇu who was full of intense anger, and from the 10 mouths of Brahmā and Śiva ; and from the bodies of Indra and the other gods went forth a very great energy ; and it 11 all amalgamated. The gods beheld the mass of intense energy there like a burning mountain, pervading the other 12 regions of the sky with its blaze; and that unparalleled energy born of the bodies of all the gods, which pervaded the three worlds with its light, gathering into one became 13 a female. By what was Siva's energy her face was developed, and by Yama's energy grew her hair, and her arms 14 by Vishnu's energy, by the Moon's her twin breasts; and her waist came into being by Indra's energy, and by Varuna's 15 her legs and thighs, by the Earth's energy her hips, by Brahma's energy her feet, her toes by the Sun's energy, and by the Vasus' energy her hands and fingers, and by Kuvera's 16 her nose; and her teeth grew by the Prajā-pati's energy, 17 and three eyes were developed by Agni's energy; and her eyebrows were the energy of the two twilights, and her ears Vāyu's energy; and the coming into being of the energies of the other gods became the auspicious goddess.

 18 Then gazing at her, who had sprung from the combined energies of all the gods, the Immortals who were afflicted by 19 Mahisha felt a keen joy.* The bearer of the bow Pināka drawing a trident forth from his own trident gave it to her;
 and Krishna gave a discus pulling it out of his own discus;
 20 and Varuna gave her a couch, Agni a spear, Māruta gave a 21 bow and a quiver filled with arrows.† Indra lord of the Immortals gave a thunder-bolt pulling it out of his own thunder-bolt; the Thousand-eyed gave her a bell from his 22 elephant Airāvata. Yama gave a rod from his own rod of Fate, and the lord of the waters a noose; and the Prajā-pati gave her a necklace of beads, Brahmā an earthen water-pot; 23 the Sun bestowed his own rays on all the pores of her skin, and Destiny ‡ gave her a sword and a spotless shield;

24 and the Ocean of milk a spotless necklace of pearls and also a pair of undecaying garments. And a celestial crest-jewel, a 25 pair of ear-rings, and bracelets, and a brilliant half-moon ornament, and armlets over all her arms, and also a pair of 26 bright anklets, a necklet of the finest make, and rings and gems on all her fingers—these Viśva-karman gave to her, and 27 also a brightly polished axe, weapons of many shapes and also armour that could not be pierced. And Ocean gave her a 28 garland of fadeless lotus-flowers for her head and another for her breast, and a very brilliant lotus-flower besides. Himavat 29 gave her a lion to ride on and gems of various kinds. Kuvera gave a drinking cup full of wine. And Śeṣha, the lord of all 30 the serpents, who supports this earth, gave her a serpent-necklace adorned with large gems. Honoured by other gods 31 also with gifts of ornaments* and weapons, the goddess uttered a loud roar blended with a horse-laugh again and again. The whole welkin was filled with her terrible roar.
 32 By that penetrating and exceedingly great roar a great echo 33 arose, all the worlds shook and the seas trembled, the earth quaked and all the mountains moved. And “Conquer thou!”
 exclaimed the gods with joy to her who rode on the lion 34 and the munis extolled her as they bowed their bodies in faith.

Seeing all the three worlds greatly agitated, the foes of the 35 Immortals uniting all their armies rose up together, with uplifted weapons. “Ha! what is this?” exclaimed the Asura 36 Mahisha in wrath, and rushed surrounded by all the Asuras towards that roar. Then he saw the goddess, pervading the 37 three worlds† with her light, causing the earth to bow at the touch of her feet, grazing the firmament with her crest, shaking the whole of Pātāla with the twang of her bow-string, 38 standing pervading the sky all around with her thousand arms. Then began a battle between the goddess and the 39 enemies of the gods, in which every region of the sky was illumined with the weapons and arms hurled in abundance.

 And the Asura Mahisha's general, the great Asura named 40 C'ikshura, fought with her; and the Asura C'ánara attended by his cavalry fought along with others. The great Asura 41 named Udagra with six myriads of chariots fought; and Mahá-banu with a thousand myriads gave battle; and the 42 great Asura Asi-loman with fifty millions; with six hundred myriads Váskala fought in the battle; Ugra-darśana* with 43 many troops of thousands of elephants and horses, and surrounded with ten million chariots fought in that battle; and 44 the Asura named Viḍála fought in the battle there, surrounded with fifty myriads of myriads of chariots. And other 45 great Asuras in myriads, surrounded with chariots, elephants and horses, fought with the goddess in that battle there. Now 46 the Asura Mahisha was surrounded with thousands of ten million times ten millions of chariots and elephants and horses in the battle there. With iron maces and javelins, with spears 47 and clubs, with swords, with axes and halberds they fought in the battle against the goddess. And some hurled spears, 48 and others nooses, but they assailed the goddess with blows from their swords in order to slay her.

And then the goddess C'aṇḍiká clove, as it were in merest 49 play, those weapons and arms by raining forth her own weapons and arms. The goddess betrayed no exertion in her 50 countenance, while the gods and ṛishis were praising her. The queenly goddess hurled her weapons and arms at the Asuras' bodies. The lion also that bore the goddess, enraged and 51 with ruffled mane, stalked among the armies of Asuras, like fire through the forests. And the deep breaths, which 52 Ambiká fighting in the battle breathed forth, came into real being at once as troops by hundreds and thousands. These fought with axes, with javelins, and swords and halberds, 53 destroying the Asura bands, being invigorated by the goddess' energy. And of these bands some raised a din with 54 large drums, and others with conchs, and others besides with drums, in that great battle-festival. Then the goddess with 55 her trident, her club, with showers of spears, and with her sword and other weapons slaughtered the great Asuras in 56 hundreds, and laid others low who were bewitched with the ringing of her bell; and binding other Asuras with her noose dragged them on the ground. And others again, cloven in 57 twain by sharp slashes of her sword and crushed * by blows with her mace, lie on the ground; and some grievously 58 battered by her club vomited forth blood. Some were felled to the ground, pierced in the breast by her trident. Some being closely massed together were cut in pieces † by the 59 torrent of her arrows in the battle-field. Following the manner of an army, ‡ the afflicters of the thirty gods gave up the ghost; some with their arms cut off, and others with severed 60 necks; their heads fell from others, others were torn asunder in the middle; and other great Asuras fell to the earth with 61 legs clean cut off; some were cloven by the goddess into two parts, with a single arm and eye and foot to each part; and others fell and rose again, although with head cut off.

 62 Headless corpses, still grasping the finest weapons, fought with the goddess; and others danced there in the battle, keeping time to the strains of the musical instruments.
 63 Corpses, with heads severed, still held swords and spears and

The Deví-máhātmya.

The slaying of the Asura Mahisha.

The description of the battle is continued—The goddess slew the Asura chiefs in single combat and finally the Asura Mahisha.

The rishi spoke :

- 1 Now the great Asura, the general C'ikshura, seeing that army being slaughtered, advanced in wrath to fight with
- 2 Ambiká. The Asura rained a shower of arrows on the goddess in the battle, as a cloud deluges mount Meru's summit
- 3 with a shower of rain. The goddess, cutting asunder the masses of his arrows then as it were in play, smote his horses
- 4 with her arrows and their charioteer; and split his bow forthwith and his banner raised high aloft; and with swift missiles pierced his limbs as he stood with shattered bow.

5 His bow shattered, his chariot useless, his horses killed, his 6 charioteer slain, the Asura armed with sword and shield
 7 rushed at the goddess. With the utmost celerity he smote
 8 the lion on the head with his sharp-edged sword, and struck 9 the goddess also on her left arm. His sword shivered to 10 pieces as it touched her arm (O prince). Thereon red-eyed 11 with anger, he grasped his pike, and he, the great Asura, 12 flung it at Bhadra-kālī, as it were the Sun's orb blazing 13 brightly with its splendour from out the sky. Seeing that 14 pike falling on her, the goddess hurled her pike, and it
 15 shattered that pike into a hundred fragments and the great 16 Asura also.

17 When he, Mahisha's very valiant general, was slain, 18 C'ámara, the afflicter of the thirty gods, advanced mounted 19 on an elephant; and he also hurled his spear at the goddess.
 20 Down to the ground Ambiká quickly struck it, assailed with 21 a contemptuous hoot and rendered lustre-less. Seeing his 22 spear broken and fallen, C'ámara filled with rage flung a pike;
 23 and that she split with her arrows. Then the lion leaping 24 up fastened on to the hollow of the elephant's forehead, and 25 fought in close combat aloft with that foe of the thirty gods;
 26 but both then fell, as they were fighting, from the elephant 27 to the ground. They fought closely locked together with 28 most terrible blows. Then quickly springing up to the sky, 29 and descending, the lion severed C'ámara's head with a blow 30 from his paw.

31 And Udagra was slain in battle by the goddess with stones, 32 trees and other things, and Karála also was stricken down
 33 by her teeth and fists and feet.* And the goddess enraged 34 ground Ud-dhata to powder with blows from her club; and 35 killed Váskala with a dart, Tánura and Andhaka with arrows.
 36 And the supreme three-eyed goddess slew Ugrásya and Ugra-37 vírya and Mahá-hanu also with her trident. With her sword 38 she struck Viḍála's head clean down from his body. She

* Danta-mushṭi-talaiś; or, according to the commentator: "with the lower parts of her ivory sword-hilt."

despatched both Dur-dhara and Dur-mukha to Yama's abode with her arrows.*

- 20 Now, as his army was being thus destroyed utterly, the Asura Mahisha in his own buffalo-shape terrified her troops, 21 Some he laid low by a blow from his muzzle, and others by stamping with his hooves, and others because they were lashed 22 with his tail and gashed with his horns, and others again by his impetuous rush, his bellowing and his wheeling career, and others by the blast of his breath—thus he laid them low 23 on the face of the earth. Having laid low the van of her army, the Asura rushed to attack the great goddess' lion.
24 Thereat Ambiká displayed her wrath. And he, great in valour, pounding the surface of the earth with his hooves in his rage, tossed the mountains aloft † with his horns and 25 bellowed. Crushed by his impetuous wheelings the earth crumbled to pieces; and the sea lashed by his tail overflowed 26 in every direction; and the clouds pierced by his swaying horns were rent to fragments; mountains fell in hundreds from the sky, being cast down by the blast of his breath.
27 C'andiká looked on the great Asura, as swollen with rage he rushed on, and gave a way to her wrath then in order to slay 28 him. She flung her noose full over him, and bound the great Asura fast. And he quitted his buffalo shape when held 29 bound in the great battle, and then became a lion suddenly.
While Ambiká is cutting off his head he took the appearance 30 of a man with scymitar in hand. Straightway the goddess with her arrows swiftly pierced the man together with his scymitar and shield. Then he became a huge elephant, and 31 tugged at her great lion with his trunk and roared, but the goddess cut off his trunk with her sword as he made his tugs.

* The Bombay edition inserts four lines here. "And she, who is the Night of Fate, laid Kála low with her rod of Fate. She belaboured Ugra-darsana with very fierce blows from her scymitar. She clove Asi-loman indeed with her sword in the battle-festival. Her troops, her lion and the goddess herself raised aloud the battle-cry of victory along with those battle-festivals."

† Uc'daiḥ, which the Bombay edition reads, is preferable to uc'c'án, "high mountains."

- 32 Next the great Asura assumed his buffalo shape again, and so shook the three worlds with all that is moveable and im-33 moveable therein. Enraged thereat C'andiká, the mother of the world, quaffed a sublime beverage again and again,* and 34 laughed as her eyes gleamed ruddy. And the Asura roared out, puffed up with his strength and valour and frenzy, and 35 hurled mountains against C'andiká with his horns. And she, shivering to atoms with showers of arrows those mountains that he hurled, spoke to him in confused words, while her mouth was rendered ruddier by the mead that she had drunk.

The goddess spoke :

- 36 Roar, roar on thy brief moment, O fool, the while I quaff this mead ! The gods shall soon roar, when I shall slay thee even here.
- 37 Exclaiming thus she leaped upwards and sat herself on that great Asura, and kicked him on the neck with her foot and 38 struck him with her spear. And thereupon he, being assailed by her foot, half issued forth† from his own mouth in sooth, 39 being completely encompassed by the goddess' valour. That great Asura being thus attacked half issued forth indeed.
The goddess struck off his head with her great sword and laid him low.‡
- 40 Then perished all that Daitya army with great lamentation.
And all the hosts of the gods rose to the highest exultation.
- 41 The gods and the great heavenly rishis poured forth praises to the goddess, the Gandharva chiefs burst into song and the bevy of Apsaras into dances.

 the foes ?
- ‘ Let even enemies, purified by dying in arms, attain in sooth to the bright worlds ’—
 Such is thy most kindly intention towards even them.
- 19 And though, neither by the sharp flashes* of abundant light from thy scymitar, Nor by the copious lustre of thy spear-point, the eyes of the Asuras
 Were destroyed ; yet, as they gazed upon thy countenance
 Which bore a portion of the radiant moon, this very thing happened.
- 20 Thy disposition, O goddess, subdues the conduct of men of evil conduct ;
 And this thy form surpasses thought and rivalry by others ;
 And thy valour vanquishes those who have robbed the gods of their prowess ;
 Thou hast as it were† manifested pity thus even on enemies !
- 21 To what my this thy prowess be compared ?
 And whereto thy form most charming, which strikes fear among foes ?
 Compassion in mind and relentlessness in battle are seen In thee, O goddess, who bestowest boons even on the three worlds !
- 22 Through the destruction of the foes, these three worlds entire
 Have been saved by thee. Having slain them in the battle-front

* Visphurana ; not in the dictionary.

† Or prakaṣitaiva, “ thou hast indeed manifested,” as in the Bombay edition.

Thou hast led even those hosts of foes to heaven, and dispelled the fear
 Which beset us from the frenzied foes of the gods.
 Reverence to thee!

- 23 With thy spear protect us, O goddess !
 Protect us with thy sword also, O Ambiká !
 By the clanging of thy bell protect us,
 And by the twanging of the thong of thy bow !
- 24 In the east guard us, and in the west ;
 O C'anḍiká, guard us in the south
 By the brandishing of thy spear,
 And also in the north, O goddess !
- 25 Whatever gentle forms of thee wander about in the three worlds,
 And whatever exceedingly terrible forms wander, by means of them guard us and the earth !
- 26 Thy sword and spear and club, and whatever other weapons,
 O Ambiká,
 Rest in thy pliant hand, with them guard us on every side !

The ṛishi spoke :

- 27 Thus was she, the Upholder of the worlds, hymned by the gods, and they paid honour to her with celestial flowers that blossomed in Nandana, and with perfumes and unguents.
- 28 Moreover all the thirty gods in faith censured her with heavenly incenses. Benignly sweet in countenance she spoke to all the prostrate gods.

The goddess spoke :

- 29 Choose, ye thirty all ! whatever ye desire of me, for I grant it with pleasure, being highly honoured by these hymns.*

The gods spoke :

- 30 Thou, O adorable lady, hast accomplished all, nought remains undone, in that this Asura Mahisha, our foe has 31 been slain. Yet if thou must grant us a boon, O goddess great! whenever we call thee, call thee to mind, do thou 32 away with our direst calamities! And whatever mortal shall praise thee with these hymns, O lady of spotless countenance, to prosper him in wealth and wife and other blessings by means of riches, success and power do thou incline always, O Ambiká, who art propitious to us!

The ṛishi spoke :

33 Being thus propitiated by the gods for the good of the world and on their own behalf, "Be it so!" said she, Bhadra-káli; and vanished from their sight, O king.
34 Thus I have narrated this, O king, how the goddess came into being of yore from out of the gods' bodies, she who desires the 35 good of all the three worlds. And again she came into existence having the body of Gaurí, just as she did before, in order 36 to slay the wicked Daityas and Śumbha and Niśumbha, and to preserve the worlds, as benefactress of the gods. Hearken then to what I have declared to thee. I have truly told it thee.

CANTO LXXXV.

The Deví-máhátmya.

The goddess' conversation with the Asura's messenger.

The Asuras Śumbha and Niśumbha conquered the gods and drove them from heaven.—The gods invoked C'andiká at Himavat in a hymn, appealing to her by all her attributes to help them.—Párvatí came there and C'andiká sprang forth from her body.—The servants of Śumbha and Niśumbha saw her and extolled her perfect beauty to Śumbha.—He sent a messenger to invite her to marry him.—She explained that by a vow she could marry no one who did not conquer her in fight.

The ṛishi spoke :

Of yore the Asuras Śumbha and Niśumbha, trusting in their pride and strength, robbed Śaśi's lord of the three 2 worlds* and of his portions of the sacrifices; they both usurped likewise the sun's dignity and the moon's dominion, 3 and Kuvera's and Yama's and Varuṇa's; and they both exercised Vāyu's authority and Agni's sphere of action.†

 Thereby the gods were scattered, deprived of their sover-4 eignties and put to rout. The thirty gods, bereft of their dominion and set at nought by those two great Asuras, all 5 recall to mind that never-vanquished goddess,—“Thou didst grant us the boon,‡ ‘As ye when in calamities shall call me to mind,§ that very moment will I put an end to all your direst 6 calamities.’” Making this resolve the gods went to Hima-vat, lord among mountains, and there raised their hymn to the goddess, who is Viṣṇu's illusive power.||

The gods spoke :

7 Reverence to the goddess, to the great goddess !
 To her who is auspicious reverence perpetually !
 Reverence to Prakṛiti the good !
 Submissive we fall prostrate before her ! ¶
 8 Reverence to her who is terrible, to her who is constant !
 To Gaurī, to Dhātṛi reverence, yea reverence !
 And to the Moon-light, to her who has the moon's form,
 To her who is happy, reverence continually !

ing forth from the treasure-house of her body the auspicious
 39 goddess spoke—"For me this hymn is uttered by the assembled gods, who have been set at nought by the Daitya 40 Śumbha and routed in battle by Niśumbha." Because Ambikā issued forth from the treasure-house* of Párvatī's body, she is therefore named in song as Kaushikí† among all the worlds. Now after she had issued forth, the other also, even Párvatī, became Kṛishṇá; she is celebrated as Káliká; she fixed her abode on Mount Hima-vat.
 42 Thereafter C'aṇḍa, and Muṇḍa, the two servants of Śumbha and Niśumbha, saw Ambikā displaying her sublime and most 43 captivating form; and both spake out unto Śumbha;—
 "What woman then, most surpassingly captivating, dwells 44 here, illuminating Mount Hima-vat, O great king? Such sublime beauty was never in sooth seen by anyone anywhere; let it be ascertained if she is any goddess, and let her be taken 45 possession of, O lord of the Asuras. A gem among women, surpassingly beautiful in body, illuminating the regions of the sky with her lustre, there she is then, O lord of the 46 Daityas; deign, Sir, to look at her. Moreover, whatever gems, precious stones, elephants, horses and other valuable things indeed exist in the three worlds, O lord, all those display their splendour at this present time in thy house.
 47 Airāvata, gem among elephants, has been captured from Purandara; and this Párijáta tree and also the horse Uccáihśravas. Here stands the heavenly chariot yoked with swans in thy court-yard; it has been brought here, the wonderful 48 chariot composed of gems, which belonged to Brahmá. Here is the Nidhi Mahá-padma,‡ captured from the Lord of wealth. And the Ocean gave a garland made of filaments 49 and of undying lotus flowers. In thy house stands Varuṇa's umbrella, which streams with gold. And here is the choice 50 chariot that belonged to Prajá-pati formerly. Thou, O lord, hast carried off Death's power which is named Utkrānti-dā.

 The noose of the Ocean-king is in thy brother's possession.
 52 And Nisumbha has every kind of gem which is produced in the sea. Agni also gave thee two garments which are 53 purified by fire. Thus, O lord of the Daityas, all gems have been captured by thee; why dost thou not seize this auspicious lady, this gem of womankind?"

The ṛishi spoke:

54 Śumbha, on hearing this speech then from C'anḍa and Muṇḍa, sent the great Asura Su-grīva as messenger to the 55 goddess, saying—"Go and address her thus and thus according to my words, and lightly conduct the matter so that she may come to me of her own good pleasure." He went to 56 where the goddess sat on a very bright spot in the mountain and spoke gently with mellifluous voice.

The messenger spoke:

57 O goddess! Śumbha, lord of the Daityas, is supreme lord, over the three worlds. A messenger am I, sent by him; to 58 thy presence here I have come. Hearken to what he has said, whose command is never resisted among all beings of divine origin, and who has vanquished every foe of the 59 Daityas—"Mine are all the three worlds; obedient to my authority are the gods, I eat every portion of the sacrifices 60 separately. The choicest gems in the three worlds are altogether under my power; and so are the finest elephants and the chariot of the lord of the gods, since I have captured 61 them. That gem among horses, named Uććaiḥ-śravasa, which came forth at the churning of the sea of milk, was presented to me by the immortals who prostrated themselves before me.
 62 And whatever other created things in the shape of gems existed among the gods, Gandharvas and Nāgas, they were presented even to me, O brilliant lady. I esteem thee thou, who art such, approach unto me, since I am an enjoyer 64 of gems. Either to me, or to my younger brother Niśumbha of wide-reaching prowess, approach thou, O lady of quick 65 side-glances, since thou art in truth a gem. Supreme dominion beyond compare thou shalt gain by wedding me.

 Understand and consider this, and come unto wedlock with me !”

The rishi spoke :

66 Thus accosted the goddess, smiling deeply within herself, she, Durgā the adorable and good, who supports this world, sang this reply then.

The goddess spoke :

67 Truly hast thou spoken; nought hast thou uttered falsely herein. Sovereign of the three worlds is Sumbha, and like 68 unto him is Niśumbha also! But how can that which has been promised concerning this myself be fulfilled falsely?
 Hearken, what vow I made formerly by reason of my small 69 understanding at that time,—‘He who vanquishes me in fight, who forces my pride from me, and who is my match in 70 strength in the world, he shall be my husband.’ Let Sumbha come here then, or Niśumbha the great Asura; let him vanquish me—what need of delay here? and let him lightly take my hand in marriage !

The messenger spoke :

71 Proud art thou! Talk not so before me, O goddess!
 What male in the three worlds may stand front to front with 72 Sumbha and Niśumbha? All the gods verily stand not face to face with even the other Daityas in battle, O goddess;
 how much less canst thou so stand, a woman single-handed!
 73 With Sumbha and those other Daityas, against whom Indra and all the other gods stood not in battle, how shalt thou, 74 a woman, venture face to face? Do thou, being such, to whom I have in sooth delivered my message, go near unto Sumbha and Niśumbha; let it not be that thou shalt go with thy dignity shattered in that thou wilt be dragged thither by thy hair!

The goddess spoke :

- 75 So strong as this is Śumbha ! and so exceedingly heroic is Nisumbha ! What can I do, since there stands my ill-con-76 sidered promise of long ago ? Go thou thyself ; make known respectfully to the lord of the Asuras all this that I have said to thee, and let him do whatever is fitting.

CANTO LXXXVI.

The Devī-māhātmya :

The slaying of Śumbha and Nisumbha's general Dhūmra-ločana.

Śumbha despatched his general Dhūmra-ločana and an army to capture the goddess and she destroyed them.—He then despatched O'anda and Munḍa with another army.

The ṛishi spoke :

- 1 The messenger, on hearing this speech from the goddess, was filled with indignation, and approaching related it fully 2 to the Daitya king. The Asura monarch then, after hearing that report from his messenger, was wroth and commanded Dhūmra-ločana, a chieftain of the Daityas ;— 3 “ Ho ! Dhūmra-ločana, haste thee together with thy army ; fetch by force that shrew, who will be unnerved when dragged 4 along by her hair. Or if any man besides stands up to offer her deliverance, let him be slain, be he an Immortal, a Yaksha or a Gandharva forsooth.”

The ṛishi spoke :

- 5 Thereupon at his command the Daitya Dhūmra-ločana went 6 forthwith quickly, accompanied by sixty thousand Asuras. On seeing the goddess stationed on the snowy mountain, he cried aloud to her there—“ Come forward to the presence of Śumbha 7 and Nisumbha ; if thou wilt not, lady, approach my lord with affection now, I will here take thee by force, who wilt be unnerved since thou shalt be dragged along by thy hair!"

The goddess spoke :

- 8 Sent by the king of the Daityas, mighty thyself, and accompanied by an army, thou dost thus take me by force—then what can I do unto thee?

The ṛishi spoke :

- 9 At this reply the Asura Dhúmra-loćana rushed towards her.
 10 Then Ambiká with a mere roar reduced him to ashes. And the great army of Asuras enraged poured on Ambiká a shower 11 both of sharp arrows and of javelins and axes. The lion that carried* the goddess, shaking his mane in anger and uttering a 12 most terrific roar, fell on the army of Asuras; he slaughtered some Asuras with a blow from his fore-paw, and others with his mouth. and others, very great Asuras, by striking 13 them with his hind foot.† The lion with his claws tore out the entrails of some, and struck their heads off with a cuff-like 14 blow. And he severed arms and heads from others, and shaking his mane drank the blood that flowed from the entrails‡ of others. In a moment all that army was brought to destruction by the high-spirited lion, who bore the goddess and who was enraged exceedingly.
 16 When he heard that that Asura Dhúmra-loćana was slain by the goddess, and all his army besides was destroyed by the 17 goddess' lion, Śumbha, the lord of the Daityas, fell into a rage and his lip quivered greatly, and he commanded the two 18 mighty Asuras C'aṇḍa and Muṇḍa,—“Ho, C'aṇḍa! Ho, Muṇḍa! take with you a multitude of troops and go there; and going 19 there bring her here speedily, dragging her by her hair or binding her; if ye have a doubt of that, then let her be slain outright in fight by all the Asuras brandishing all their 20 weapons. When that shrew is slain and her lion stricken down, seize her, Ambiká, bind her and bring her quickly!”

The Devī-māhātmya.The slaying of C'aṇḍa and Muṇḍa.

The goddess Kálí destroyed the second Asura army and also the generals C'aṇḍa and Muṇḍa—C'aṇḍiká gave Kálí as a reward the name C'ámuṇḍá.

The fishi spoke :

- 1 Then at his command the Daityas, led by C'aṇḍa and
- 2 Muṇḍa, and arrayed in the four-fold order of an army, march-
- 3 ed with weapons uplifted. Soon they saw the goddess, slightly
- 4 smiling, seated upon the lion, on a huge golden peak of the
- 5 majestic mountain. On seeing her some of them made a
- 6 strenuous effort to capture her, and others approached her
- 7 holding their bows bent and their swords drawn.
- 8 Thereat Ambiká uttered her wrath aloud against those foes,
- 9 and her countenance then grew dark as ink in her wrath. Out
- 10 from the surface of her forehead, which was rugged with
- 11 frowns, issued suddenly Kálí of the terrible countenance,
- 12 armed with a sword and noose, bearing a many-coloured
- skull-topped staff,* decorated with a garland of skulls, clad in
- a tiger's skin, very appalling because of her emaciated flesh,
- exceedingly wide of mouth, lolling out her tongue terribly,
- having deep-sunk reddish eyes, and filling the regions of the
- sky with her roars. She fell upon the great Asuras impetuous-
- ly, dealing slaughter among the host, and devoured that army
- of the gods' foes there. Taking up the elephants with one - hand she flung them into her mouth, together with their rear-
- men and drivers and their warrior-riders and bells. Flinging
- likewise warrior with his horses, and chariot with its driver
- into her mouth, she ground them most frightfully with her
- teeth. She seized one by the hair, and another by the neck ;
- and she kicked another with her foot, and crushed another
- against her breast. And she seized with her mouth the weapons and the great arms which those Asuras abandoned, 13 and crunched them up with her teeth in her fury. She crushed all that host of mighty and high-spirited Asuras; 14 and devoured some and battered others; some were slain with her sword, some were struck with her skull-topped staff, and other Asuras met their death being wounded with the edge of her teeth.

15 Seeing all that host of Asuras laid low in a moment, C'aṇḍa rushed against her, Kālī, who was exceedingly appal-16 ling. Muṇḍa the great Asura covered her, the terrible-eyed goddess, with very terrible showers of arrows and with dis-17 cuses hurled in thousands. Those discuses seemed to be penetrating her countenance in multitudes, like as very many solar orbs might penetrate the body of a thunder-cloud.
 18 Thereat Kālī, who was roaring frightfully, laughed terribly with excessive fury, showing the gleam of her unsightly teeth 19 within her dreadful mouth. And the goddess, mounting upon her great lion, rushed at C'aṇḍa, and seizing him by his hair 20 struck off his head with her sword. And Muṇḍa also rushed at her when he saw C'aṇḍa laid low; him also she felled to the 21 ground, stricken with her scymitar in her fury. Then the army, so much as escaped unslain, seeing C'aṇḍa laid low and most valiant Muṇḍa also, seized with panic fled in all directions.

22 And Kālī, holding C'aṇḍa's head and Muṇḍa also, approached C'aṇḍikā and said, her voice mingled with passionate loud 23 laughter—"Here I have brought thee C'aṇḍa and Muṇḍa, two great beasts; thou thyself shalt slay Sumbha and Niśumbha in the battle-sacrifice."

The ṛishi spoke :

24 Thereon, seeing those two great Asuras C'aṇḍa and Muṇḍa brought to her, auspicious C'aṇḍikā spoke to Kālī this witty 25 speech,* "Because thou hast seized both C'aṇḍa and Muṇḍa and brought them, thou, O goddess, shalt therefore be famed in the world by the name C'āmuṇḍā!"

CANTO LXXXVIII.

The Devī-māhātmya.

The slaying of Rakta-vīja.

Sumbha sent forth all his armies against C'anḍikā—To help her the Energies (Śaktis) of the gods took bodily shape—C'anḍikā despatched Śiva to offer terms of peace to Sumbha, but the Asura hosts attacked her and the battle began—C'anḍikā's fight with the great Asura Rakta-vīja is described—He was killed.

The ṛishi spoke :

- 1 After both the Daitya C'anḍa was slain and Muṇḍa was laid low, and many soldiers were destroyed, the lord of the Asuras,
- 2 majestic Sumbha, with mind overcome by wrath, gave command then to array all the Daitya hosts,—“Now let the

 8 terrible army at hand, filled the space between the earth and 9 the firmament with the twanging of her bow-string. Thereon her lion roared exceedingly loud, O king; and Ambiká augmented* those roars with the clanging of her bell. Kálí, filling the regions of the sky with the noise from her bow-string, from her lion and from her bell, and expanding her mouth wide with her terrific roars, had the predominance.† 10 On hearing that roar which filled the four regions of the sky, the Daitya armies enraged‡ surrounded the goddess' lion and Kálí.
- 11 At this moment, O king, in order to destroy the gods' foes, and for the well-being of the lion-like Immortals, there issued 12 forth endowed with excessive vigour and strength the Energies§ from the bodies of Brahmá, Śiva, Guha and Vishṇu

 14 Energy advanced to fight with the Asuras. In the front of a heavenly car drawn by swans advanced Brahmá's Energy, bearing a rosary of seeds and an earthen water-pot; she is called 15 Brahmání. Maheśvara's Energy, seated on a bull, grasping a fine trident, and wearing a girdle of large snakes, arrived, 16 adorned with a digit of the moon. And Kumára's Energy, Ambiká, with spear in hand and riding on a choice peacock, 17 advanced in Guha's shape to attack the Daityas. Likewise Vishṇu's Energy, seated upon Garuḍa, advanced with conch, seated upon the lord of elephants and having a thousand eyes, 21 arrived; as is Śakra, such indeed was she. Then those Energies of the gods surrounded Śiva. He said to C'andikā, "Let the Asuras be slain forthwith through my good-will."

 22 Thereupon from the goddess' body there came forth
 C'andikā's Energy, most terrific, exceedingly fierce, howling 23 like a hundred jackals. And she the unconquered said to Śiva, who was smoke-coloured and had matted locks, "Be thou, my lord, a messenger to the presence of Śumbha and 24 Niśumbha. Say unto the two overweening Dānavas, Śumbha are longing for battle, come ye on then! let my jackals be

 Śiva himself to be ambassador,* she has hence attained fame as Śiva-dūtī in this world.
- 28 Those great Asuras however, on hearing the goddess' speech fully announced, were filled with indignation and went where†

with the onset of her darts and crushing them with her skull-topped staff.* And Brahmáñi caused the foes to lose their courage by casting water on them from her earthen pot, and weakened their vigour, by whatever way she ran. Maheśwara's Energy slew Daityas with her trident, and Vishṇu's Energy with her discus, and Kumára's Energy, very wrathful, slew them with her javelin. Torn to pieces by the down-rush of the thunder-bolt hurled by Indra's Energy, Daityas and Dánavas fell on the earth in hundreds, pouring out streams of blood. Shattered by the hog-embodied Energy with blows from her snout, wounded in their breasts by the points of her tusches, and torn by her discus, demons fell down. And Nṛsiṃha's Energy roamed about in the battle, devouring other great Asuras who were torn by her claws, as she filled the intermediate region of the sky with her roaring.† Asuras, demoralized by Śiva-dúti with her violent loud laughs, fell down on the earth; she then devoured those fallen ones. Seeing the enraged band of Mothers‡ crushing the great Asuras thus by various means, the troops of the gods' foes perished.

Rakta-víja, a great Asura, seeing the Daityas, who were hard-pressed by the band of Mothers, intent on fleeing, strode forward to fight in wrath. When from his body there falls to the ground a drop of blood, at that moment starts up from the earth an Asura of his stature. He, a great Asura, with club in hand fought with Indra's Energy, and Indra's Energy then struck Rakta-víja with her thunder-bolt; blood flowed quickly from him when wounded by the thunder-bolt. Thereupon stood up together fresh combatants, like him in body, like him in valour; for as many blood-drops fell from his body, so many men came into being, like him in courage, strength and valour. when his head was wounded by the fall of her thunder-bolt, his blood poured forth; therefrom were born men by thousands. And Vishṇu's Energy struck at this foe with her discus in the battle. Indra's Energy beat that lord of the Asuras with her club. The world was filled by the thousands of great Asuras, who were his equals, and who sprang from the blood that flowed from him when cloven by the discus of Vishṇu's Energy. Kumára's Energy struck the great Asura Rakta-víja with her spear, and Varáha's Energy also struck him with her sword, and Mahéśvara's Energy with her trident. And the Daitya Rakta-víja, that great Asura, filled full of wrath, struck every one of the Mothers in turn with his club. By the stream of blood, which fell on the earth from him when he received many wounds from the spears, darts and other weapons, Asuras came verily* into being in hundreds. And those Asuras who sprang from that Asura's blood pervaded the whole world; thereat the gods fell into the utmost terror. Seeing the gods dejected, C'aṇḍika spoke with haste; she said to Káli, "O C'ámundá! stretch out thy mouth wide; with this mouth do thou quickly take in the great Asuras, which are the drops of blood, that have come into being out of Rakta-víja† at the descent of my weapon on him. Roam about in the battle, devouring the great Asuras who sprang from him; so shall this Daitya with his blood ebbing away meet destruction. These fierce demons are being devoured by thee and at the same time no others will be produced."

Having enjoined her thus, the goddess next smote him with her dart. Káli swallowed Rakta-víja's blood with her mouth. Then he struck C'aṇḍiká with his club there; and the blow of his club caused her no pain, even the slightest, but from his stricken body blood flowed copiously, and from whatever direction it came, C'ámundá takes it then with her mouth. The great Asuras, who sprang up from the flow of blood in her mouth, C'ámundá both devoured them and quaffed his blood. The goddess smote Rakta-víja with her dart, her thunder-bolt,

The slaying of Nísumbha.

Nísumbha attacked the goddess C'andiká and was worsted in single combat.—Sumbha came to his help, but the goddess foiled him, and slew Nísumbha—Numbers of the Asuras were destroyed.

The king spoke :

- 1 Wonderful is this that thou, Sir, hast related to me, the majesty of the goddess' exploits in connexion with 2 the slaying of Rakta-víja ; and I wish to hear further what deed did Sumbha do after Rakta-víja was killed, and what the very irascible Nísumbha did.

The rishi spoke :

- 3 After Rakta-víja was slain and other demons were killed in the fight, the Asura Sumbha gave way to unbounded wrath, 4 and Nísumbha also. Pouring out his indignation at beholding his great army being slaughtered, Nísumbha then rushed 5 forward with the flower of the Asura army. In front of him and behind and on both sides great Asuras, biting their lips 6 and enraged, advanced to slay the goddess. Sumbha also went forward, mighty in valour, surrounded with his own troops, to slay C'andiká in his rage, after engaging in battle with 7 the Mothers. Then occurred a desperate combat between the goddess and Sumbha and Nísumbha, who both, like two thunder-clouds, rained a most tempestuous shower of arrows

8 on her. C'andiká with multitudes of arrows quickly split the arrows shot by them, and smote the two Asura lords on their limbs with her numerous weapons.

9 Niśumbha grasping a sharp scymitar and glittering shield struck the lion, the noble beast that bore the goddess, on the 10 head. When her animal was struck, the goddess quickly clove Niśumbha's superb sword with a horse-shoe-shaped arrow, and also his shield on which eight moons were portrayed. When his shield was cloven and his sword too, the 11 Asura hurled his spear; and that his missile also, as it came towards her, she split in two with her discus. Then Niśumbha, the Dánava, puffed up with wrath, seized a dart; and that also, when it came, the goddess shattered with a blow of 12 her fist. And then aiming* his club he flung it against C'andiká, yet that was shivered by the goddess' trident and 13 became ashes. As that lordly Daitya then advanced with battle-axe in hand, the goddess struck him with a multitude of arrows and laid him low on the ground.

14 When his brother Niśumbha, who was terrible in prowess, fell to the ground, Sumbha in utmost fury strode forward to 15 slay Ambiká. And he, standing in his chariot, appeared to fill the entire sky with his eight arms, which were lifted far on high grasping his superb weapons.

16 Beholding him approaching, the goddess sounded her conch, and made her bow also give forth from its string a 17 note which was exceedingly hard to endure. And she filled all regions with the clanging of her bell, which caused 18 the vigour of all the Daitya hosts to die away. Then her lion filled the heaven, the earth and the ten regions of the sky with loud roars, which checked the copious flow of 19 the exudation from the demons' rutting elephants. Kálí springing upward then struck the heaven and the earth with 20 both her hands; the boom thereof drowned those previous sounds. Śiva-dúti† uttered a loud inauspicious laugh. At

- those sounds the Asuras trembled;* Sumbha gave way 22 to utmost rage. When Ambiká cried out "Stand, O evilsouled! stand!" the gods who had taken their stations in the air then called to her, "Be thou victorious!"
- 23 The spear flaming most terribly, which Sumbha approaching hurled, that, gleaming like a mass of fire as it came along, was 24 driven aside by a great fire-brand. The vault between the three worlds reverberated with Sumbha's lion-like roaring, but the dreadful sound of the slaughter among his soldiers sur-25 passed that, O king. The goddess split the arrows shot by Sumbha, and Sumbha the arrows that she discharged, each with her and his sharp arrows in hundreds and thousands.
 26 C'aṇḍiká enraged thereat smote him with a dart. Wounded therewith he fell in a faint to the ground.
- 27 Thereupon Nisumbha, regaining consciousness, seized his bow again and struck the goddess, and Kálí and the lion with 28 arrows. And the Dánava lord, that son of Diti, putting forth a myriad arms, again covered C'aṇḍiká with a myriad discuses.† 29 The goddess then enraged, she, Durgá who destroys the afflictions of adversity, split those discuses and those arrows with 30 her own arrows. Then Nisumbha seizing his club rushed impetuously at C'aṇḍiká to slay her outright, with the Daitya 31 host surrounding him. As he was just falling upon her, C'aṇḍiká swiftly clove his club with her sharp-edged scymi-32 tar. And he took hold of a dart. C'aṇḍiká with a dart hurled swiftly pierced Nisumbha, the afflicter of the Immor-tals, in the heart, as he approached with dart in hand.
 33 When he was pierced by the dart, out of his heart issued another man of great strength and great valour, exclaiming 34 "Stand!" When he stepped forth, the goddess laughing aloud then struck off his head with her scymitar; thereupon he fell to the ground.
- 35 The lion then devoured those Asuras whose necks he had crushed with his savage teeth, and Kálí and Siva-dúti de- 36 voured the others. Some great Asuras perished, being

The Devī-māhātmya.

The slaying of Sumbha.

Ambikā absorbed all the other goddesses, and fighting with Sumbha in single combat, killed him.—The universe was then filled with joy.

The ṛishi spoke :

- 1 Seeing his brother Niśumbha slain, who was dear to him as his life, and his army being slaughtered, Śumbha in
- 2 wrath spoke thus—"O Durgā, who art tainted with the arrogance of strength, bring not thy pride here, thou who, trusting in the strength of the other goddesses, dost fight in exceeding haughtiness!"

The goddess spoke :

- 3 Alone verily am I in the world here; what other goddess is there besides me? See, vile one! that these goddesses, who have their divine power from me, are entering into me indeed.
- 4 Then all those goddesses, Brahmāṇī and the others, became absorbed into the goddess' breasts; Ambikā then remained alone indeed.

The goddess spoke :

- 5 Whereas I existed* with my divine power in many forms here—that has been drawn in by me, truly alone I stand now. Be thou steadfast in combat !

The řishi spoke :

- 6 Thereupon commenced a battle between them both, the goddess and Śumbha, while all the gods and the Asuras 7 looked on—a battle without quarter. With showers of arrows, with sharp weapons and also with pitiless missiles both engaged anew in a combat which set all the world in fear.
8 And the lord of the Daityas broke the heavenly missiles, which Ambiká discharged in hundreds, with weapons that 9 parried them. And the supreme goddess in merest play broke the heavenly missiles that he discharged, with fierce 10 shouts, ejaculations and other sounds. Then the Asura covered the goddess with hundreds of arrows, and the goddess enraged thereat split his bow also with her arrows.
11 And when his bow was split the lord of the Daityas took up his spear. The goddess split it, as he held it in his 12 hand, with a discus. Next the supreme monarch of the Daityas, seizing his scymitar and sun-like shield, on which a hundred moons were portrayed, rushed at the goddess† 13 at that moment. Just as he was falling upon her, C'aṇḍiká hastily split his scymitar with sharp arrows shot from her bow, and his shield also which was spotless as the sun's rays.
14 With his steeds wounded, with his bow split, without a charioteer, the Daitya then‡ grasped his terrible mace, being 15 ready to slay Ambiká. As he was falling upon her, she clove his mace with sharp arrows ; nevertheless raising his fist 16 he rushed swiftly at her. The lordly Daitya brought his fist down on the goddess' heart, and the goddess also smote 17 him on his breast with her palm. Wounded by the blow of

- her palm the Daitya king fell suddenly on the earth; and 18 again indeed he rose up, and springing upward he seized the goddess and mounted on high into the sky. There also 19 C'āṇḍikā, being without any support, fought with him. The Daitya and C'āṇḍikā then fought at first with each other in the sky in a close combat, which wrought dismay among the 20 Siddhas and munis; after carrying on the close combat for a very long time with him, Ambikā lifted him up then and 21 whirled him around and flung him on the earth. When flung thus he touched the earth, he raised his fist hastily and rushed, evil of soul as he was, with the wish to kill C'āṇḍikā.
 22 Seeing him, the lord of all the Daitya folk, approaching, the goddess then pierced him in the breast with a dart and 23 felled him down on the earth. Shattered by the point of the goddess' dart he fell lifeless on the ground, shaking the whole earth and its seas, islands and mountains.
 24 When that evil-souled demon was slain, the universe became placid, the earth regained perfect well-being, and the 25 sky grew pure. Portent-clouds, which were full of flame before, became tranquil, and the rivers kept within their 26 channels, when he was stricken down there. All the bands of gods then grew exceedingly joyful in mind, when he was 27 slain; the Gandharvas sang out sweetly, and others of them sounded their instruments, and the bebies of Apsarases danced; and favourable breezes blew, very brilliant grew the sun, and the tranquil sacred fires blazed freely, and tranquil became the strange sounds that had occurred in the regions of the sky.

 O Nárāyaṇí, reverence be to thee !

- Even us like children from sins !
- 26 Besmirched with the blood and fat of the Asuras
As with mire, gleaming with rays,
May thy scymitar be for our welfare !
O C'aṇḍiká, to thee we bow !
- 27 Thou destroyest all sicknesses, when gratified ;
But when wrathful destroyest all longed-for desires.
No calamity befalls men who have sought unto thee !
They who have sought unto thee become verily a refuge themselves !
- 28 This slaughter that thou hast now wrought
On the great Asuras who hate righteousness, O goddess ,
By multiplying thy body in many forms,—
O Ambiká, what other goddess achieves that ?
- 29 In the sciences, in the scriptures, which need the lamp of discrimination,
And in the ancient sayings, who but thou Within the pit of selfishness, wherein is exceeding great darkness,
Causes this universe to whirl about most grievously ?
- 30 Wherever dwell Rákshasas and virulently-poisonous Nágas, Wherever foes exist, wherever the powers of the Dasyus,
And where flaming fire appears amid the ocean,
There abiding thou dost safeguard the universe !
- 31 O queen of the universe, thou safeguardest the universe !
Thou hast the nature of the universe, for thou upholdest the universe.
Thou art the lady worthy to be praised by the lord of the universe. They are The refuge of the universe, who bow in faith before thee !
- 32 O goddess, be gracious ! Protect us wholly from fear of our foes
Perpetually, as thou hast at this very time saved us promptly by the slaughter of the Asuras !*
- And bring thou quickly to rest the sins of all the worlds

* For yathá sura-badhád read yathásura-badhád.

- And the great calamities which have sprung from the maturing of portents!
- 33 To us who are prostrate be thou gracious,
O goddess, who takest away affliction from the universe!
O thou worthy of praise from the dwellers in the three worlds,
Bestow thou boons on the worlds!"

The goddess spoke:

- 34 I am ready to bestow a boon. O ye hosts of gods, choose whatever boon ye desire in your mind; I grant it as a thing that benefits the worlds.

The gods spoke:

- 35 O queen of all, complete thou* thus indeed the pacification of every trouble of the three worlds, and the destruction of our enemies.

The goddess spoke:

- 36 When the twenty-eighth age has arrived, in the Vaivasvata Manv-antara, two other great Asuras shall be born, Sumbha 37 and Nisumbha. Then born as the offspring of Yaśodā's womb in the cowherd Nanda's house, and dwelling on the Vindhya 38 mountains, I will destroy them both. And again becoming incarnate in a very terrible form on the face of the earth, I 39 will slay the Vaiprac'itta† Dānavas; and when I devour those fierce and great Vaiprac'itta Asuras, my teeth shall become 40 red like the flowers of the pomegranate. Hence the gods in Svarga and men in the world of mortals praising me shall always talk of me as "Red-toothed."‡
- 41 And again after a period of a hundred years during which rain and water shall fail, praised by the munis I shall be 42 born, but not womb-begotten, on the earth. Then because I shall behold the munis with a hundred eyes, mankind shall therefore celebrate me as "Hundred-eyed."§

43 Next, O ye gods, I shall support* the whole world with the life-sustaining vegetables, which shall grow out of my own 44 body, during a period of heavy rain. I shall gain fame on the earth then as Śákambharí; † and in that very period I shall slay the great Asura named Durgama.

45 And again when taking a terrible form on mount Himavat I shall destroy Rákshasas for the sake of delivering the munis, 46 all the munis bowing their bodies reverently shall laud me then; hence my name "The terrible goddess" ‡ shall become celebrated.

47 When Aruṇákshaṣ shall work great trouble in the three worlds, I shall take a bee-like form, the form of innumerable 48 bees, and shall slay the great Asura for the welfare of the three worlds, and folk shall then extol me everyone as Bhrámarí. ||

49 Thus whenever trouble shall arise caused by the Dánavas, at each such time I shall become incarnate and accomplish the foes' destruction.

CANTO XCII.

The Deví-máhátmya.

The slaying of Sumbha and Niśumbha concluded.

The goddess descants on the merits of this poem and the beneficent results of reading and listening to it.—The gods regained their rights and the Daityas departed to Pátála.—Her attributes and beneficence are extolled.

The goddess spoke :

- 1 And whoever with mind composed shall praise me constant-

- 3 assuredly. And those who shall celebrate the destruction of
- 4 Madhu and Kaitabha, the slaughter of the Asura Mahisha,
- 5 and the slaying of Sumbha and Nisumbha likewise; and
- 6 those also who shall listen* in faith to this poem of my

- 8 the fourteenth and on the ninth, with intent mind, to them
- 9 shall happen no wrong-doing whatever, nor calamities that
- 10 arise from wrong-doing, nor poverty, nor indeed deprivation of
- 11 their desires.† Never shall he experience fear from enemies,
- 12 from robbers, nor from kings, nor from weapon or fire or

- may this poem of my majesty quell all kinds of calamities,
- which arise from grievous pestilence,‡ and the three-fold
- portent. Where this poem is duly read constantly at my
- sanctuary, I will never forsake that place, and there my
- presence is fixed. At the offering of the bali, and during
- worship, in the ceremonies with fire, and at a great festival,
- all this story of my exploits must verily be proclaimed and
- listened to. I will accept with kindness both the bali
- worship that is paid, and the oblation by fire that is offered, by

- the great annual worship that is performed in autumn time,
- the man, who listens filled with faith to this poem of my 16 Thereby portents turn into calm, and also dreadful eclipses of the planets, and also an ill-dream which men have seen; and it is the best promoter of friendship among men when union

The ṛishi spoke:

29 Having spoken thus the adorable C'aṇḍiká, who is fierce in prowess, vanished there, while the gods were gazing indeed 30 on her. The gods also relieved from fear, their foes being slain, all resumed their own dominions as before, participating in their shares of sacrifices.

31 And the Daityas—when Śumbha, that most fierce foe of the gods, who brought ruin on the world and who was peerless 32 in prowess, had been slain by the goddess in fight, and Nisumbha also great in valour was slain—all came to Pátála.

Thus that adorable goddess, although everlasting, yet 33 taking birth again and again, accomplishes the safeguarding of the world, O king. By her this universe is bewitched; she 34 verily gives birth to the universe. And when besought, she bestows knowledge; when gratified, she bestows prosperity.

CANTO XCIII.

The Devī-māhātmya (concluded).

*After hearing this poem, king Su-ratha and the vaiśya practised austerities and worshipped the goddess.—O'ṇḍiká appeared to them and gave the king the boon that he should be Manu Sávarṇi.
 in a future life, and bestowed knowledge on the vaiśya.*

The ṛishi spoke :

1 I have now related to thee, O king, this sublime poem the Devī-māhātmya. Such majestic power has the goddess, by 2 whom this world is upheld. Moreover knowledge is conferred by her who is the adorable Viṣṇu's Illusive power. By her thou and this vaiśya and other men of discrimination, and 3 celebrated men are bewitched; and others shall become bewitched. Go unto her, the supreme queen, as to a place of refuge, O great king. She indeed, when propitiated by men, bestows enjoyment, Svarga and final emancipation from existence.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

4 Having heard this his speech, king Su-ratha fell prostrate before the illustrious ṛishi who performed severe penances, 5 and being down-cast by his excessive regard for self and by the deprivation of his kingdom, went forthwith to per-6 form austerities; and the vaiśya, O great muni, in order to get a vision of Ambá, took up his station on a sand-bank

* A-lakshmi.

- 7 in a river; and the vaiśya practised austerities, muttering the sublime hymn to the goddess. They both made an earthen image of the goddess on that sand-bank, and paid worship
 8 to it with flowers, incense, fire and libations of water. Abstaining from food, restricting their food, concentrating their minds on her, keeping their thoughts composed, they both 9 offered the bali offering also sprinkled with blood drawn from their own limbs. When they continued with subdued souls to propitiate her thus for three years, C'aṇḍiká, who upholds the world, well-pleased spoke in visible shape.

The goddess spoke :

- 10 What thou dost solicit, O king, and thou O rejoicer of thy family, receive ye all that from me; well-pleased I bestow it.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 11 Then the king chose a kingdom that should not perish in another life, and in this life his own kingdom wherein the 12 power of his enemies should be destroyed by force. Then the vaiśya also, whose mind was down-cast, chose knowledge,—to be wise, knowing 'what is mine,' and 'what I am,'—knowledge that causes the downfall of worldly attachments.

The goddess spoke :

- 13 O king, thou shalt obtain thine own kingdom in a very few days, after slaying thine enemies; it shall be steadfast for 14 thee there; and when dead thou shalt gain another life from the god Vivasvat, and shalt be a Manu on earth, by name 15 Sávatara. And O excellent vaiśya, I bestow on thee the boon which thou hast besought of me; knowledge shall be thine unto full perfection.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 16 Having thus given them both the boon that each desired, the goddess vanished forthwith, while extolled by them both in faith.
 17 Having thus gained the boon from the goddess, Su-ratha the noble kshatriya shall obtain a new birth through the Sun, and shall be the Manu Sávatara.

CANTO XCIV.

The Rauc'ya and future Manv-antarās.

Márkaṇḍeya mentions briefly the succeeding Manus, the ninth to the thirteenth, and declares what shall be the names of the gods, ṛishis and kings in their several periods.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 I have duly declared unto thee this account of the Sávarṇika Manv-antara, and also the Deví-mābátmya which tells of the
- 2 slaughter of the Asura Mahisha. And the origins of the Mothers also which were from the goddess in the great battle,
- 3 and the origin as well as the life of the goddess C'ámuṇḍá, and the majesty of S'iva-dúti, the slaying of Sumbha and Niśum-bha, and the killing of Rakta-víja—all this has been narrated to thee.
- 4 Now hear O noble muni, of the next Manu Sávarṇika. And Daksha's son shall be Sávarṇa, who will be the ninth Manu.
- 5 I tell thee about that Manu, and who shall be the gods, the munis and the kings in his period. The Páras and the Marícis
- 6 and the Bhargas and the Su-dharmans shall be the gods ; these shall be in threes ; they shall be twelve groups in all ; now
- 7 their lord* shall be Sahasráksha, great in power. He, who is at present Agni's six-faced son Kárttikeya, shall be the Indra,
- 8 by name Adbhuta, in that Mann's period. Medhátithi, Vasu, Satya, Jyotish-mat and Dyuti-mat, Sabala another, and Havya-
- 9 váhana another—these shall be the seven ṛishis. Dhṛishta-ketu, Varha-ketu, Pañca-hasta, Nir-ámaya, Prithu-śravas, and
- 10 Aróish-mat, Bhúri-dyumna, Vrihad-bhaya—these shall be the royal sons of that son of Daksha, yea the kings.
- Now hear, O bráhmaṇ, about the next Manv-antara, that of the
- 11 tenth Mann. And in the tenth Manv-antara of the wise son of Brahmá, the Sukhásinas and the Niruddhas shall be the gods,
- 12 with three classes each, according to tradition ; they indeed

* Indra.

- shall be the gods, a hundred in number, in the period of that future Manu. As there shall be a hundred sons* of his,
- 13 so shall there be a hundred gods then. And Śánti shall be the Indra, endowed with all Indra's good qualities. Hear thou
- 14 who shall indeed be the seven ṛishis then; Apo-múrtti and Havish-mat, Su-kṛitin and Satya, Nábhága and A-pratima,
- 15 and Vásishṭha the seventh. And Su-kshetra and Uttamañjas and valiant Bhúmi-sena, and Satánika, Vṛishabha and An-
- 16 amitra, Jayad-ratha, Bhúri-dyumna, and Su-parvan—these shall be that Manu's sons.
- 17 Hear about the period of Dharma's son Sávarṇa. The Vihañ-gamas, and the Káma-gas and the Nirmána-ratis shall be the gods of three kinds; each shall be a group of thirty.
- 18 Now the Nirmána-ratis shall be those who preside over the months, seasons and days; and the Vihañ-gamas shall be those who preside over the nights;† the groups of Káma-gas
- 19 shall be those who preside over the moments.‡ Their Indra shall be named Vṛisha, celebrated for valour. And Havish-
- 20 mat, and Varishṭha, and another ṛishi§ Aruṇi, and Nis-čara and An-agma, and another great muni Viṣṭi, and Agni-deva the seventh,—these shall be the seven ṛishis in that period.
- 21 Sarvatra-ga and Su-śarman, Devánika, Purúdvaha, Hema-dhanvan, and Dṛiḍháyu shall be the sons of that Manu, yea the kings.
- 22 When the twelfth Manv-antara of Rudra's son, the Manu named Sávarṇa, shall have arrived, who shall be the gods
- 23 and munis,—hear about them. The Su-dharmans, the Su-manases, the Haritas and the Rohitas and the Su-varṇas

* For prápinám read putránam as in the Bombay edition.

† Both the Calcutta and Bombay editions read rátayo 'tha, which is the plural of rátri; but this word should apparently be analogous to mauhúrta in formation, and be an adjective derived from rátri. Perhaps the reading should be rátrakás tu instead.

‡ This seems to be the meaning intended by the word mauhúrttāḥ; but the only meaning given in the dictionary is "astrologer."

§ Both editions read rishṭir, but it can hardly be right, for it would be a proper name, and the number would then exceed seven. It seems to be a mistake for rishir.

- shall be the gods therein ; these five shall be ten-fold groups.*
- 24 Now their Indra shall be known as Ṛita-dhāman, great in power, endowed with all Indra's good qualities. Hear from
- 25 me the seven ṛishis also—Dyuti, Tapas-vin, Su-tapas, Tapo-múrtti, Tapo-nidhi, and Tapo-rati another, and Tapo-dhṛiti
- 26 the seventh. Deva-vat, and Upa-deva, Deva-śreshṭha, Vidúratha, Mitra-vat, and Mitra-vinda, shall be the sons of that Manu, yea the kings.
- 27 Listen while I tell thee of the Manu's sons and of the seven ṛishis and of the kings in the turn of the thirteenth
- 28 Manu named Raucya. The gods therein shall be the Su-dharmans, the Su-karmans, and the Su-śarmans the others ;
- 29 all these verily shall be the gods, O best of munis. Their Indra shall be Divas-pati, great in power, great in valour.
- 30 Now hear while I tell thee of the seven ṛishis who shall be then—Dhṛiti-mat, and A-vyaya, Tattva-darsin, Nir-utsuka, Nir-moha, and Su-tapas another, and Nish-prakampa the
- 31 seventh. O'itra-sena and Vi-citra, Nayati, Nir-bhaya, Dṛiḍha, Su-netra, and Kshatra-buddhi, and Su-vrata shall be the sons of that Manu.

CANTO XCV.

The Story of Ruc'i.

- A Prajā-pati named Ruc'i formerly lived in solitary discomfort—His forefathers appeared to him and urged him to marry—He demurred and they insisted on the importance of marriage.*

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 A Prajā-pati Ruc'i, who was devoid of self, free from pride, fearless and moderate in sleeping, formerly roamed this earth.
- 2 Seeing that he was destitute of fire, had no habitation, that he ate but once a day, had no hermitage, and was cut off from all attachments, his ancestors spoke to him, the muni.

The Pitṛis spoke :

- 3 Dear son, wherefore hast thou not done the sacred deed of taking a wife, since that is the cause of gaining Svarga and

- final emancipation from existence? without that there is 4 bondage perpetually. A house-holder by paying worship to all the gods and the Pitris likewise, to rishis and guests, gains 5 the heavenly worlds. He apportioned the gods their share by uttering 'sváhá' aloud, the Pitris by uttering 'svadhá' aloud, 6 created beings and other guests by the giving of food. Being such a negligent one, thou dost incur bondage by reason of the debt due to the gods, bondage by reason of the debt due to us also, bondage unto men and created beings day by day, 7 by not begetting sons, by not satisfying the gods and Pitris.
 And how, by not fulfilling these duties through folly, dost thou 8 hope to go the good way? We think affliction, one affliction after another, may be for thee in this world, O son; hell likewise when thou art dead, and affliction in sooth in another birth.

Ruci spoke:

- 9 Wedlock tends to excessive suffering, and is a downward 10 course toward sin; hence I took no wife hitherto. Control which is gained over one's self, this is effected by firm suppression;* it is the cause of final emancipation from existence; that emanci- 11 pation verily comes not from wedlock. That the soul, though besmirched with the mire of selfishness, be washed clean day by day by those who have no family ties with the waters of 12 thought—better verily is this! The soul, which is marked with the mire of actions that have developed during many existences, must be washed clean with the waters of good perceptions by wise men who keep their bodily organs under control.

The Pitris spoke:

- 13 Fitting it is that those who have their organs under control should cleanse their soul; but does this path, wherein thou wendest, O son, tend to final emancipation from existence?†

* Ni-yantrana; a word not in the dictionary.

† I take kintu as kim tu interrogatively; but the Bombay edition reads leptya for mokshaya and kintu then would mean simply "but"—"but this path, wherein, &c., tends to defilement."

- 14 Moreover evil is driven away by means of disinterested* gifts, and by results and enjoyments which are good or ill according 15 to former actions. Thus no bondage befalls him who acts with a tender heart, and such action being disinterested tends 16 not to bondage. Thus a former action done, which consists of merit and demerit, is diminished day and night by enjoyments which consist of pleasure and pain, O son, among mankind.
 17 Thus wise men cleanse their soul and guard it from bonds;
 thus, on the other hand, indiscrimination, which is the mire of sin, does not lay hold of it.

Ruđi spoke :

- 18 It is declared in the Veda, ignorance is the path of action, O my forefathers. How then do ye, sirs, despatch me on the path of action ?

The Pitṛis spoke :

- 19 Ignorance in very truth is this† action thou mentionest—this maxim is not erroneous ; nevertheless action is the cause un-20 doubtedly of full acquisition of knowledge. On that view the restraint, which bad men observe because they do not perform what is enjoined, should tend ultimately to final emancipation from existence;‡ on the contrary it produces a downward 21 course. But thou thinkest, O son, ‘I will cleanse my soul’; yet thou art burnt up by sins which arise from not performing what 22 is enjoined. Even Ignorance exists for the benefit of men, just as poison does ; although it is different, it does not in truth tend to bondage§ by reason of the means which are put into 23 practice. Therefore, O son, do thou take a wife according to precept ; let not thy birth be unprofitable by thy not observing the business of ordinary life fully.

* An-abhisandhita : abhi-sandhita is not in the dictionary.

† For evait read evaitat.

‡ The Bombay edition reads násau instead of so 'nte, and the meaning is “ does not tend to final emancipation.”

§ The Bombay edition reads bandháyányá yato hi sá, “because it is different, it tends in truth to bondage.” Or if anyá yato be read as one word a-nyáyato, it would mean “because of iniquity it tends in truth to bondage.”

Ruc'ī spoke :

- 24 I am now aged ; who will bestow a wife on me, O my forefathers ? Moreover it is hard for a poor man to take a wife.

The Pitris spoke :

- 25 Our downfall will assuredly come to pass, O son, and so also will thy downward course ; thou dost not welcome our speech.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 26 Having spoken thus, the Pitṛis suddenly vanished from sight while he beheld them, O best of munis, just as lights when blown by the wind.

CANTO XCVI.

The story of Ruc'ī (continued).

Perturbed by his forefathers' admonition Ruc'ī offered worship to Brahmā, and Brahmā promised he should gain his desire with the Pitris' help—Ruc'ī poured forth therefore a long hymn and prayer to the Pitṛis.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 The bráhmaṇ rishi Ruc'ī, being greatly agitated in mind at that his forefathers' counsel, wandered about the earth, desirous to find a maiden. Failing to obtain a maiden he, illuminated by the fire of his forefathers' counsel, fell into deep thought, while his mind was exceedingly agitated—"What can I do ? Where am I going ? How am I to take a wife ? May that come to pass quickly, which will effect my forefathers' advancement !" While the high-souled muni pondered thus, a thought occurred to him—"I will propitiate lotus-born Brahmā with austerities." Thereupon he performed austerities to Brahmā for a hundred celestial years, and for the purpose of propitiating him engaged then in the utmost self-mortification. Brahmā the forefather of the worlds thereupon showed himself and said to him—"I am

- 7 well-pleased, declare thy earnest wish." He fell prostrate then before Brahmá, who is the origin of the world, and declared what he wished earnestly to do according to the counsel of his forefathers. And Brahmá hearing his earnest wish spoke to the bráhmaṇ Ruçi.

Brahmá spoke :

- 8 Thou shalt be a Prajá-pati ; thou shalt create human folk. After creating human folk, O bráhmaṇ, and begetting sons 9 and performing ceremonies, thou shalt then, after thy dominion shall be taken away, attain perfect felicity. Being such,
10 do thou take a wife as enjoined by thy forefathers ; and after reflecting on this desire, perform worship to the Pitṛis ; those Pitṛis indeed being gratified shall bestow on thee the wife and sons desired. When satisfied what may thy ancestors not bestow ?

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 11 The ṛishi* on hearing this speech from Brahmá, whose birth is inscrutable, performed worship to the Pitṛis on 12 a distant sand-bank in a river, and also gratified the Pitṛis, O bráhmaṇ, with these praises, respectfully, with single mind, subduing his body, and bending his neck in faith.

Ruçi spoke :

- 13 I pay reverence unto the Pitṛis who dwell as presiding deities in the śráddha ; and whom even the gods verily delight with invocations concluding with the word svadhá at the 14 śráddha. I pay reverence unto the Pitṛis, whom maharshis, who desire to obtain enjoyment and final emancipation from existence, delight with mental śráddhas and with faith in 15 Svarga. I pay reverence unto the Pitṛis, whom the Siddhas delight with all kinds of incomparable heavenly offerings at the CANTO XCVII.

The bestowal of a boon by the Pitris in the Rauc'ya Manv-antara.

A body of light appeared in the sky, and Ruc'i offered a hymn to all the deities and Pitris—The Pitris appeared, and to enable him to be a Prajā-pati granted him the boon of a wife—They commend the hymn offered to them and declare its manifold efficacy.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Now while he offered praises thus, a lofty pile of light 2 appeared suddenly, suffusing the sky. When he saw that very great light, which remained stationary encompassing the world, Ruc'i sank to the earth on his knees and sang this hymn.

Ruc'i spoke :

- 3 I pay reverence† ever to those Pitris, who are honoured, incorporeal,‡ luminously splendid, who are rapt in meditation,

* This word occurs twice, in verses 44 and 47. The Bombay edition reads the same. It seems to follow the Calcutta edition rather closely after the Deví-máhātmya.

† Namasyámi. It is used with the object in the genitive here and in verse 6; in the accusative in verses 4, 5, 7, 10 and 11; and in the dative in verses 8 and 9. The construction with the accusative is the only one mentioned in the dictionary.

‡ The Bombay edition reads A-múrtánám c'a murtánám, "who are incorporeal and who are corporeal."

- 4 and who possess supernatural sight. And I pay reverence to those granters of men's desires, who are the leaders of Indra and the other gods, and of Daksha and Máric'a, of the seven 5 rishis and of other sages. I pay reverence to all the Pitris of Manu and the other chief munis, and of the sun and moon, 6 among the waters and in the sea. With conjoint hands I pay reverence likewise to the constellations and planets, to 7 wind and fire and the sky, and to heaven and earth. And with conjoint hands I pay reverence to the devārshis' progenitors, unto whom reverence is paid by all the worlds, who are always
 8 givers of what is imperishable. With conjoint hands I pay reverence always to the Prajā-pati* Kaśyapa, to Soma† and to Varuṇa, and to the princes of religious devotion. Reverence to the seven classes of Pitris moreover in the seven worlds!‡
 9 I pay reverence to self-existent Brahmá who is contemplation-eyed. I pay reverence to the Somádhára and Yoga-múrti-dhara classes of Pitris, and to Soma the father of the worlds.
 10 I pay reverence moreover to the other Pitris who have the form of fire,§ because this universe is entirely composed of 11 Agni and Soma. Now these who dwell in this light, and who have the bodies of the moon, sun and fire,|| and whose true nature is the world, and whose true nature is Brahmá¶—to all 12 those Pitris, practisers of religious devotion, I pay reverence with subdued mind, reverence, yea reverence. May they, the consumers of the svadhá, be gracious unto me!

Márkaṇḍeya syoke:

- 14 Being thus praised by him, O best of munis, those Pitris issued forth with their splendour, illuminating the ten regions 15 of the sky; and he beheld them standing in front then,

* For Prajá-pateḥ read Prajá-pate?

adorned with the flowers, perfumes and unguents which he 16 had presented unto them. Falling prostrate again in faith, again indeed joining his hands, full of respect he exclaimed, separately to each of them, "Reverence to thee!" "Reverence 17 to thee!" Well-pleased the Pitris thereupon said to him, the best of munis, "Choose thou a boon." To them he spoke, bending his neck respectfully.

Ruc'i spoke :

18 Brahmá has commanded me now to be the maker of a new creation. In such capacity I desire to obtain a wife, who shall be happy, of heavenly kind, prolific.

The Pitris spoke :

19 Here verily for thee let a wife be produced forthwith who shall be most fascinating, and by her thou shalt have a son, 20 a Manu supreme, the ruler of a Manv-antara, wise, characterized by thy very own name, being called Rauc'ya from 21 thee, O Ru'ci; he shall attain fame in the three worlds. He shall also have many sons, great in strength and prowess, 22 great of soul, guardians of the earth. And thou, becoming a Prajá-pati, shalt create people of the four classes; and when thy dominion shall come to an end and thou shalt be wise in righteousness, thou shalt thereafter attain perfect felicity.

23 And whatever man shall gratify us with this hymn in faith, we being gratified will give him enjoyments and 24 sublime spiritual knowledge, perfect bodily health, and wealth, and sons, grandsons and other descendants :* because verily those who desire blessings must constantly praise us with this 25 hymn. And he who shall recite this hymn, which causes us pleasure, with faith at a śráddha, standing the while in front

* The Bombay edition inserts a verse and a half here—"We will give [the foregoing blessings] assuredly and whatever else is earnestly desired.
 Therefore men who continually desire sacred recompenses in the world and the imperishable gratification of the Pitris—such men must praise us with a hymn."

- 26 of the bráhmans as they feast, that śráddha, shall undoubtedly become ours imperishably, because of our pleasure in hearing the hymn when a man makes close approach unto us.
- 27 Although a śráddha be performed without a bráhman learned in the Veda, although it may be vitiated by means of wealth
- 28 which has been gained unjustly, or although it be performed in any other defective manner, or although moreover it be performed with blemished offerings unfit for a śráddha, or be performed also at a wrong time or in a wrong place, or
- 29 yet be unaccompanied by the proper ordinances, or if it is performed by men without faith or in reliance on deceit—nevertheless such a śráddha shall be to our delight because
- 30 this hymn is uttered thereat. Wherever this hymn which brings us happiness is recited at a śráddha, there delight
- 31 accrues unto us, lasting for twelve years. This hymn recited in the winter yields delight for twelve years; and this beautiful hymn recited in the dewy season yields delight for twice
- 32 that number of years; when recited at a śráddha ceremony in the spring it tends to delight us for sixteen years; and this hymn recited in the hot season causes delight for sixteen years
- 33 indeed. When a śráddha although performed imperfectly is consummated with this hymn in the rainy season, imperishable delight accrues unto us, O Ruçi. When recited at the
- 34 time of a śráddha even in the autumn season, it yields us delight with men which lasts for fifteen years. And in whose-
- 35 soever house this hymn remains constantly in written form, there shall we be present when a śráddha is performed.
- 36 Therefore standing at a śráddha in front of the feasting bráhmans, O illustrious Sir! thou must hear this hymn which supplies nourishment unto us.*

* The Bombay edition adds—"Having spoken thus, his ancestors (Pitris) departed to heaven, O best of munis."

CANTO XCVIII.

The marriage of Máliní and the conclusion of the Rauc'ya Manv-antara.

Ruc'i married an Apsaras named Máliní, and had by her a son, the Manu Rauc'ya, who will be the ruler of a manv-antara.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Thereupon from the midst of that river uprose an exquisite Apsaras, charming, slender-shaped, named Pramloóá.
- 2 And she spoke to high-souled Ručí in very sweet accents, bowing courteously towards him, she, beautiful-browed Pramloóá, verily a choice Apsaras.
- 3 “A maiden of exceeding bodily beauty is my daughter, O best of ascetics ; she was begotten by Varuṇa's high-souled
- 4 son Pushkara. Take her when I give her, a maiden of exquisite complexion,*to be thy wife ; a Manu of great intellect shall be born of her as son to thee !”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 5 When he replied, “ So be it,” to her, she fetched up from
- 6 out that water then a shapely maiden named Máliní ; and on that sand-bank in the river Ručí, best of munis, after summoning the great munis together, took her hand in marriage
- 7 according to the ordinances. Of her was born to him a son, great in valour, great in intellect ; he was named Rauc'ya
- 8 after his father's name ; he was famous on this earth. And in his manv-antara who will be the gods and the seven ṛishis and his sons and the kings, they have been duly told to thee.
- 9 Increase of righteousness, and perfect health, and the growth of riches, grain and children—this without doubt is for men in this manv-antara, which thou hast heard about.
- 10 After hearing of both the praise of the Pitṛis and the classes of the Pitṛis also, a man obtains all his desires through their favour, O great muni.

CANTO XCIX.

Eulogy of Agni and fire.

There was formerly a very irascible muni named Bhúti, to whom everything was subservient—He left his hermitage once and put his disciple Sánti in charge—The sacred fire went out, and Sánti in consternation offered up a long prayer and eulogy to Agni.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

1 Hear next thereafter about the birth of Bhautya, and about the gods, the ṛishis, his sons and the kings of the earth in his period.

2 There was a disciple of Ángiras, by name Bhúti, very irascible, a muni who used to invoke bitter curses for a small matter, and who spoke harshly on the occasion of a transgression. At his hermitage Mátariśvan blew not very
3 fiercely, the sun caused no excessive heat, nor Parjanya
4 excessive mud, nor did the moon even when full cause excessive cold with its rays, through fear verily of that 5 irascible and very glorious muni. And the seasons, abandoning their course, produced flowers and fruit at all times
6 on the trees that grew in his hermitage according to his command. And the waters that flowed near his hermitage
7 glided on according to his pleasure, and when taken into his water-pot were frightened at that high-souled muni. He was impatient of excessive trouble and was exceedingly irascible, O bráhmaṇ.

And that illustrious muni having no son set his mind on 8 austerities. Desiring a son, restricting his food, exposing himself to cold, wind and fire, he fixed his mind on austerities indeed with the resolve, "I will practice austerities."
9 The moon did not tend to make him very cold, nor the sun to make him very hot, nor did Mátariśvan blow on him 10 severely, O great muni. And Bhúti, best of munis, being greatly pained by the couples of opposite causes* did not obtain that desire and so ceased from his austerities.

- 11 His brother was Su-varcas. Being invited by him to a sacrifice and being desirous of going, Bhúti said to his high-12 minded disciple named Sánti, who was calm, who had the measure of religious knowledge,† who was well-behaved, always zealous in the guru's business, observant of good customs, noble, an excellent muni.

Bhúti spoke :

- 13 I shall go to the sacrifice of my brother Su-varcas, O
Sánti, being summoned by him, and do thou listen to what 14 thou must do here. Thou must keep watch over the fire in my hermitage thus and thus diligently, so that the fire may not become extinguished.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 15 Having given this command and receiving the answer
"Yea" from his disciple Sánti, the guru went to that his brother's sacrifice, being summoned thereto by his younger brother.
16 And while Sánti is fetching fuel, flowers, fruit and other things from the forest for that high-souled guru's maintenance, and is 17 performing other business, being faithfully obedient to his guru, the fire which was the root of his welfare‡ died out 18 during that interval. Seeing the fire had died out, Sánti, sorely distressed and afraid of Bhúti, fell, though of great intellect, into manifold anxiety, thinking— 19 "What am I to do? or how will the guru's return be?
I must accomplish something now; what, when done, would 20 be a good thing done? If my guru sees this extinguished fire occupying the hearth, he will assuredly devote me at 21 once because of it to some grievous calamity. If I kindle another fire here in the fire-place, then he who sees everything 22 visibly§ will of a surety turn me into ashes. As such I am sinful on account of the wrath and curse of that guru. I do not grieve so much for myself as for the sin committed against 23 the guru. The guru on seeing the fire extinguished will certainly curse me, or Agni will be angry. That brahman is 24 truly of such immense power ! With what fitness will not he, under whose command the gods live in terror of his majestic power, assail me who have committed sin ! ”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

25 After pondering thus in many ways, being always afraid of that guru he, best of intelligent munis, sought refuge with 26 Agni. Controlling his mind then he offered a hymn to the seven fires ; and with thoughts intent on them he joined his hands and knelt down on the ground.

S’ánti spoke :

27 Om ! Reverence to the high-souled perfecter of all created things, to him who has one, two and five side-altars at the 28 rája-súya sacrifice, to the six-souled god ! Reverence to the very brilliant one, who gives their functions* to all the gods, to him who has S’ukra’s form ! Thou bestowest permanence

- 63 Thou art the sublime principle of being,* that dwells in the lotus-heart of every being,† unending, worthy of praise.
By thee was stretched out this universe which comprises what is moveable and immoveable. O consumer of oblations, thou 64 art one in many forms here ! Thou are undecaying; thou art the earth with its mountains and forests; thou art the sky that holds the moon and the sun; thou art everything that exists daily;‡ and thou art the submarine fire that is held within the bosom of the great ocean; thou standest with 65 superhuman power in thy hand.§ Thou art always,

 CANTO C

The Fourteen Manv-antaras concluded.

Agni pleased with the hymn granted Sánti two boons; namely, the fire was re-kindled; and Bhúti obtained a son who will be the Manu Bhautya, and became gentle to all.—Agni also blessed the hymn.—The gods, rishis and kings in the Bhautya manv-antara are named.—The merits obtained by hearing about the manv-antaras are proclaimed.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

with that hymn, O bráhmaṇ, spoke with a voice as deep as a thunder-cloud's to Śānti who fell prostrate before him.

Agni spoke :

- 3 Well pleased am I with thee, O bráhmaṇ, for the praise which thou hast offered in faith. I grant thee a boon ; choose what thou desirest.

Śānti spoke :

- 4 O adorable god, I have accomplished my object inasmuch as I see thee in bodily shape ; nevertheless deign to hear me
5 who bow to thee in faith. My guru has gone from the hermitage to his brother's sacrifice, O god, and when he shall return to the hermitage may he see the sacrificial altar*
6 with thee for its master. The sacrificial altar that has been forsaken by thee through my transgression, O Fire, may the 7 bráhmaṇ see that now presided over by thee as before ! And if thou shewest me grace in any other way, O god, then let 8 my guru who is sonless obtain a distinguished son. And as my guru will display friendliness to his son, so may his mind
9 become gentle towards to all beings. And whoever shall praise thee † with this hymn, whereby thou art pleased with me, O changeless god, mayest thou whom I have propitiated bestow a boon on him !

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 10 On hearing this his speech, Agni, being highly conciliated with the hymn and with his devotion to his guru, spoke to that best of bráhmaṇs.

Agni spoke :

 be the lord of a manv-antara, by name Bhautya, great in strength, great in valour, great in knowledge, O thou who praisest thy guru.*
- 14 And whoever with composed mind shall praise me with this hymn, all his desire shall come to pass and he shall 15 have merit. At sacrifices, on festival days, at places of pilgrimage, at sacrifices, at oblations to the gods, and at ceremonies let a man read this sublime hymn, which yields 16 nourishment to me, to attain unto righteousness. This sublime hymn, which yields pleasure to me, when heard once, O bráhmaṇ, shall without doubt destroy sin committed by 17 day and night. This hymn when heard shall at once quell the faults and other defects that attend improper oblations and times, and the faults which are committed by unworthy 18 men also who have made such mistakes. This hymn of praise to me, when heard by mortals at full-moon, at new-moon and on other sacred festivals, shall destroy sin.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

 with, while he indeed looked on, O muni, just as the flame with mind fully satisfied and with the hair of his body standing erect with gladness, entered the guru's hermitage.

 21 There he saw the fire blazing brightly on the guru's sacrificial altar as before; thereat he felt an intense joy.
- 22 At this moment the guru also of that high-souled disciple returned from his younger brother's sacrifice to his own 23 hermitage; and before him the disciple paid respectful salutation to his feet. And the guru, after accepting the seat 24 and worship offered, said to him then—"My son, I feel exceeding loving-kindness to thee and to other creatures also.
 I know not what this is; if thou knowest, my son, tell this 25 quickly unto me." Thereupon the bráhmaṇ Sánti declares the guru with eyes moist through affection embraced him, and gave the disciple the Vedas and Aṅgas and Upāṅgas, O great muni.

27 A son was born to Bhūti, the Manu named Bhautya. Hear from me of the gods, rishis and kings in his manv-antara, 28 namely, those who shall belong to that future Manu, while I declare them at length; and who shall be the lord of the 29 gods in the time of that Manu famous for his deeds. Both the C'ākshushas and the Kanishṭhas, the Pavitras and the Bhrājiras, and the Dhárāvrikas—these shall be the five 30 classes of gods according to tradition. Śuci shall be the Indra of those gods then, great in strength, great in valour, 31 endowed with all an Indra's qualities. And Agnīdhra, and Agni-báhu, Śuci and Mukta, Mádhava, Śukra and Ajita—these seven shall be the rishis then according to tradition.
 32 Guru, Gabhíra, and Bradhna, Bharata and Anugraha, and 33 Strímánin * and Pratíra, Vishnu and Sañktandana,† Tejas-vin and Subala—these shall be the Manu Bhautya's sons. I have declared this fourteenth manv-antara to thee.

34 After hearing of the manv-antaras thus in order, O best of munis, a man obtains merit, and a diminished succession.‡ 35 By listening to the first manv-antara a man obtains righteousness. By listening to S'vároṣisha's period he 36 gains all his desires. He obtains wealth from listening to Auttami's story, and acquires knowledge in hearing the story of Tāmasa; and when Raivata is heard about, he finds 37 intelligence and a handsome wife. Perfect health accrues to men when C'ākshusha is heard of, and strength when Vaivasvata is heard of, and virtuous sons and grandsons 38 when the Sun's son Sávarṇika is heard of. A man obtains greatness of soul when Brahma-Sávarṇa is heard of, a bright intellect when Dharma-Sávarṇika is heard of, victory when

- 39 Rudra-Sávarṇika is heard of. A man becomes the chief of his kindred and is endowed with good qualities, when Daksha-Sávarṇika is heard of; he makes his enemies' power small * after hearing of Raucya, O best of men. He acquires the favour of the gods when the Bhautya manv-antara is heard of, and also obtains the sacred fire and sons endowed with good qualities. And whoever listens to all the many-antaras in regular order, O best of munis, hearken to his supreme reward also. After hearing of the gods, ṛishis, Indras, Manus, their sons the kings, and their genealogies therein, he is delivered from all his sins. And the other gods, ṛishis, Indras and kings who rule over those many-antaras are pleased with him, and when pleased they bestow a bright intellect. Having obtained then a bright intellect and having performed a splendid deed, he attains a splendid course as long as the fourteen Indras continue.† May all the seasons be salubrious; may all the planets be benign! Assuredly they are so, when he has listened to the ordinance of the many-antaras in their order.

CANTO CL.

The Announcement of the Genealogies.

Márkaṇḍeya alludes to the famous races of kings and begins an account of the creation.—Brahmá created Daksha, and Daksha's daughter Aditi bore to Kaśyapa a son Mártanḍa, who was the Sun incarnate.—Márkaṇḍeya tells of the Mundane Egg and Brahmá's birth from it,—and expounds the word "Om."

Kraushtuki‡ spoke :

- 1 Adorable Sir, thou hast duly expounded the ordinance of the many-antaras, and I have ascertained it from thee

† For c'atur-daśaḥ read c'atur-daśa with the Bombay edition.

2 gradually and at length. As I wish to hear of the complete genealogy of the kings of the earth, beginning from Brahmá and the other progenitors, O best of dvijas, do thou declare it to me duly, adorable Sir.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

3 Listen, my son, to the origin of all the kings and their exploits, taking for the commencement the Prajá-pati who is 4 the source of this present world, for this his progeny is adorned with kings, who celebrated many sacrifices, who were victorious in battle, who were wise in righteousness,
5 who were numbered by hundreds. And by hearing of the exploits of these high-souled kings and their manifestations*
6 a man is delivered from all sins. The race, in which arose Manu and Ikshváku, An-araṇya,† Bhagírattha and other kings in hundreds, who all protected their territories well,
7 were wise in righteousness, performed sacrifices, were heroic and understood thoroughly the sublimest matters—when one hears about that race, a man is delivered from a multitude
8 of sins. Hear then about this race wherefrom thousands of subordinate lines of kings were separated off like subsidiary stems from a banyan tree.
9 The Prajá-pati Brahmá, being desirous of yore of creating various peoples, created Daksha from his right thumb,‡ O 10 best of dvijas; and the adorable lord Brahmá who causes the birth of the worlds, and who is the supreme maker of the worlds, created a wife for him from his left thumb.
11 Resplendent Aditi was born as a daughter to that Daksha,
12 and of her Káśyapa begot divine Mártaṇḍa,§ who has the nature of Brahmá,|| who bestows boons on all the worlds,

 14 with its gods, Asuras and men possesses; who constitutes everything, who is the soul of all, the Supreme Soul, eternal. The Sun took birth in Aditi, after she had first propitiated him.

Kraushṭuki spoke :

15 Adorable Sir, I desire to hear what is the Sun's nature and what is the cause why he, the earliest god, became Kaśyapa's
 16 son; and how he was propitiated by divine Aditi and Kaśyapa; and what he, the divine Sun, said when propitiated by her;
 17 and what truly was his majestic power when he became incarnate, O best of munis. I wish to hear it in its fulness duly related, Sir, by thee.

 20 illustrious sir, while I tell thee at length what thou hast asked, how the Sun became manifest.
 21 In this world, destitute of light, obscure, which was enveloped with darkness all around, a single huge egg came 22 into existence, an imperishable most potent cause.§ It split open; within it stood the adorable fore-father, lotus-born Brahmá himself, who is the creator of the worlds, the lord.

The Majesty of the Sun.

Márkaṇḍeya says that from Brahmá's mouths issued the four Vedas and explains their peculiar qualities and transcendent merits—The gods and the Vedas are but manifestations of the Sun.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Now when that egg split open, out of the anterior mouth of Brahmá whose origin is inscrutable, O muni, came forth
- 2 first the Ṛic hymns, at once resplendent as the flowers of the China rose,‡ glorious in form, but disconnected,§ and divided into separate portions, and therefore bearing the

and the Bhavar-loka; and the meaning seems to be that, as he uttered each mystic word, the corresponding world came into existence.

* The Svar-loka.

- 3 form of passion.* Out of his right mouth issued the Yajus hymns, unimpeded, coloured like the colour of gold, and 4 disconnected. Out of the posterior mouth of the lord Brahmá, who is the highest of all, were revealed the Sáman 5 hymns, and the C'handas hymns. And the entire Atharvan† then, resplendent as a mass of black pigment or a cluster of bees,—that which has a nature as terrible as possible,‡ which contains the magical rites and the rites for removing 6 calamities,—became manifest out of the Creator's left mouth;
it is composed chiefly of pleasure, goodness and darkness,§ and has the essential properties of gentleness and harshness.
7 The Ríc hymns have the quality of passion; and goodness is the quality|| of the Yajus hymns, O muni; the Sáman hymns have the quality of darkness; darkness and goodness 8 exist in the Atharvan hymns. These emanations, blazing indeed with unrivalled glory, obtained each a separate station almost at first.¶
- 9 That then was the original glory which is declared by uttering the word "Om." The glory which comes from the essential nature thereof—that, having encompassed it com-10 pletely, remains fixed. As is the glory which consists of the Yajus, such is that of the Sámans, O great muni; they have 11 grown into one in resorting to a supreme glory. Rites for the removal of calamities, and rites for promoting growth and magical rites also—these three things gained union†† with the three Vedas, the Ríc and the two others, O bráhmaṇ.

* Rajo-rúpa-vahás.

† Atharvāṇam, neut. nomin. The meaning given in the dictionary is "the work, i.e., ritual of the Atharva-Veda," but here it must mean the Atharva-Veda itself. This Veda receives marked praise here.

- 12 This universe became most stainless then through the sudden destruction of darkness, and was to be developed horizontally, 13 upwards and downwards, O bráhmaṇ pīṣhi. That excellent glory of the C'handas became then an orb, and grew into 14 oneness with the supreme glory, O bráhmaṇ. Since it obtained the name of Āditya at the very beginning, it became also the essentially unchanging cause of this universe, O illustrious Sir.
- 15 The triple Veda, which is named the Rīc, Yajus and Sáman, gives warmth in the morning and at mid-day and in the 16 afternoon also. The Rīc hymns give warmth in the forenoon, and the Yajus hymns truly at mid-day, and the Sáman hymns give warmth truly in the afternoon, O best of munis.
- 17 Rites for the removal of calamities are deposited* in the Rīc hymns in the forenoon, rites for promoting internal growth in the Yajus hymns at mid-day, and magical rites 18 lastly in the Sáman at evening. Magical rites moreover should be performed at mid-day and in the afternoon equally, but the particular ceremonies for the Pitrīs should be performed with the Sáman in the afternoon.
- 19 In the creation of the world is manifested Brahmá, who is composed of the Rīc hymns; in its permanence† Vishṇu who is composed of the Yajus hymns; and Śiva, who is composed of the Sáman, at the dissolution; therefore its 20 sound is impure.‡ Thus the adorable Sun, whose self is the Veda, who abides in the Veda and whose self is Vedic 21 knowledge, is called the Supreme Soul.§ And he, the eternal, who is the cause of creation,|| permanence and

Who is the Light that is the refuge of the universe, who has righteousness that passes knowledge,

Who is to be attained unto in the Vedánta, supreme beyond things that are sublime !

CANTO CIII.

Hymn to the Sun.

Brahmá, finding the Sun's glory too great for creation, offered a hymn to the Sun.—The Sun contracted his glory, and Brahmá accomplished the creation.

Márkandeya spoke :

- 1 Now when the egg was being heated by his glory above and beneath, the lotus-born Forefather, being desirous of
- 2 creating, pondered—"My creation although accomplished will assuredly pass to destruction through the intense glory* of the Sun, who is the cause of creation, dissolution and per-
- 3 manence, great of soul. Breathing beings will all be bereft of breath, the waters will dry up through his glory, and
- 4 without water there will be no creation of this universe." Pondering thus the adorable Brahmá, Forefather of the world, becoming intent thereon, composed a hymn to the adorable Sun.

Brahmá spoke :

- 5 I pay reverence to thee of whom everything consists Here, and who consistest of everything ;
Whose body is the universe, who art the sublime Light
Whereon religious devotees meditate ;

* Abhi-tejasah ; a word not in the dictionary.

- 6 Who art composed of the Riç hymns, who art the repository of the Yajus hymns,
 And who art the origin of the Sáman hymns ; whose power passes thought ;
 Who consistest of the three Vedas ;* who art half a short syllable as touching grossness,† Whose nature is sublime, who art worthy of the fullness of good qualities.‡
- 7 To thee,§ the cause of all, who art to be known as supremely worthy of praise,||
 The supreme Light that was at the beginning, not in the form of fire ;¶
 And who art gross by reason that thy spirit is in the gods —to thee I pay reverence,
 The shining one, who wast in the beginning, the sublimest beyond the sublime !
- 8 Thine is the primeval power, in that urged on thereby I achieve this creation, which is in the forms of water, earth, wind and fire,
 Which has those elements, the gods and other beings for its objects, and which is complete with the word "Om" and other sounds—
 Not at my own wish ; and that I effect its continuance and dissolution in the self-same manner.

‡ Guṇa-pára-yogyah. This may be taken in several ways ; "who art adapted to the fullest measure of a suppliant's good qualities," or "who art worthy of religious devotion by reason of the fullness of thy good qualities," or "who art worthy of religious devotion with the fullness of a suppliant's good qualities."

§ For tam read tvám as in the Bombay edition.

¶ The Bombay edition reads instead, ádyam param̐ jyotir a-vedya-rúṇam, "the supreme Light that was in the beginning, whose form passes knowledge."

- 9 Thou verily art fire. By reason of thy drying up of the water thou achievest*
 The creation of the earth and the primeval completion of the worlds.
 Thou indeed, O lord, pervadest the very form of the sky.
 Thou in five ways protectest all this world.
- 10 They who know the Supreme Soul sacrifice with sacrifices
 to thee,
 Who hast the nature of Vishṇu, who consistest of all sacrifices, O Sun !
 And self-subdued ascetics, who curb their souls and thoughts, meditate
 On thee, the lord of all, the supremest, while they desire final emancipation from existence for themselves.
- 11 Reverence to thee, whose form is divine ;
 To thee, whose form is sacrifice, be reverence ;
 Yea to thee who in thy very nature art the Supreme Spirit,
 Who art meditated upon by religious devotees !
- 12 Contract thy glory, since the abundance of thy glory Tends to obstruct creation, O lord, and I am ready to begin creation !

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 13 Being praised thus by the Creator Brahmá, the Sun contracted his supreme glory and retained but very little.
- 14 And the lotus-born god accomplished the creation of the world. Thus in those intervals of the former kalpas

 Asuras and other beings, and mortals, cattle and other animals, trees and shrubs and the hells, O great muni.

- 1 Having created this world, Brahmá then separated off the castes, the bráhmaṇ's four periods of life, the seas, the

- 13 three worlds. The hostile Daityas and Danavas and Rákshasas combining harassed them, and a very terrible war occurred
- 14 between them. Now the deities were vanquished for a thousand divine years, and the powerful Daityas and Dánavas

- 16 Dánavas, O best of munis, and deprived of their shares of sacrifices, was exceedingly afflicted with grief, and made the
- 17 utmost efforts to propitiate the Sun. Concentrating her mind thereon, restricting her food, observing the utmost self-repression, she hymned the Sun, the ball of light that dwells in the sky.

Aditi spoke :

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 30 In this manner the goddess, self-restrained, abstaining from food, offered praise day and night, desirous of propitiating the Sun, O muni.
- 31 A long time thereafter the adorable Sun rendered himself visible to her, Daksha's daughter, in the sky, O best of

The Birth of Márttaṇḍa.

The Sun revealed himself to Aditi and became her son as Márttaṇḍa—This name is explained—Márttaṇḍa destroyed the demons and restored the gods to their sovereign positions.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 1 Thereupon from out of that his own glory the Sun revealed‡ himself; the lord, the Sun, appeared then, like unto
- 2 glowing copper. And the luminous one spoke, O muni, unto the goddess, who fell prostrate when she beheld him—
- 3 “Choose from me the coveted boon that thou desirest.” And she, lying prostrate with her head on the ground and pressing the earth with her knees, answered the Sun who present in his very person offered her a boon:—

from my sons, and the shares in sacrifices also, by both the
- 5 Daityas and the Dánavas who excel them in strength. Do that purpose; with a portion of thyself enter thou into brotherhood with them and destroy their enemies. Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

Thereupon the adorable lord, the Sun, the robber of the waters, spoke unto prostrate Aditi, O bráhmaṇ, while his countenance was benign with favour†—"Taking birth in thy womb with all my thousand portions, I will speedily destroy the foes of thy sons, O Aditi, in security."‡
 Having spoken thus the adorable Sun vanished from her sight; and she ceased from her austerities, having gained all her desire. Thereupon the Sun's ray called Sausumna§ from out of his thousand rays|| became incarnate in the womb of the mother of the gods, O bráhmaṇ. And she, with her mind composed, performed the arduous cándráyaṇa penance¶ and other austerities. Being pure she conceived him, knowing that the embryo was a heavenly one, O bráhmaṇ. Then spoke Kaśyapa to her with words somewhat confused through anger,—“Why dost thou destroy the egg in thy womb by continual fasting?” And she said to him,—“Seest thou this egg within my womb, O wrathful man? It has not been destroyed; it shall be for the death of our adversaries.”

Márkandeya spoke :

- 15 Having spoken so she, who is the path of the gods,* in anger at her husband's words, gave birth to the child then 16 which blazed brilliantly with glory. Kaśyapa, on seeing the child which shone like the rising sun, fell prostrate and 17 praised it respectfully with ancient R̥c̥ hymns. Being so praised, he revealed himself from out the foetal egg, having a lustre like unto the petal of a lotus-flower, pervading the 18 regions of the sky with his glory. Moreover a voice deep as a thunder-cloud's, addressing† Kaśyapa, best of munis, from the air, spoke, issuing from no corporeal being—19 "Whereas thou, O muni, hast spoken of this egg as destroyed‡ to thee, therefore, O muni, this thy son shall be 20 called Márttanḍa. And he as lord shall exercise the Sun's sway on the earth; and he shall slay the Asuras, the foes who have carried off the shares of the sacrifices."
- 21 The gods hearing this speech from heaven assembled together, and experienced unparalleled joy; and the Dánavas 22 were bereft of their vigour. Thereupon Indra challenged the Daityas to battle; and the Dánavas filled with joy 23 encountered the gods. Terrible was the battle of the gods with the Asuras, wherein all the regions between the worlds were rendered brilliant with the light from the arms and 24 weapons. In that battle the adorable Márttanḍa looked at those great Asuras, and being burnt up by his splendour they 25 were reduced to ashes. Thereupon all the dwellers in heaven experienced unparalleled joy, and praised Márttanḍa 26 the source of splendour and also Aditi; moreover they regained their own spheres of dominion and their shares of the sacrifices as before; and the adorable Márttanḍa also exer-27 cised his own dominion. Like unto a rounded ball of fire with rays shooting out both downward and upward like a globular flower-head of the kadamba, the Sun assumed a body that did not flash over-poweringly.

CANTO CVI.

The paring down of the Sun's body.

The Sun married Viśva-karman's daughter Sañjñá and had three children by her, Manu Vaivasvata, Yama and Yamuná—Sañjñá could not endure the Sun's glory and leaving her shadow C'háyá departed—C'háyá-Sañjñá took her place and had three children by the Sun—She cursed Yama for unfilial conduct, but the Sun minimised the curse and perceived the deception.—The Sun visited Viśva-karman and the latter placing the Sun on his wheel pared down his glory—The world was thrown into chaos as the Sun was whirled around—The gods and celestial beings hymned the Sun.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Now the Prajá-pati Viśva-karman, after falling prostrate
- and propitiating him, gave his daughter named Sañjñá to
- 2 the Sun, Vivasvat.* Manu Vaivasvata was begotten by
- Vivasvat of her then, and his nature has been already indeed
- 3 declared particularly.† He, Vivasvat, lord of the heavenly
- cattle, begot three children of her, two most illustrious sons
- 4 and a daughter Yamuná, O muni. Manu Vaivasvata was the
- eldest, the god who presides over śráddhas, the Prajá-pati ;
- 5 then were born Yama and Yamí as twins. With the exceed-
- ing splendour that Márttaṇḍa Vivasvat possessed, he scorched
- the three worlds and the moveable and immoveable things
- 6 therein very grievously. But Sañjñá saw Vivasvat's globe-like
- form and, being impatient of his great splendour, gazed at
- her own shadow C'háyá and spoke :—

Sañjñá spoke :

- 7 Fare thee well ! I will go to my father's very own abode.
- Yet thou must stay here without change at my command, O

* See Canto lxxvii. The same story is repeated here.

† See Canto lxxviii, verse 27, and Canto lxxix.

- 8 fair one ; and thou must show honour to these two boys for me and to this daughter who is of noble rank ; and thou must not declare this at all to the god.

C'háyá the Shadow spoke :

- 9 " Unto enduring the seizing of my hair, unto undergoing curses, O goddess, I will never declare thy intention ; go where thou wishest."
- 10 Being addressed thus by C'háyá, Sañjñá went to her father's dwelling ; and there she, the beautiful of eyes,
- 11 abode some time in her father's house. Her father told her again and again to go to her husband. Then turning herself into a mare she departed to the Northern Kurus, O bráhmaṇ.
- 12 There, like a chaste wife, she practised austerities, fasting, O great muni.

- When Sañjñá had gone to her father, C'háyá, assiduous to
- 13 Sañjñá's command, and assuming her form, waited on the Sun ; and the adorable Sun begat of her, he thinking it was
- 14 of Sañjñá, two sons in addition and a daughter. The first-born of the two sons was equal to the eldest son Manu,
- 15 hence he was called Sávarṇi, O best of dvijas. And the other, who was the second son, became the planet Saturn.
- 16 And the daughter who was Tapatí, her king Samvarana chose in marriage.*

- Now as queen Sañjñá used to behave to those her own sons,
- 17 C'háyá did not behave to those eldest born sons with such affection. Manu suffered that conduct in her, and Yama did
- 18 not suffer it in her. Now being sorely distressed when his father's wife used to beseech him frequently, he Yama, by reason of both anger and childishness and indeed by the
- 19 force of predestination, threatened C'háyá-Sañjñá with his foot, O muni, and thereupon the Shadow-Sañjñá,† full of resentment, cursed Yama severely.

* See Mahá-Bhárata, Ádi-p. xciv. 3738, xcv. 3791 ; and clxxi-clxxiii where it is described how Sambarana while hunting met her, fell in love with her and gained her at length after propitiating the Sun. Her son was Kuru, the progenitor of the Kauravas.

† This must be C'háyá-Sañjñá ; but both editions read Sañjñá.

O'háyá spoke :

- 20 "Since thou threatenest thy father's wife, a venerable lady, with thy foot, thy very foot shall therefore assuredly drop down."
 21 Now Yama was deeply afflicted in mind at that curse, and he, righteous of soul, along with Manu made it all known to his father.

Yama spoke :

- 22 O lord, our mother behaves not with equal affection towards us all; leaving us aside who are the elder, she wishes to foster 23 the two younger. I lifted my foot against her, but did not let it fall on her body; whether it was through childishness or 24 through foolishness, do thou, Sir, deign to pardon it. I have been cursed, dear father, by my mother in her anger. Since I am her son, verily therefore I revere her, my mother, (O best 25 of ascetics). Even towards unworthy sons a mother is not wanting in good feelings, O father; how shall a mother say 26 this out—"May thy foot drop down, O son!" Think, O adorable* lord of the heavenly cattle, of some way so that through thy favour this my foot may not drop down now by reason of my mother's curse.

The Sun spoke :

- 27 Without doubt, my son, this curse must take effect here, since anger entered into thee, who art wise in righteousness 28 and who speakest truth. For all curses indeed a remedy assuredly exists; yet nowhere is there that which can turn a 29 curse away from those who are cursed by a mother. This thy mother's word then cannot be made false; I will however devise something as a favour for thee, because of my love for 30 thee my son. Insects taking some flesh from thy foot shall go forth to the earth;† her word is thus made true, and thou shalt be saved.

* For bhagaván read bhagavan as in the Bombay edition.

† See Canto lxxviii, verse 28.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 31 Now the Sun said to C'háyá,—“ Why among thy sons, who are quite equal, dost thou show more affection to one ?
32 Assuredly thou art not Sañjñá the mother of these ; thou art some one else come in her stead ; for how could a mother curse one son even among worthless children ? ”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 33 And she avoiding that question gave no answer to the Sun.
And he concentrating his soul fell into abstract thought* and 34 perceived the truth. C'háyá-Sañjñá saw the lord of heaven was ready to curse her, and trembling with fear declared to 35 him what had happened, O bráhmaṇ. Now the Sun, enraged at hearing that, went then to his father-in-law. And he paid honour fittingly to the Maker of day, and being strictly religious he pacified him who wished to burn him up in his wrath.

Viśva-karman spoke :

- 36 Permeated with surpassing glory is this thy form which is so hardly endurable ; hence Sañjñá, unable to endure it, 37 practises austerities in the forest in sooth. Thou shalt now see her, Sir, thy own wife, beautiful in her behaviour, practising most arduous austerities in the forest on account of 38 thy too glorious form. I remember Brahmá's word : if it please thee, my lord, I will restrain thy beloved form, O lord of heaven.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 39 Inasmuch as the Sun's form was formerly spherical, so the 40 adorable Sun said to Tvashṭri, “ Be it so ! ” And Viśva-karman, being permitted by the Sun in Śáka-dvípa, mounted the Sun on his wheel and set to work to pare down his glory.
41 While the Sun, which was the centre of all the worlds, was whirling round, the earth with its oceans, mountains and 42 forests mounted up to the sky, and the whole heavens with the moon, planets and stars went downward, and were tossed away by the wind caused by the swift whirling, great clouds wandering about with terrible thunder crumbled to 46 pieces all around. The earth, the air and the nether regions, rolled about by the Sun's whirling, uttered their voices ; 47 there was exceeding chaos then, O best of munis. While all the worlds were whirling round, O bráhmaṇ, the divine ṛishis and the gods with Brahmá sang praises to the Sun :— 48 “Thou art the most ancient god among the gods ; this is known from thy nature. At the periods of creation, continuance and dissolution thou existest with a triple division.

 49 Hail to thee, O lord of the world, thou producer of warmth, rain and snow ! Have pleasure in the peace of the worlds, O god of gods, O Maker of the day !”
 50 And Indra approaching the god, as he was being pared down, praised him,—“Be victorious, O god who pervadest 51 the world ! Be victorious, O lord of all the worlds !” And the seven ṛishis next, with Vasishṭha and Atri at their head, praised the Sun with various hymns, exclaiming “Hail !
 52 hail !” And the Bálikhilyas then, filled with joy, praised the Sun with the noblest and most ancient Ríç hymns enunciated 53 in the Veda, as he was being pared down—“Thou, O master, art final emancipation from existence to those who strive after emancipation ; thou art worthy to be contemplated as and Nágas joining their hands reverently all fell prostrate 56 with their heads before the Sun, and uttered words such as these, giving joy to his mind and ears,—“May thy glory become CANTO CVIII.

The Majesty of the Sun.

From the glory pared off from the Sun, Viśva-karman made the gods' weapons.—The Sun found his wife among the Northern Kurus and begat of her the Aśvins and Revanta.—The stations allotted to the Sun's offspring are declared.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 While he was thus hymning the Sun Viśva-karman kept intact in spherical shape the sixteenth part of the glory of 2 the lord of heaven; and when fifteen parts of his glory had been pared away, the Sun's body was exceedingly beauti-3 ful and charming then. And with the splendour that was pared away from him was fashioned Vishnu's discus; and 4 Śiva's trident, and Kuvera's palkī, the rod of the lord of the dead, and the spear of the gods' general. And Viśva-5 karman made the brilliant weapons of the other gods with the Sun's splendour for the quelling of their foes. He whose splendour had been thus pared down shone with no 6 excessive splendour. Mārtaṇḍa retained a body resplendent in every limb.

* Instead of Tri-bhuvana-pāvana-dhāma-bhūtam, which violates the metre, the Pushpitāgrā, I have taken the Bombay reading Tri-bhuvana-bhāvana-dhāma-hetum ekam.

† The Calcutta reading Devam prajāto 'smi Viśva-karmāṇam violates the metre, and is incorrect because it is Viśva-karman who is speaking. I have followed the Bombay reading Tridaśa-vara prajāto 'smi sarvadā tvām. Instead of these last two words Viśva-karmā might well be read.

Concentrating his thoughts he beheld his wife in the form 7 of a mare, unassailable by all created beings by reason of her austerities and self-repression. And going to the Northern 8 Kurus, the Sun became a horse and approached her. And she, beholding him approaching, because of her fear of a strange male, went face to face with him, being intent on 9 guarding her rear. And thereupon they joined their noses, when they both met there, and his glory passed from the 10 Sun's two nostrils* into the mare. Two gods were begotten there, the two Ásvins, who are the two best physicians, namely Násatya and Dasra, the sons who issued forth from 11 the mare's† mouth; these two are indeed the sons of Márt-taṇḍa while he bore a horse's form. And at the termination of the flow of his semen was born Revanta, holding a sword 12 and bow, clad in armour, riding on horseback, and carrying arrows and a quiver.

Then the Sun revealed his own unsullied form. She 13 perceiving his form was mild felt a joy; and the Sun, the robber of the waters, led to his own home this his wife 14 Sañjñá, changed again into her own form and full of love.

After that he who was her first-born son became Manu Vaivasvata.

15 And the second was "Yama"‡ because of the curse, and he was "The Righteous-eyed" because of his father's favour.
 Now he was called Yama as having been greatly afflicted in 16 mind by that curse; and since righteousness delights him, he is known therefore as the "King of righteousness." 17 'Worms taking flesh from thy foot shall fall to the earth'— so saying his father himself put§ an end to this curse. And because he is righteous-eyed, he is impartial to the good and 18 the evil. Therefore the Dispeller of darkness appointed him to the southern region; his adorable father gave to him the 19 duty of protecting the world, O bráhmaṇ, and the lordship over the pitris.

And the Sun, being well-satisfied, made Yamuná the river which flows from the recesses of mount Kalinda.

20 The two Ásvins were made the gods' physicians by their high-souled father.

And Revanta was appointed to the lordship over the 21 Guhyakas; and even thus spoke the adorable god then who is acknowledged by the world,—“Thou shalt indeed be 22 worthy of worship by the entire world, my child; and mortals, who shall call thee to mind amid the terrors of forests and other lonely places, of great conflagrations, of enemies and robbers, shall be delivered out of great calamity.
23 Comfort, intelligence, happiness, kingship, perfect health, fame, exalted position—these, when worshipped and well-satisfied, thou shalt bestow on men.”

24 And O'háyá-Saṅjñá's son Sávarṇa was of very great fame; he will be the eighth Manu, by name Sávarṇaka, in a future
25 time. At present, indeed, this lord performs terrible austerities on Meru's summit. His brother became the planet Saturn
26 according to the Sun's command.* Now the Sun's daughter, who was younger than they, O bráhmaṇ, became that best of rivers, the Yamuná, which cleanses the world.†

27 Now I will speak fully of Manu Vaivasvata, who was the illustrious eldest son, and to whom belongs this present 28 creation. He, who may either hear or read of this, the origin of the gods who are the offspring of Vivasvat, and 29 of the Sun's majesty, may obtain deliverance when he falls into calamity and may gain great fame. This story of the majesty of the primeval god, the high-souled Márttaṇḍa, when listened to, quells the sin that has been committed by day or night.

* See Canto cvi, verse 15. In Canto lxxviii, verse 33 he and his elder brother are not distinguished clearly.

† This is a mistake, see verse 19 above. She was Tapatí, see Canto lxxviii, verse 34, and Canto cvi, verse 16.

CANTO CIX.

Praise of the Sun.

Márkaṇḍeya tells the story of king Rájya-var dhana.—After the king had reigned many years, his queen sorrowed over finding a grey hair in his head—He comforted her and resolved to depart to the forest—His vassals and subjects tried to dissuade him and in vain—They performed many austerities in order to propitiate the Sun and went to Káma-rúpa and continued their worship—At length the Sun appeared to them in bodily shape.

Kraushṭuki spoke :

- 1 Adorable Sir! thou hast well declared the birth of the Sun's offspring, the majesty of the primeval god and his nature
- 2 at very full length. Nevertheless I desire, O best of munis, to hear more about the Sun's majesty comprehensively; deign therefore with favour to tell me of it.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 3 Be it heard then! I tell thee of the majesty of the primeval god, Vivasvat, what he did formerly when worshipped by mankind.
- 4 There was a famous king, Dama's son, named Rájya-var dhana;* he, lord of the earth, kept the earth well protected.
- 5 Now the realm, being protected by that high-souled monarch in righteousness, increased day by day in people and wealth, O
- 6 bráhmaṇ. And joyous and thriving exceedingly were all the subordinate kings on the earth without exception, while he was king; and so also were his people, both town and country
- 7 folk. No portent visited them, nor sickness, nor the fear that comes from serpents, nor was there fear of drought there,
- 8 while Dama's son was king. And he offered up great sacrifices, and gave gifts to those who asked; he enjoyed even the

* He is mentioned in the Vishṇu Pur. IV. i. Dama was son of Narishyanta and grandson of the great Marutta. The story of these three kings is told in cantos cxxix to cxxxvi below, and the Purána ends abruptly with Dama. Rájya-var dhana is called Ráshṭra-var dhana in the Váyu Purána.

- pleasures of sense without hindrance to true righteousness.
- 9 While he ruled the kingdom thus and protected his people duly, seven thousand years passed away as if a single day.
- 10 Now the daughter of Vidúratha, king of the South, was his
- 11 queen, Mániní by name and high-spirited* indeed. One day she, the fine-browed noble lady, shed tears when his head had not been dressed with ointment, in the sight of the king's
- 12 folk. When her tear-drops fell on the king's body, he saw Mániní was of tearful countenance then and questioned her.
- 13 In sooth beholding her weeping and shedding tears silently,
- 14 Rájya-vardhana asked Mániní, "Why is this?" But she, being prudent, when questioned by her husband, replied then,
- 15 "It is nothing." The king questioned her again.† And after the king had questioned her often, she, the slender-waisted lady, showed him a grey hair growing among his abundant
- 16 locks. "Look at this, O king; is this a cause of vexation to me, most luckless that I am?" And the king laughed thereat.
- 17 With a smile quoth he to his wife—while listened all the kings and citizens, and the kings who were assembled there—
- 18 "Away with grief, O wide-eyed lady! thou must not weep, pretty one! Birth, growth, decline of life and other changes
- 19 befall all living beings. I have studied all the Vedas; I have offered sacrifices by thousands; I have given alms to bráhmans; and I have begotten sons, O lady of finest countenance;
- 20 I have enjoyed along with thee pleasures which are very hardly attainable by mortals; and I have protected the earth
- 21 well; I have borne myself ably in battles; I have laughed with my beloved friends; and I have sported in the heart of the woods. What else is there which I have not done,
- 22 that thou art frightened at grey hairs, O lady? Let my hair become grey; let wrinkles come to me, O beauteous one; let my body pass into weakness; for I have been successful, O
- 23 Mániní! Because thou hast shown me a grey hair on my head, O lady, here then I take medical treatment therefor
- 24 through resorting to the forest. First in childhood there is

childhood's action ; similarly there is action which is natural in youth ; and also such as is fitting in early manhood ; in old 25 age there is resort to the forest. Since those who lived before me did so, lady, and also those who lived before them, I see no reason whatever then for thee to shed tears. Away 26 with thy vexation ! Does not the sight of this grey hair cause me elevation ? Weep not ; it is futile."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

27 Then the kings and citizens who were in his presence did him reverence, and the kings addressed Rájya-varḍhana with conciliatory words, O great ṛishi :—

28 "It is not for thee to weep with this thy wife, O king ; it is 29 we who must weep here, or rather all living beings. Since thou, O master, speakest the word indicating that thou wilt dwell in the forest, life falls therefore from us who have been 30 tenderly cherished by thee, O king. We will all go, O king, if thou goest to the forest. All the inhabitants of the earth
 31 will thereby suffer loss in all their ceremonies without doubt, when thou, O master, shalt take up thy abode in the forest ; and if that loss tends to injure righteousness, let that course
 32 be discarded. Seven thousand years this earth has been guarded by thee ; have regard, O king, to the great merit that 33 has accrued therefrom ! The austerities, which thou, O great king, wilt perform while dwelling in the forest, are not worth* the sixteenth part of this thy guardianship over the earth !"

The king spoke :

34 "Seven thousand years I have protected this earth ; now
 35 this my time has come to dwell in the forest. I have begotten children. Now that I have seen my children and their descendants, Death truly will not allow me a very few days.
 36 Understand, O citizens, that this grey hair on my head has become a messenger from ignoble Death, who is very sharp 37 in his actions. Being such, I will place my son in my kingdom, and abandon worldly pleasures, and will, as a dweller in the forest, perform austerities until Yama's troops arrive for me."

* For nárhanti read nárhati ?

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 38 Being desirous of departing to the forest the king then enquired of the astrologers about the best days and moments for 39 anointing his son in the kingdom. And on hearing the king's speech they became confused in mind ; they who were skilled in the scriptures knew not the day nor moment nor the hours.*
40 And the astrologers spoke to the king with voices inarticulate with tears ;—" Our various knowledge has perished after that we have heard this thy speech, O king." 41 Then people came in a multitude both from other cities and also from dependent countries, and next from that city.
42 Springing up, O muni, the most eminent bráhmans, their heads quivering with emotion, addressed the king who desired to 43 depart to the forest ;—" Be gracious ! Protect us, O king, as we have been protected a long time past. The whole world will sink down, when thou, O king, hast betaken thyself to 44 the forest. Do thou then so act, O king, that the world sink not. And while we, such as we are, live our very short time, O hero, we desire not to see the regal throne deprived of thee, O lord."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 45 Thus both they and other dvijas heading the citizens, and kings, dependants and ministers appealed to him, and appealed 46 again and again ; but when he does not withdraw his determination to take up his abode in the forest, and returns them 47 the answer, " Death will not suffer it," both his ministers and dependants, and the citizens, and the aged men and the dvijas, assembled together and took counsel, " What must be done 48 here ? " While they took counsel, O bráhman, this resolution developed there among those who were devotedly attached 49 to that most righteous king—" Giving ourselves over absolutely to deep meditation, we will with composed minds propitiate the Sun with austerities and beseech him for this king's life.' 50 Being all resolved alike there on that object, some of them paid adoration to the Sun with their own bodies, by presenting to him the argha offering and presents and other oblations in due 51 course; others gratified the Sun by maintaining silence, and 52 others by repeating the Riś, Yajus and Sáman hymns; and other dvijas abstaining from food and lying down on river sandbanks, wearied with austerities, made propitiation of the Sun; 53 and others, applying themselves to the oblation to Fire, day and night repeated hymns composed to the Sun; others cast-54 ing their eyes on the Sun remained standing there. Even thus, applying themselves to those several rites, did they work in manifold ways with exceeding determination in order to propitiate the Sun.

55 Now while they were striving thus to propitiate the Sun, :
 56 Gandharva named Su-dáman came near and spoke thus—"If ye desire, O dvijas, to propitiate the Sun, let this then be done, 57 whereby the Sun will become well-pleased. Therefore—there is a forest named Guru-viśála, frequented by the Siddhas, in very mountainous Káma-rúpa—go there verily in haste.
 58 There perform your propitiation of the Sun with minds completely composed; the Siddhas' friendly region is there; there ye shall obtain all your desires."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

59 On hearing this his speech, those dvijas went to that forest and beheld the sacred and beautiful shrine of the Sun there.
 60 Those bráhmans and men of other castes, diminishing their food, and being indefatigable, O bráhmaṇ, offered worship there en-61 riched with incense, flowers and oblations; and with composed minds, celebrating his worship with flowers, unguents and other gifts, with incense, perfumes and other fragrance also, with prayers, sacrificial oblations, food, lamps and other offer- ings, those dvijas gratified the Sun, O bráhmaṇ.

The bráhmans spoke :

62 Let us approach the Sun as our refuge, the god who in splen-dour surpasses gods, Dánavas and Yakshas, the planets, and 63 the heavenly bodies; the lord of gods, who dwelling also in the sky makes everything around brilliant, and penetrates 64 the earth and the atmosphere with his rays; even him who has the names Āditya, Bhāskara, Bhānu, Savitṛi, Divākara, Pūshan 65 and Aryamañ, Svar-bhānu ; him who has flaming rays, who is* the fire which shall destroy the universe at the end of the four ages, difficult to be gazed at, who persists to the end of the 66 final dissolution ; the lord of yogins, and the never-ending one ; who is red, yellow, white and black ; him who dwells in the oblation made to Fire by ṛishis, and among the gods of sacri-67 fice ; imperishable, sublime, secret, who is the supreme gate to final emancipation from existence ; and who traverses the sky with hymns in the form of horses which are yoked together at 68 Meru reverently. And we have sought unto the light-giver, who is not true and yet true, who is a sacred multiform place of pilgrimage, who is the permanence of the universe, and is be-69 yond thought ; him who is Brahmá, who is Śiva, who is Viṣṇu, who is Prajā-pati ; who is the wind,† the atmosphere and water, 70 the earth and its mountains and oceans ; who is the planets, the constellations, the moon and other heavenly bodies, trees bearing blossom and fruit, other trees and herbs ; who sets in motion righteousness and unrighteousness, among created beings, those which are manifest and those which are 71 not manifest. Brahmá's body, and Śiva's, and Viṣṇu's is the body, of thee, the Sun, whose special nature is three-fold 72 indeed. May the Sun be gracious! May the Sun, of whom, as lord without beginning, all this world composes the body, and who is the life of the worlds—may he be gracious to us!

 73 May the Sun, whose first‡ form is luminous and can hardly be gazed upon because of its circle of splendour, and whose second 74 form is the gentle lunar orb—may he be gracious to us! And may the Sun, from those two forms of whom this universe has been fashioned consisting of Agni and Soma—may he, the god, be gracious to us!

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 75 While they are thus entirely worshipping him with praise and faith, the adorable Sun became pleased after three months, 76 O bráhmaṇ. Thereupon issuing from his orb, with the same splendour as his disk possesses, the Sun, who is hardly to be 77 gazed at, descended and displayed himself to them. Those bráhmaṇ folk bowing in faith then prostrated themselves before the Sun, who is without beginning, as he manifested himself in bodily shape, while they quivered with thrills of 78 awe; exclaiming "Reverence, reverence be to thee, the thousandrayed one ! Thou art the cause of everything—brilliant every whit. Thou art to be invoked against harmful assault, being the site of all sacrifices ; and to be meditated upon by those skilled in religious devotion. Be thou gracious !"

The Majesty of the Sun, concluded.

King Rájya-vardhana's subjects besought of the Sun that the king might reign ten thousand years more, and the Sun granted it—But the king, distressed that the boon did not include all his family and subjects, went and propitiated the Sun, and at length gained his desire—This story is commented on and its merits are extolled.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Well-pleased then, the adorable Sun said to all the populace —"Choose, O ye dvijas and other people, what ye have wished to obtain from me !"
2 Thereupon those bráhmans and other people gazing in fear on the fiery-rayed Sun, as he stood before them, prostrated themselves and said, O bráhmaṇ :—

The people spoke :

- 3 Prostrating themselves they said then to the lord of the world who proffered them a boon—"O adorable Dispeller of 4 darkness, if thou art pleased with our faith, then let our king live* ten thousand years, free from sickness, victorious over his enemies, rich in his treasury, and with firmly-enduring youth! May Rájya-vardhana live ten thousand years!"

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 5 "So be it!" said the Sun to the populace, and became too dazzling for sight, O great muni. And they, having gained 6 the boon and joyous thereat, assembled about the king. And having gained the boon completely from the thousand-rayed god, O bráhmaṇ, they made known to the king how it had happened.
- 7 On hearing that, his queen Mániní rejoiced, O bráhmaṇ; and the king pondered a long while and said nothing to the people.
8 Thereupon she Mániní, whose mind was filled with joy, exclaimed to the king her husband—"How fortunate! Prosper, 9 O king, with long life!" Thus did Mániní courteously salute her husband in her delight, but the king said nothing, his mind 10 being numbed with thought, O bráhmaṇ. She addressed her husband again, as he was rapt in thought with countenance bent downwards,—“Why dost thou not give way to joy in 11 this supreme moment of exaltation, O king? Thou shalt live free from sickness, with firmly-enduring youth, ten thousand years from to-day. Why nevertheless dost thou not rejoice?
12 But declare thou the reason, why thou hast thy mind drawn away by thought, even when a supreme moment of exaltation has been reached, O king?"

The king spoke :

- 13 How has a moment of exaltation come, O lady, and why dost thou courteously salute me? When thousands of afflictions 14 are incurred, is courteous salutation wished for?† I shall live alone ten thousand years, but not thou; when calamity
15 befalls thee, shall I not have affliction? When I see sons, grandsons, and great-grandsons and other beloved relatives 16 dead, will my affliction indeed be small? And when my most faithful servants are dead, and when my circle of friends is dead, there will then be boundless affliction for me continually, O lady. They who with emaciated bodies, constantly attached to * righteousness, have performed austerities for my sake, they shall die, and I who enjoy the benefit shall live—this is censurable! † This, such as it is, is a calamity that has befallen me, O lady of beautiful hips; it is not a moment of exaltation. How again is it thou dost not think in that thou dost courteously salute me now?

Mániní spoke :

O great king, as thou hast said, so indeed it is; herein there is no doubt. I and the citizens in our affection for thee did not perceive this mistake. Since it has gone so, consider what should be done in this matter, O lord of men. What the adorable Sun has said in his graciousness shall not be otherwise.

The king spoke :

It is a benefit that my citizens and servants have done to me out of affection; how shall I taste enjoyments, without discharging my obligation to them? I then in this position will go with subdued mind to the mountain from to-day‡ and will practise austerities, abstaining from food, resolved to propitiate the Sun. Since I shall live in firmly-enduring youth free from sickness ten thousand years through that god's favour therefore, if the adorable Sun grants us this favour, that all my people, my servants, and thou and my children, sons, grandsons and great-grandsons, and my friends shall also live, O lovely-faced one—then I shall continue in the kingdom and shall taste enjoyments with delight. If the Sun does not do this, then, O Mániní, I will practise austerities on the mountain there, abstaining from food until my life perish.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

Being thus addressed by him, she said to the king then, "Be it so!" And she also went with him to that mountain. The king going with his queen to the sanctuary there engaged in the Sun and practising great austerities, when a year and part of the next year had passed, the Maker of the day was 31 pleased then and granted him, O dvija, a boon according to his desire for the sake of all his dependants, citizens and other subjects, and his sons, O excellent bráhmaṇ.

- 32 On gaining the boon, the king going to his city ruled his 33 kingdom in joyousness, protecting his people righteously ; and as well as of himself ! ” ask me, namely, the majesty of the lord‡ Áditya Vivasvat, the 5 and prowess—and Narishyanta, Nábhaga, Púshadhra and Dhṛishṭa;† these were that Manu's sons, each the guardian of 6 a separate kingdom. All were celebrated in fame, all had the utmost skill in arms and weapons.

Seeking yet again for a son who should be more distinguished,
 7 Manu, best of the skilful ones, offered a sacrifice to Mitra and Varuṇa; in which sacrifice moreover when the offering was perversely made through the improper conduct‡ of the priest, and then sa yogánám must be read as one word sa-yogúnám. But the text is no doubt corrupt; yogínám should be yoginám, and yujjātám should perhaps be yujjādnánám, though both Parasmai-pada and Átmane-pada have the meaning "to meditate deeply." Mahámahopádhyaḥa Hara Prasád Śāstrī suggests also that layaḥ would be better than layam and would translate thus, "He is the Supreme Soul to those who are successful in meditation [i.e., the Vedántists]; he is that in which the minds of those who are engaged in meditation, but who are not yet successful, are absorbed" [i.e., the Saṅga Brahman of the Vedántists].

* Yajñeśo yajvinám api; but yajvanám must be read for yajvinám, and Mahámahopádhyaḥa Hara Prasád Śāstrī gives it the meaning "to those who consider sacrifices to be the means leading to beatitude" [i.e., the Mīmāṃsists].

† Only seven sons are mentioned here. The number is generally given as ten. There is much diversity regarding the names of all of them except Ikshváku, Narishyanta, and Dhṛishṭa. Other names omitted are Śaryāti, Karúsha, Vena, and Prámśu. See Wilson's Viṣṇu Purāṇa, book IV, chapter i, notes. The second and third names Nábhaga and Rishṭa are sometimes given as a single name, Nábhágadisṭa in the Veda and Nábhánedisṭha in the Aitareya Bráhmaṇa; and the last-named book says—he was given to sacred study, his brothers deprived him of his share in the paternal property, and referred him to their father, and by his father's advice he helped the Āṅgirasas in their sacrificial session and obtained great wealth (V. ii. 14).

‡ For śāpahṛite read śāpahute, as in the Poona edition. The verb apa-hu is

8 O great muni, a daughter was born to Manu named Ilá, slender of waist. On seeing that daughter born there, Manu
 9 offered praise to Mitra and Varuṇa then and spoke this word, —“ When I made the sacrifice with the prayer, ‘ Through 10 your favour may I obtain a distinguished son,’ a daughter was born to me who am wise. If ye being gracious grant me a 11 boon, then let this my daughter, through the favour of you both, become a son endowed with surpassing virtues! ” And 12 daughter Ilá became forthwith a son famed by the name Su-dyumna.

And afterwards that wise son of Manu, while roving the 13 forest a-hunting, was turned into a woman through the wrath of the god ;* in which condition Soma's son Budha begat of 14 her a son named Pururavas,† who was a mighty universal monarch. When that son was born, Su-dyumna again performed a great horse-sacrifice and regained a man's nature and became a king.

Su-dyumna during his manhood had three sons, Utkala,‡ 16 Vinaya§ and Gaya,|| who were most valiant, given to sacrificing, great in bodily strength. Now those three sons, who 17 were born to him during his manhood, enjoyed this earth ¶ while governing their minds in righteousness.

* The Hari-V. narrates only one change, namely, from womanhood (after she had given birth to Purúravas) to manhood (x. 615-37).

† Properly Purúravas, as in verse 17.

‡ From whom were descended the Utkalas, see note * on canto lvii, verse 43, and also verse 53, pp. 327 and 341 ante ; all the authorities agree about this.

§ He is also called Vinata, Vinatásva, and Haritásva by different authorities. He was king of the East according to the Matsya Pur., and king of the West according to the Hari-V. (x. 631-2) and Váyu Pur.

|| He gave his name to the city Gayá, as all the authorities agree ; and he was king of the East as the Hari-V. says (x. 631-2).

¶ The Bhágavata Pur. says wrongly all three sons were rulers of the South, Dakṣiṇápatha.

But Purúṛavas, who was born of that monarch Su-dyumna 18 during his womanhood, got no share of the earth, because he was Budha's son. Thereupon at Vasishṭha's word Pratish-ṭhána,* an excellent city, was given to him; he became king in that exceedingly charming city.

CANTO CXII.

The Story of Púshadhra.

Manu's son Púshadhra while hunting accidentally killed a bráhmaṇ's cow—The bráhmaṇ's son fell into a rage and cursed him—The bráhmaṇ reproved his son for his passionate conduct, but the curse could not be altered and Púshadhra became a súdra.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Manu's son who was named Púshadhra † went a-hunting to a forest. While walking about in that dense lonely forest he
- 2 lighted upon no deer at all, he was scorched by the sun's rays, and his body was seized with hunger, thirst and heat as he
- 3 walked hither and thither. Then he saw there a beautiful cow which yielded milk for sacrifice, belonging to a bráhmaṇ
- 4 who maintained the sacrificial fire, half the body of which was hidden among creepers. ‡ Thinking she was a gayál, he shot
- 5 her with an arrow, and she fell to the earth, pierced to the heart with the arrow. Thereupon the sacrificial priest's son Tapo-
- 6 ratí,§ who was a religious student, on seeing his father's sacrificial cow stricken down cursed him; and sent forward his son

* Manu gave this city to Su-dyumna who was excluded from the paternal dominions because he had been a female, and Su-dyumna gave it to Pururavas. It was situated on the north bank of the Ganges at its junction with the Yamuná (Hari-V., xxvi. 1371 and 1411-2).

† This name is generally written Prishadhra, which is the correct form.

‡ This is the reading of the Poona edition, latántar-deha-ṣhannárdhám; the text of the Calcutta edition is erroneous. The Bombay edition reads less properly latántar-deha-ṣhinnárdhám.

§ I have not found this name elsewhere.

- named Vábhravya* who tended the cow. Then, O muni, his 7 mental feelings were overcome by wrath and resentment, and he fell into a rage, while his eyes rolled and were blurred with drops of perspiration that trickled down. The king Púshadhra seeing 8 that muni's son enraged said,—“Be graci us, wherefore dost thou give way to anger like a súdra. No kshatriya, no vaiśya † in truth indulges so in wrath as thou dost like a súdra, thou who art born in the noble family of a bráhman.”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 9 When that son of a pre-eminent bráhman‡ was upbraided
 thus by the king, he cursed the evil-souled king, saying : “Thou 10 shalt become § a súdra indeed ! Whatever sacred lore thou hast learnt from thy guru's mouth shall waste away, because thou hast hurt this my guru's sacrificial cow.” 11 When cursed thus the king became angry, yet he was tormented greatly by that curse. He took water up in his hand, 12 intent on cursing the other in retaliation, O bráhman. That bráhman also gave way to wrath in order to destroy the king.
 His father approached him hastily and forbade him in sooth, saying—13 “My son, enough, more than enough, of wrath which does not counteract hostility ! || Verily calmness is beneficial to the twice-born in things of this world and of the next 14 world. Anger destroys austerities ; and the angry man falls away from long life ; the angry man's knowledge melts away,

* This is a patronymic from Vabhru or Babhru. Viśvámitra had a son Vabhru from whom was descended the family of the Vabhras (Mahá-Bh., Anuśās.-p., iv. 249-259 ; Hari-V., xxvii. 1463-67 ; but see Aitar. Bráh. VII. iii. 18) ; and Śaunaka had a pupil named Vabhru (Wilson's Vishṇu-P.—edit. F. Hall—III. vi.) ; but the name Vábhravya soon after Manu's time seems out of place.

† The Poona edition gives the right reading, na kshatriyo na vá vaiśya ; the Calcutta edition wrongly puts the accusatives.

‡ Maulināḥ ; = śreshṭhasya according to the commentator. This meaning is not in the dictionary.

§ For bhaviśhyati read bhaviśhyasi.

|| For kopenáyāti-vairiṇá read kopenápratīvairiṇá as in the Poona edition.

15 and the angry man fails of his object also. There is no righteousness in the man of angry disposition ; and the passionate man obtains not his object ; nor among those whose minds are possessed by wrath is the obtaining of their wishes enough for 16 happiness. If the king has killed this cow with his full knowledge, it is right for one, who perceives what is for his own 17 benefit, to extend pardon here. Or if he has slain this my cow in ignorance, how then is he worthy of a curse, since his 18 mind was not evil ? Whatever man, while seeking his own good, harasses another—merciful men should shew pardon to 19 that man in the knowledge that he is benighted.* If wise men inflict punishment for what is done by a man in ignorance, I esteem him more than the wise men ; better are the men 20 who are ignorant.† Invoke thou no curse now on this king, my son ; by her own action indeed this cow has fallen in a painful death."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

21 Púshadhra also, prostrating himself with bowed neck before the muni's son, exclaimed aloud, " Be gracious ! " and " She 22 was slain by me in ignorance, for I thought she was a gayál ; a cow must not be killed ; through ignorance, O muni, I slew thy sacrificial cow. Be thou also gracious to me, O muni ! "

The fishi's son spoke :

23 Since my birth, O king, I have uttered nothing in vain, and my anger this day can never be altered, illustrious sir.
 24 Therefore I cannot make this curse otherwise, O king ; but the second curse which was prepared for thee is averted.
 25 The father then took the son who had spoken thus and went to his own hermitage. And Púshadhra in sooth became a śúdra.

* Or, " to that man whose understanding is foolish."

† Tam appears to be the right reading ; but read tad instead of tam ? " then better than the wise are, in my opinion, the men who are ignorant."

CANTO CXIII.

Nábhága's exploits.

Karusha's descendants were the Kárushas—Dishta's son was Nábhága ; Nábhága wanted to marry a vaiśya maiden—Her father referred the matter to the king Dishta, and the king consulted the rishis—They declared the prince might marry her, provided he first married a kshatriya maiden—He spurned that and took her—The king tried to vanquish him by force, but was caused by a bráhmaṇ to desist, on the ground that the prince had degenerated into a vaiśya.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Karusha's sons were the Kárushas,* who were kshatriyas and warriors. Now they were seven hundred valiant men ; and from them descended others in thousands.
- 2 Now Dishta's† son was Nábhága ;‡ he continued in the bloom of youthfulness. He saw a most surpassingly charming
- 3 vaiśya maiden. As soon as he beheld her, the prince was stricken in mind with love ; he became absorbed in sighs and
- 4 reproaches. He went to her father and asked for the vaiśya maiden in marriage ; and then to the prince, whose mental
- 5 feelings were under the dominion of the god of love, spoke her father—to the king's son spoke he, joining his hands respectfully, being afraid of the prince's father, this speech as he
- 6 bowed with deference, O bráhmaṇ—"Nobles of thy class are the enjoyers of the earth : dependants are we, paying tax to

The Hari-Vaṁśa says two of his sons though vaiśyas became bráhmaṇs (xi. 658) ; and the Bhágavata Pur. says two of his sons, though kshatriyas obtained bráhmaṇhood (IX. ii. 17).

The prince spoke :

- 7 Equality of the human body is wrought by love, folly and other feelings. So indeed the human body is endowed with 8 those very feelings at the appropriate time,* and thus in truth those feelings also come into existence for its benefit. And different feelings, different persons exist when folk exist of 9 separate castes. Moreover, other feelings also† that are inappropriate become proper according to season, and likewise appropriate feelings become inappropriate ; for propriety de-things that are longed for, so that same body when used‡ with 11 due regard to season is well regulated.§ Do thou accordingly bestow this thy highly esteemed daughter on me ; otherwise calamity will be beheld in my body.

The vaiśya spoke :

other's authority, namely the king's. When he thy father permits thee, take thou her ; I will give her.

- 14 gurus have scope. What has Love's conversation to do with listening to gurus? This is incompatible. In other things men should consult their gurus.

The vaiśya spoke :

- 15 Such, even this, is Love's talk ! I, I here, will ask the guru, thine, the suitor's. My talk is not based on the speech of love.

Márkandeya spoke :

- 16 When addressed thus the prince became silent. And he, the vaiśya, related to that prince's father all that the prince 17 thought. Thereupon his father summoned, before him the chief dvijas, Ríćika* and the other bráhmans, and the prince ; and he made known the matter as it had been announced to 18 him ; and after making it known he, being so situated in the matter, said to the munis,—“The best of dvijas deign† to declare what ought to be done.”

The rishis spoke :

- 19 O prince, if thou hast love for this vaiśya's child, then let this ordinance of righteousness‡ verily be observed, but let it 20 be observed in the order enjoined bylaw. Marriage was enjoined for princes in the first place with the daughter of one who had been royally anointed. Be it so now first in thy case ; and immediately afterwards this maiden also shall become thy wife.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 22 When admonished thus, he flung aside altogether that speech of those high-souled munis; and going outside he 23 seized her, and raising his sword aloft exclaimed,—“ I have carried off the vaiśya's daughter by the Rákshasa form of marriage; let him who has power here rescue her!”
 24 Then the vaiśya seeing his daughter seized, O bráhmaṇ, hastened to that prince's father for help, exclaiming “ Save 25 her!” His father enraged thereat gave command to his great army—“ Let him be slain; let wicked Náblága who violates 26 righteousness be slain!” Thereon that army fought indeed with the king's son; it was laid low then in great numbers by 27 him, who was skilled in weapons, with his weapon. The king, on hearing that the army was slain by the prince, went forth 28 himself indeed to fight, surrounded by his army. In the battle then which took place between the king and his son, the father excelled the prince in weapons and arms.

 a man marries after neglecting union in his own caste, of that thy son, who is such, has fallen to vaiśya-hood; he is of wretched understanding. He has no right to combat with thou from the business of battle!"

CANTO CXIV.

Nábhága's exploits.

Nábhága married the vaiśya maiden and became a vaiśya—He had a son Bhanandana, who with the help of the rishi Nípa conquered the earth and offered the sovereignty to his father Nábhága—Nábhága declined it as he was a vaiśya, and his wife Su-prabhá then explained to him, that she was not really of vaiśya descent, but the daughter of king Su-deva who became a vaiśya under the rishi Pramati's curse, because he would not rescue Pramati's wife from his own friend Nala.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 The king thereupon desisted from battle with his son; and
- 2 he indeed, that king's son, married that vaiśya maiden. He became a vaiśya thereby. Starting up he spoke to the king,—
 "O king, let it be declared to me what I must do."

* For sa-varṇá- read sva-varṇá-? but the meaning would be the same.

† For no 'pi tad-vastu-bhág' read so 'pi tad-varṇa-bhág' as in the Poona edition.

The king spoke :

- 3 Let Bábhravya* and the other ascetics, who are engaged in the superintendence of righteousness, declare what is the occupation for this man for the end of righteousness—do thou act accordingly.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 4 Then those munis seated in the council announced that for him the tending of cattle and cultivation and trade should be
 5 the highest righteousness. And the king's son complied with what was declared by those expounders of righteousness to be righteousness for him who had fallen from his own sphere of righteousness.
 6 A son was born to him afterwards, who was famed by the name Bhanandana.† Being sent by his mother who said, “Be 7 a keeper of cattle, my son,” he went forth ; and when enjoined thus by his mother, he prostrated himself before his mother and went to the royal rishi Nípa‡ who had resorted to mount
 8 Himavat ; and approaching him Bhanandana held his feet according to rule, and prostrating himself before this royal rishi spoke :
 9 “ Adorable sir, verily I have been commanded by my mother thus, ‘Be thou a keeper of cattle’§ ; and yet I must protect 10 the earth ; how can there be assent to her ? Verily I must protect the earth,|| when it may be appropriated¶ by men.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 12 The royal rishi Nípa then gave to high-souled Bhananda 13 a complete set of weapons, O bráhmaṇ. After acquiring skill in the weapons he went to his paternal uncle's sons, Vasuráta and the other sons, O dvija; he was so commanded by that 14 high-souled rishi. He demanded half of the kingdom as befitted his father and paternal grandfather; and they said,—“ A 15 vaiśya's son thou art; how shalt thou enjoy the earth? ” A battle then occurred between Bhananda who was skilled in weapons and those his kinsmen Vasuráta and the rest, who were 16 angry and showered weapons on him; but vanquishing them all when their troops had been shattered with his weapons, he, wise in righteousness, took the earth away from them by 17 righteous combat. After vanquishing his foes, he next presented all the earth and the sovereignty to his father; and his father did not accept it, and in front of his wife made answer to the son then.

Nábhága spoke :

- 18 O Bhananda, this kingdom is thine; let it which was ruled by thy ancestors be ruled by thee.

The king spoke :*

 23 Rule thou the kingdom thyself the while, or relinquish it to thy heirs. For me it is good to keep my father's command and not to rule the earth.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

24 Laughing thereat his wife, the lady Su-prabhá by name, made answer to her husband, " O king, take the mighty kingdom. Pramati spoke :

36 Be it so ! thou, Sir, art a vaiśya.* A kshatriya is so named because he guards one from injury.† Kshatriyas hold the weapon in order that there may be no cry of distress. Thou being such art no kshatriya ; verily thou shalt be a vaiśya of base family.

CANTO CXV.

Su-prabhā continues her story to Nābhāga—That Pramati reduced Nala to ashes, and, on Su-deva's imploring pardon, mitigated the curse on Su-deva, with the promise that he should regain his kshatriya-hood—Also that she had been the daughter of the royal rishi Su-ratha, and had been cursed by Agastya to be born a vaiśya woman temporarily.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 After imprecating the curse on him then, Pramati, the descendant of Bhṛigu, enraged and burning up, as it were, the three worlds by reason of his wrath, spoke to Nala, O dvija ;—
- 2 “Inasmuch as thou, Sir, intoxicated with lust, forcibly seizest my wife here in my hermitage, become thou therefor ashes

- 3 forthwith." And then immediately as he uttered that speech, Nala, consumed by the fire that sprang from the rishi's body, became forthwith a heap of ashes.
- 4 On seeing that rishi's power then Su-deva sobered thereat, bending himself in reverence, said thus—"Grant pardon!
5 grant pardon! Let that which I have spoken,* adorable sir, a thing disordered by reason of intoxication through drinking spirituous liquor, be pardoned; be thou gracious; let this 6 curse be turned aside!" Being thus propitiated by him, Pra-mati, the descendant of Bhrigu, whose anger had passed off when Nala was burnt up, replied with mind devoid of strong 7 feeling;—"The word which I have uttered shall not be otherwise;
nevertheless being gracious I will do thee a supreme favour.
8 Thou, sir, shalt be a vaiśya by race--of this there can be no doubt; thou, a kshatriya, shalt be a vaiśya soon in the very 9 next birth. When a kshatriya's son shall seize thy daughter by force, thou being seized by one of thy own race shalt then 10 become † a kshatriya again, O vaiśya." Thus that Su-deva as a vaiśya became my father, O king.
- 11 Hear also, illustrious sir, all the story ‡ who I am. There was of yore a royal rishi named Su-ratha on mount Gandhamādāna, who practised austerities, restricted his food, aban-12 doned worldly associations, and abode in the forest. On his seeing then a mainá § fallen from a hawk's beak to the ground, compassion sprang up within that high-souled rishi, 13 and he swooned therewith; then when the swoon passed off, I was produced from his body, and seeing me he took me with 14 a loving mind. "Because she has been born from me, while I was overcome with compassion, she shall therefore be known by 15 the name Kṛipā-vatī" ||—so said he, my lord. Thereafter growing up in his hermitage, I used to wander day and night

 why because of an offence by other girls hast thou cursed me?”

The rishi spoke:

- 18 “By reason of contact with the bad even that which is not bad becomes bad, just as a jar containing the five substances obtained from cows † becomes spoilt if a drop of spirituous along with thy husband and shalt obtain heavenly pleasures.

 22 Thus was I cursed formerly by that great rishi, O king of kings; and my father was thus cursed by Pramati formerly.
 23 So thou art not a vaiśya, O king; nor was my father a vaiśya;

CANTO CXVI.

The Exploits of Bhananda and Vatsa-pri.

Nábháya declined the kingdom and Bhanandana became king—He had a son Vatsa-pri—A Daitya king Kujrimbha, who had a magic club called Sunanda, opened a great hole near king Vidúratha's city and carried the princess Muláratí down to Pátála—Her brothers failed to rescue her and were made captive—Vatsa-pri killed the Daitya, after she destroyed the club's magic power, and rescued her and her brothers—She was named Sunandá after the club, and Vatsa-pri married her.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 On hearing this herspeech and his son's, the king, wise in
- 2 righteousness, addressed his wife and son again,—“ Inasmuch
- as I relinquished the kingdom at my father's command, I will
- not take it again ; why dost thou, O wife, draw out my soul
- 3 with vain words ? Standing fast in my duties as vaiśya I will
- pay thee taxes, my son. Enjoy thou the whole kingdom, or
- relinquish it if thou wishest.”
- 4 Being addressed thus by his father, prince Bhanandana *
- then governed the kingdom in righteousness and in like wise
- 5 married a wife. Unrepulsed was his discus in the earth, O
- bráhma*n, and his mind was not set upon unrighteousness. All
- 6 kings were in subjection to him. He performed a sacrifice ac- cording to precept ; he rules the earth well. He in sooth was
- the only lord ; his commands pervaded the earth.
- 7 A son was born to him, namely Vatsa-pri by name, who, a - high-souled king, surpassed his father with the multitude of
- 8 his good qualities. And his wife was Saunandá, daughter of
- Vidúratha, who was devoted to her husband, an illustrious
- woman. He gained her by his valour in slaying the Daitya
- king* Kujrimbha,† the enemy of Indra.

* Or Bhalandana according to Vishṇu Pur. IV. i. where his descendants are given.

† The Calcutta text reads Kujumbha here and in verse 9, incorrectly ; see verse 16.

Kraushṭuki spoke :

- 9 Adorable sir, how did he gain her through the destruction of Kujrimbha ? Tell me this story with benignant mind.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 10 There was a king named Vidúratha * whose fame was celebrated in the earth. Two sons were born to him, Su-níti and 11 Su-mati. Now Vidúratha went to the forest once upon a time to hunt. He beheld a very great pit, as it were the earth's 12 mouth thrust up. On seeing it he pondered, "What is this dreadful thing ? I trow it is a hole down to Pátála : it has 13 not belonged to the earth a long while." While thinking thus, he saw in a lonely wood there an ascetic brahman named Su-14 vrata approaching, and the king being astonished asked him, —"What is this ? It is very deep and displays the earth's belly which is situated within."

The ṛishi spoke :

- 15 "Knowest thou it not, O king ? for thou art deemed by me to have spies as thine eyes. † A king ought to know everything 16 that passes on the face of the earth. A very valiant fierce Dánava dwells in Rasátala ; because he makes the earth to 17 yawn, ‡ he is therefore called Ku-jrimbha. Whatever has been produced, whether produced on the earth or in heaven, is wrought by him, O king ; how is it then that thou dost not 18 know him, Sir ? That wicked-souled demon carried off the club named Su-nanda, which Tvasṭṛi fashioned of yore ; there-19 with he slays his enemies in battle. Hidden within Pátála that Asura cleaves this earth with it, and makes doors of exit for 20 all the Asuras ; with that weapon, the club Su-nanda, the earth has been pierced in this spot. How shalt thou, Sir, enjoy

* The story shows that this king's capital was near the river Nirvindhyá which was apparently in the Málwa region (see verses 27 and 33). There were several kings of this name, but I have found none who had two sons of the names mentioned.

21 this earth unless thou conquerest him ? That fierce, mighty adversary of the gods, armed with the club, destroys sacrifices 22 and fattens up the Daityas. If thou slayest this foe, whose sphere is in Pátála, thou shalt thereby become lord of all the 23 earth, the supreme monarch. That mighty demon's club is called Saunanda by men-folk ; and the wise moreover speak of 24 it* as partly strong and partly weak ; yet when touched by a woman it loses its power on that day,† O king ; on the following 25 day it issues forth with its power regained. That demon of evil ways does not know then the majestic power of the club, nor the defect which comes at the touch of a woman's fingers, that is, the collapse of its power.

26 “ Thus I have declared to thee, O king, the might of that evil-souled Dánava and of his club. As I have spoken, so do 27 thou comport thyself. This hole which he has made in the earth is near thy city, O king ; why art thou foolishly ‡ unconcerned about it, Sir ? ”

28 Now when that rishi had spoken thus and departed, the king went to his city and took counsel with his ministers who 29 were skilled in counsel within his city. He made known to the ministers all that story as he had heard it, both the majestic 30 power of the club and also the waning of its power. Now his daughter Mudá-vatí, who was by his side, heard that counsel which the king was taking with his ministers.

31 But some days afterwards, the Daitya Kujrimbha carried off that maiden, who was possessed of energy, from a grove, while 32 she was accompanied by her maiden-friends. On hearing that, the king's eyes were distraught with anger, and he said to his two sons, “ Hasten quickly ye two who are well acquaint-33 ed with the forests : there is a hole on the bank of the Nir-vin-dhá ; § go ye down thereby to Rasátala and slay him who with most evil mind has carried Mudá-vatí off.”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

34 Thereupon those two sons of his, following on the steps of that demon, reached that hole and in excessive wrath fought with 35 Kujrimbha with the aid of their own army. Then occurred a very terrible combat between them with maces, swords, spears, 36 javelins, and axes and arrows without intermission. After it that Daitya, who possessed the might of illusive power, bound those two princes in battle after slaying all their soldiers.

37 On hearing of that, the king spoke thus to all his soldiers, “ I have fallen into utter misery, now that my sons are in 38 bonds, (O best of munis) ; whoever shall slay that Daitya and shall set my daughter there free, I will bestow even her, 39 the large-eyed maiden, on him.” Even thus the desperate king made a proclamation in his city then in order to obtain the deliverance of his sons and daughter from bondage, O muni.

40 Bhanandana's son Vatsa-prí then heard of that promise in sooth, which was proclaimed abroad—he, possessed of strength, 41 skilled in weapons, endowed with heroism. And arriving there he saluted this noblest of kings, and bowing with deference 42 spoke to him who was his own father's peerless friend ;—“ Command me in sooth speedily ; I will deliver thy two sons and also thy daughter, after slaying that Daitya through thy very glory.”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

43 Embracing him joyfully, who was his dear friend's son, the king said :

44 “ Go thou to full success,* my dear son. My dear son shall stand in my place, if he performs the precept thus. Do this quickly, my dear son, if thy mind is resolute.”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

45 Then armed with scymitar and bow, having a leathern bow-guard and finger-protector bound on him, the heroic prince 46 went in haste to Pátála by that hole. The prince made his bow-string twang with an exceedingly vehement sound

then, wherewith the whole of Pátála was filled throughout.
 47 Hearing the sound of the bow-string, the Dánava king, Ku-jrimbha came forward then in excessive wrath, attended by his 48 army. Then occurred a battle between him and the king's son, one with his army against the other with his army, mighty 49 against mighty. When the Dánava had fought with him for three days, he was filled with rage in his soul and rushed 50 to get his club. Worshipped with perfumes, garlands and incense, it stands in the private apartments, O illustrious sir ; for 51 it had been fashioned by the Prajá-pati.* Mudá-vati, who knew well the secret of the club's majestic power, bowing her 52 neck very low, touched the noble club then. Until the great demon grasps the club again, till then the beautiful maiden touched it many times under pretence of paying reverence 53 to it. Going back then the king of the demons fought with the club. Vainly fell the blows of the club on those 54 enemies. But inasmuch as the supreme weapon, the club Saunanda, had lost its power, O muni, the Daitya fought with his weapons and arms against his foe in the battle.
 55 With his arms and weapons the demon was not the prince's equal, and that, his might with the club, had been 56 dissipated by the maiden.† Conquering then the Dánava's weapons and arms, the king's son forthwith forced him from his chariot ; and then the demon grasping his shield and scy-57 mitar rushed at him again. The prince felled that enemy of the lord of the thirty gods, as he rushed forwards violently incited and displaying his rage,—felled him to the earth with his weapon of fire which gleamed like the Fire that burns up the 58 world finally. That foe of the thirty gods was wounded grievously in the heart by the fiery weapon and quitted his body.
 And forthwith there was high festival among the huge snakes within the confines of Rasátala.
 59 Then fell a shower of flowers upon the king's son ; the Gandharva lords sang forth, the gods' instruments of music 60 sounded out. And the prince, after slaying that demon, set free

- 61 And the king of the serpents, Ananta who is named Śeṣha, 62 took that club, when that Kujrimbha was slain; and he, Śeṣha, lord of all the serpents, was satisfied with her; he rich in aust-63 terities had meditated with glee upon the course of Mudá-vatí's mind. Because the most beautiful maiden had repeated-64 ly touched the club Sunanda, knowing the power of the touch of a woman's palm * on it, therefore the serpent king in his joy gave Mudá-vatí then the name Su-nandá, derived from the quality of the club Saunanda, O dvija.
- 65 And the prince brought her in company with her two brothers to their father's presence quickly, and bowing down 66 spoke to him thus—"Here are brought thy two sons, dear father, and here is brought Mudá-vatí according to thy command; what else I must do, declare thou that."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 67 Thereat the king's heart was filled with gladness, and he exclaimed aloud, "Well done! well done!" and "Splendid!
 68 my dear son, my dear son! I am honoured by the thirty gods, my dear son, for three reasons—in that I have both gained thee that my children have come unharmed to me here again; there-will do. Thou verily knowest, dear father, that in this matter

21 Such was that king’s son Khanitra in disposition; he was endowed with every good quality; he possessed good fortune, his eyes were like a lotus-leaf. He appointed those his four 22 brothers to separate kingdoms out of affection, and he himself enjoyed this earth bounded by the seas; thus he placed Śauri over 23 the east region, Mudávasu|| over the south, Sunaya over the 24 that king had separate families of bráhmans as purohitas, and

 48 deity‡ which was very formidable, had a large mouth, was exceedingly terrible to behold, held a large pike raised aloft, was 49 lofty and was exceedingly pitiless. It came to the place then where king Khanitra was, and it was cast out by that un-
 50 blemished king's store of merit. The four-fold female deity

Khanitra's exploits concluded.

Khanitra, on hearing of the destruction of the family priests, lamented and took the blame on himself—He resigned the kingdom to his son Kshupa, departed to the forest, and died there in sanctity.

- 1 Thereupon there was great dismay in all the world, inasmuch as those purohitas dwelling in separate cities perished 2 at the same time. Khanitra heard then that his brothers' purohitas had reached their death, and that his brother's minister 3 Viśva-vedin also had been burnt up. Khanitra the great king was extremely surprised, wondering "What is this?" O best 4 of munis; and knew not the cause. Then the king asked Vasishṭha who had come to his palace, what the reason was why those, the minister and purohitas of his brothers, had 5 perished. When questioned by him the great muni related then how it had happened, what Śauri's minister had said 6 and what Śauri had replied to him, and what he, that evil minister, had performed as a means of producing dissension 7 among the brothers and what the purohitas had done; for what reason they, the purohitas who were absolutely compassionate even to an enemy, had perished, while injuring that sinless 8 king. On hearing that, the king reproached himself exceedingly then, exclaiming, "Alas! I am sore stricken!" in Vasish-ṭha's presence, O dvija.

The king spoke :

- 9 "Fie on me, who am of unholy composition, of scanty good-fortune, destitute of splendour! Sin which is utterly contemn-ed by all the worlds has been committed by me through the 10 fault of fate. That is the reason why those four bráhmans have perished: what other man besides me will there be more 11 sinful on the earth? If I were not a man here on the earth, they, my brothers' purohitas, would not have perished then.

 12 Fie on the kingdom! fie too on my birth in the family of great kings—I who have become the cause of the destruction of the 13 bráhmans! They, my brothers' sacrificing priests, met their end while working at their masters' object; no wicked men were they; I am wicked in causing their destruction.
 14 What am I to do? Where am I to go? No one verily is a sinner on the earth but I who have become the cause of the bráhmans' destruction."

15 Thus grieving in heart, king Khanitra being desirous of 16 departing to the forest anointed his son to the throne. After anointing his son who was named Kshupa to the kingdom, the king departed to the forest, along with his three wives, to 17 perform austerities. Going there he, best of kings, being well-versed in the ordinances concerning vána-prásthás, performed 18 austerities three hundred and fifty years. Now, when his body had become emaciated through austerities, the noble king, having restrained all the organs of sense, quitted his life 19 while dwelling in the forest, O chief of bráhmans. He went then to the sacred worlds which yield every desire and are undecaying, which are to be gained by kings by means of 20 horse-sacrifices and other sacrifices. And those his three wives quitted their life at the very same time with him, and gained the same world* along with him indeed, their most highsouled lord.

21 This is the story of Khanitra's exploits; when heard, it destroys stains; and it destroys the stains of those who read it, illustrious sir. Hear next about Kshupa.

Vivimsa's exploits.

Kshupa emulated a more ancient king of the same name and enriched the bráhmans—He was succeeded by his son Vira; and Vira by his son Vivimsa whose was a prosperous reign.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 Now Khanitra's son Kshupa on receiving the kingdom protected his people, while delighting them in righteousness, even
- 2 as his father had done. That king was by disposition liberal of gifts, and a sacrificer of sacrifices; he was just alike both to foe and friend in the path of the administration of justice and so forth.
- 3 One day the king, while at his own residence, O muni, was addressed by his bards,—“ As was king Kshupa of yore, so art
- 4 thou, sir. ”† Of yore there was a king Kshupa,‡ Brahmá's son; as had been the exploits of this king, such that one indeed endeavoured to achieve.

The king spoke :

- 5 I wish to hear of the exploits of the most high-souled Kshupa. If such can be accomplished by me, I will perform them.

The bards spoke :

- 6 That king made cattle-keeping bráhmans§ multitudes of yore, O king; and with the tribute of the sixth portion that high-souled king performed a sacrifice on the earth.

* Canto cxx in the Calcutta edition.

† For tathábhavat read tathá bhaván as in the Poona edition.

‡ It must apparently be this Kshupa to whom reference is made in the Mahá-Bh. (Sánti-p. clxvi. 6164-65 and 6192-93) where it is said that after the sword was fashioned Manu gave it to Kshupa for the protection of the people, and Ikshváku got it from Kshupa.

§ Go-bráhmaṇán. The compound occurs again in verses 10 and 12. It does not seem to mean “cattle and bráhmans,” for this meaning hardly suits the verb used, and the compound occurs twice in the singular in verse 12. In that verse the Poona edition varies in reading go-bráhmaṇáh, plural, but both editions agree in reading go-bráhmaṇáya, singular.

The king spoke :

- 7 Who like me will follow those high-souled kings ? Never-8 theless, may he be strenuous after the exploits of those kings
 9 of exalted exploits ! Hear then the promise which I now 10 make—I will imitate the great king Kshupa's exploits. I will perform sacrifices three and three on the present and future* gathering of the harvests on the earth which has four streams—this promise I have made. And the tribute which cattle-keeping bráhmans gave to that king of yore, the very same I will restore to the bráhmans and the cattle.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 11 Having thus pledged his word, Kshupa performed it accord-12 ingly. He, best of sacrificers, offered three sacrifices on the appearance of the crops. And the very tribute which a cattle-keeping bráhman gave to kings before, of that same quantity gave he other wealth to the cattle-keeping bráhman.
 13 He had a son, Víra,† of his wife Pramathá, a blameless 14 prince, by whose majesty and valour kings were brought into subjection. And his dear wife was a Vidarbha princess named Nandiní ; he, the lord, begat a son Vivimśa‡ of her.
 15 While Vivimśa was ruling the earth, as a king of great vi-16 gour, the earth became densely populated with men. Par-janya rained in due season, and the earth abounded with 17 harvests, and the harvests were most fruitful, and the fruits were full of juice, and the juices gave nourishment, yet the nourishment caused no outrageous behaviour ; nor did the stores of riches become causes of debauchery among men.
 18 His enemies were cowed by his energy, O great muni. The people, who were all a band of friends, desire good health ; the 19 citizens desire mirth. After performing very many sacrifices,

Khañinētra's exploits.

Vivimśa was succeeded by his son Khañinētra, who was a great sacrificer—Being son-less he went hunting to kill a deer for a sacrifice, and two deer came, one having no offspring and the other many—Each pressed his claim to be killed, but the king refused to kill either.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 His son was Khañinētra, great in strength and prowess, at whose sacrifices sang the Gandharvas, filled with astonishment,
- 2 thus—"Like unto Khañinētra there will be no other sacrificer on earth." After completing ten thousand sacrifices, he gave
- 3 the earth with its seas away. And he it was who, after giving away all the earth to high-souled brāhmanas, acquired wealth

- 8 That monarch being son-less engaged in a hunt with the desire of obtaining flesh for a sacrifice to the pitris in order to obtain a son, O great muni.  “Accomplish thy object by killing me.”

The king spoke :

- 9 Other deer on seeing me flee in great terror ; how is it that thou wishest to yield thyself as a gift to death ?

The deer spoke :

- 10 I have no son, O great king ; vain is the purpose of my existence ; while wandering about I do not perceive the use of maintaining my life here.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 11 Now another deer approached the king and said in the presence of that first deer—“ Enough of this, O king ; slay me, 12 perform thy rite with my flesh. As thou mayest thus succeed in thy object, so will that also be beneficial to me.
 13 Thou, O great king, desirest to sacrifice to thy pitṛis in order to obtain a son ; how wilt thou gain thy earnest wish by means 14 of the flesh of this other son-less deer ? As is the rite that is to be performed, such is the thing one should offer. Knowledge of the odours of sweetly-odorous things is not ascertained by

The king spoke :

- 15 This other deer has declared to me that the reason of his indifference to worldly desires is his son-lessness : tell thou me what is the reason of thy indifference to worldly desires in thy abandonment of life.

The deer spoke :

- 16 Many are my sons, O king ; many are my daughters also ;
 in the miseries of my anxieties for whom I dwell as amid the 17 flames of a raging conflagration. O king, this most weakly deer-tribe is to be mastered by every one, and I have excessive self-interest in those my children—therefore I am distressed.
 18 I am in fear of men, lions, tigers, wolves, and other ravenous beasts, but not of a feeble animal, nor of all good creatures, nor 19 even of a dog or jackal, my lord. Being such, I desire most

- earnestly for the sake of my kindred, that all this earth may be free for once from the fear of men, lions, and other beasts.
 20 Some animals, cows, goats, sheep, horses and such like, feed on grass; for their thriving I wish those beasts sent to destruction. After those beasts then have departed and my offspring remain separate, anxious thoughts occur by hundreds 21 to me whose mind is enveloped by self-interest, such as—'Has a son of mine while browsing in the forest encountered a crafty trap, or a thunderbolt, or a noose? or has he fallen into the power of a man, or lion or other dangerous creature?
 22 What condition has this one reached? what condition have those sons of mine reached, who while actually grazing
 23 have now gone to the very great forest?' On seeing that those my sons have reached my presence,* O king, I, panting somewhat, wish for night however as security 24 At dawn I desire day earnestly as security, and when the sun has set I desire again the night earnestly: when 25 will there be safety at every time? This I have declared to thee, O king, is the cause of my anxiety. Be gracious to me therefore—let this thy arrow be discharged at me!
 26 That is the cause why pierced by hundreds of sufferings I thus forsake even my life; hearken thou as I speak, O king!
 27 Named 'The Sun-less' are the worlds, to which those who kill themselves go; but cattle that are suitable for sacrifice attain 28 thus to exalted stations,† O lord. Agni was a domestic animal‡ formerly; the lord of the waters was a domestic animal; and so was the Sun, who gained exalted stations and reached his 29 culmination in sacrifice.§ Shew me this pity then, and conduct me to an exalted position; and thou shalt obtain the earnestly desired wish of thy soul by gaining a son.

The first deer spoke :

31 O supreme king, this deer must not be killed : he is happy as a kind deer, who has many sons ; I must be killed who have no progeny.

The second deer spoke :

32 Happy in truth art thou, sir deer, being such a one for whom suffering exists in a single body ! He who has many bodies has 33 manifold sufferings. But formerly when I was single, the suffering that arises from the body consisted then in my regard for myself ; that became doubled when there was a wife.
34 When children were born, then as many as they were, so many 35 sites in my body did my sufferings find in sooth. Hast not thou, sir, been successful, for whom existence has not tended to excessive suffering ? My offspring are for suffering in this 36 world, and will be of opposite qualities in the next world. Since I do that for the preservation and nourishment of my children, and am anxious about that, my birth will therefore certainly be in hell.*

The king spoke :

37 I know not, O deer, whether he who has offspring is happy in this world, or he who has no son ; and this undertaking of 38 mine in order to obtain a son makes my mind vacillate. Offspring verily tend then to cause suffering both in this world and in the other world ; nevertheless, debts come upon those 39 who have no son—so have I heard. I being such will strive to obtain a son, without the slaughter of breathing beings, O deer, even with very arduous austerities, as did a king of yore.

5 When addressed thus by him, the astrologers spake then to the king—"When the moment, the constellation and the con-

arrows which were falling on him, and in his agility cracked 8 the scymitar of another and the bow of another. One prince perished when his armour was torn away by the prince, and another who was on foot being wounded by Avikshita quitted the battle.
- 9 When that entire band of kings was thus thrown into confusion, seven hundred warriors stood forth resolute unto death, 10 who were nobly born, in the flower of their age, heroic, valiant, and modest, after all the army was defeated and was in a panic of † Dharma-yuddha, "battle according to the (kshatriyas') code of Right." It appears to mean a battle according to the fair rules of war, fought out to the end till one or other combatant is completely vanquished or slain. Thus Bhishma said to Karṇa—"If this most terrible enmity cannot be relinquished, I give permission, O Karṇa; fight thou with the desire to gain heaven. Without passion, with impetuosity subdued, do the deed of a king in sooth, to the utmost of thy power, with thy full effort, conducting thyself according to the conduct of good men. ... Thou shalt gain from Dhanañjaya the worlds which are won by the righteousness of kshatriyas (kshatra-dharma). Fight without arrogance, relying on thy strength and valour, for there is nought better for a kshatriya than righteously conducted battle" (dharmya yuddha : M.-Bh., Bhishma-p. cxxiv. 5851-4). Again, Soma-datta said to Sātyaki,—"How is it that thou, O Sātvata, hast forsaken the righteousness of kshatriyas, which was seen of old by the high-souled gods, and delightest in the righteousness of Dasyus? At one who has turned to flee, at one in distress, at one who has laid down his arms, at one who begs for quarter—how indeed did a wise man, who delights in the righteousness of kshatriyas, ever strike at such a one in battle?" (Drōṇa p. clvi. 6730-1). The matter is summed up by Karṇa thus—"This, we the code of Right† all together fought with him, who continued to fight according to the code of Right, while their faces were tudes of arrows, another split his bow, another splitting his 15 banner with arrows, laid it low on the ground. Moreover, others smote his horses, and others broke his chariot, and others besides smote‡ his back with blows of their clubs and with 16 arrows. When his bow was split, the king's son enraged then grasped his sword and shield, but that also another struck down.§ 17 When his sword and shield were broken, he best of club-wielders grasped his club ; and another, like a dexterous man, split 18 it with a sharp curved-headed arrow. The kings, turning their faces away from righteously conducted combat, surrounded him and pierced him, some with a thousand arrows, some 19 with a hundred. He fell exhausted on the earth, one tormented by many ; and those illustrious princes then bound him.

 20 Having captured that king's son by unrighteousness they and merry, taking the king's son bound. And the maiden, who was holding her svayam-vara, was placed by that king in Avikshita's exploits.

Avikshita's mother Virá roused up his father and allied kings to rescue Avikshita, and they defeated Viśála and his confederates—Avikshita was set free, but refused to marry the princess as she had seen him overpowered, although she praised him and his father entreated him—She vowed to marry no one else, and departed to the forest and wore herself away with austerities—The gods in compassion sent a messenger to her and promised that she should have a son who should be a universal monarch—She then regained her health.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

Viśāla taking the maiden came near, Avikshit spoke before his father touching the marriage, O brāhman rishi :—

27 fight. Bestow her on some one else, and let her choose some one else, who is unscathed in fame and valour and has not been

"I choose a son, great in valour."

The gods spoke :

O sinless one, hast delivered !

The prince spoke :

Avikshita's exploits.

Avikshít agreed to marry the rescued maiden—The Gandharvas appeared then, and one of them explained she was his daughter and had been born as king Viśála's daughter Bháviní because of Agastya's curse—They were married and lived in the Gandharvas' world—She gave birth to a son there—All the celestial beings came to the boy's birth-ceremony, and because of the blessings invoked for him from the Maruts he was called Marutta.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 On hearing this her speech, he remembered his father's fine speech which the king had uttered upon the promise re-
- 2 garding the " What-want-ye " penance, and prince Avíkshít replied to the maiden, he with mind full of love to the maiden who had also abandoned all enjoyments for his sake,—

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

other Gandharvas.

The Gandharva spoke :

- 7 O prince, this high-spirited maiden is my daughter, by name Bháminí. By reason of Agastya's curse she became 8 Viśála's daughter. It was Agastya who was angered with her as she was playing in a child's manner, so he cursed 9 her then, saying, "Thou shalt become a woman ! "† And we appeased him by saying, "She is a child and cannot reflect ; do thou show favour for the offence against thee, 10 O bráhmaṇ ṛishi." Being appeased by us the great muni said this—"I passed a lenient curse on her, because I considered she is but a child ; it cannot indeed be altered." 11 By reason of that curse by Agastya my daughter was born in Viśála's house as this beautiful fine-browed maiden, called 12 by the name Bháviní. Therefore I have come on this account ; take this princess who is my daughter in marriage ;

Marutta's exploits.

Avíkshít returned and presented his son to his father Karandhama, and there was great rejoicing—The boy grew up, learned in sacred lore and skilful with all weapons—Karandhama resigned the kingdom, but Avíkshít refused it because of the shame of his former captivity—Marutta was made king, and Karandhama retired to the forest.

He was one of the sixteen greatest and most famous kings of antiquity (Droṇa-p. lv. 2170-83; Sánti-p. xxix. 910-17). He is said to have offered a sacrifice to the bráhman rishi Uśiravija at the Jámbu-nada lake in the Northern region (Udyoga-p. cx. 3842-3), and was praised for his liberality in that he gave his daughter to Áṅgiras (Sánti-p. cxxxiv. 8602; Anuśás.-p. cxxxvii. 6260), but more probably to Áṅgirasa, that is, Samvarta, see verse 11 note.

* Aurva was a famous rishi descended from Bhrigu. The Matsya Pur. says he was son of Bhrigu’s son Ápnuvána and was father of Jamadagni, and that he established the gotras of the Bhárgavas (cxciv. 14-29). It is said king Sagara was brought up in his hermitage (Hari-V., xiii. 762-xiv. 795) and learnt from him the Vedas and the use of arms (Vishnu Pur. III. viii, and IV. iii) The Mahá-Bh. says he was born when the Bhárgavas were almost exterminated by the princes of Kártavírya’s race after Kártavírya’s death, because they did not restore at the demand of those princes the riches which they had amassed as Kártavírya’s sacrificial priests; and it explains his name by saying he was born from his mother’s thigh (Adi-p. clxxviii. 6802-15 and clxxix 6827).

Marutta's exploits.

Marutta visited his grandmother's hermitage and set the Nágas' world on fire—They implored his mother Bháriní's protection according to her old promise—She and Avikshit accepted their entreaties and went to Marutta.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 On hearing this speech from the ascetic, the king became covered with shame. Exclaiming, "Fie on me, who am blind
- 2 because I have no spies," he sighed and took his bow. He went hastily then towards Aurva's hermitage and made obeisance to his father's mother Vírā with his head, and to the ascetics
- 3 as was proper ; and they lauded him with blessings. And seeing the seven sons,† the ascetics, bitten by the Nágas on
- 4 the ground, the king reproached himself repeatedly in front of them, and said thus,—
- 5 "What I do now unto the wicked Nágas, who despise my valour and who hate the bráhmans, let all the world with the gods, demons and mankind see that !"

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 6 So saying the king took his weapon Samvartaka‡ in anger, in order to destroy all the Nágas that roamed in Pátála
- 7 and on the earth. The Nágas' world burst into flame then suddenly all around ; while it was being burnt by the glowing

 10 Quitting Pátála they went for protection to Marutta's mother prostrated themselves and spoke thus in broken accents,— selves in Rasátala, the time for that has here arrived ; save us, O

 14 burnt by the fire from his weapon. For us, who are being thus utterly burnt up by thy son, there is no other refuge but thou ; have mercy on us, O renowned lady ! ”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 15 Hearing this their speech and remembering what she had said at first, the good lady spoke this speech to her husband with agitation,— 16 “ I related to thee before indeed, what the Nágas in Pátála after making petition said to me with reference to my son.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 22 On hearing that speech of the Nágas who had become suppliants for protection, and being entreated by his wife, most famous Avíkshi* spoke,—

- 23 “ I go, lady, and will with haste speak to that thy son in order to deliver the Nágas : those who have come for protection must not be forsaken. If he, the king, does not draw back his weapon at my word, then I will parry the weapon of that thy son with my own weapons.”

 flame, illuminating all the surface of the earth, penetrating down into Pátála, unendurable, dreadful and terrifying, and actually; 3 ready for use—he, seeing the king whose countenance was wrinkled with frowns, said,—“Be not thou wrathful, O 4 Marutta; let thy weapon be drawn back.” More than once so said he, lofty-minded Avikshit, to him, the varying course of whose colour speedily vanished in pallor. Listening to his father's speech and looking at him again and again, he, 5 still grasping his bow, prostrated himself before his parents with veneration and replied:—

- “Most grievously have the Nágas offended me, O father.
 6 While I rule this earth, they despising my might advanced to 7 the hermitage and bit seven youthful munis; and the fire-offerings of these pishis who dwell in the hermitage have been defiled by the evil-behaved Nágas, while I am reigning, O 8 king. Moreover every one of the tanks has in truth been defiled by them. This then is the reason; thou must say nothing in their favour, O father. I am not to be turned aside as regards the bráhma-killing Nágas.”

*Avikshi spoke:

- 9 If these Nágas have slain bráhmans, they will go to hell when dead. Let this my word be complied with; desist from using thy weapon.

Marutta spoke:

- 10 I will not pardon these wicked offenders. I in truth shall go to hell if I strive not to curb these sinners. Turn me not back, O father!

Avikshi spoke:

- 11 These Nágas have come to me for refuge. Because of the veneration due to me draw back thy weapon. Enough of thy wrath, O king!

* The text reads Avikshi here and in the following places See canto cxxii, verse 2, note.

Marutta spoke :

- 12 I will not pardon these wicked offenders. How shall I, transgressing my own righteousness, comply with thy word?
13 By inflicting punishment on him who ought to be punished and by protecting the well-behaved, a king gains the sacred worlds and disregards the hells.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 14 When the son thus repeatedly forbidden by his father draws not back the weapon, he, the father, then spoke again,— 15 “Thou injurest these terrified Nágas who have come to me for refuge, although thou art forbidden; I will therefore 16 employ a means to counteract thee. I also acquired skill in weapons; not thou alone art skilled in weapons on the earth; and how great will be thy manhood in my presence, O most ill-behaved one?”
17 Avíkshi, the lordly muni, with eyes dusky-red through anger, 18 strung his bow and grasped the weapon of fate. Next he fitted in his bow the noblest weapon of fate, which was surrounded with fiery light, which could slaughter hosts of 19 foes, which had great vigour. Then made hot by the weapon of conflagration,* quaked the whole heaven and earth with the seas and mountains, O bráhmaṇ, when the weapon of fate† was raised aloft.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 20 Marutta also, seeing that weapon of fate made ready by his father, spoke aloud,— “This my weapon is raised aloft for the punishment of the 21 wicked—not to kill thee. Why dost thou, sir, discharge the weapon of fate at me, thy son, who observe true righteous-22 ness and who have ever indeed obeyed thy command? I must protect my subjects fully, illustrious sir; why dost thou thus prepare the weapon to kill me?”

Avíkshi spoke :

 thy weapon and then slay the wicked Nágas here; or I will 25 slay thee with my weapon and save the great Nágas. Fie on the life of that man that shews no favour to one in pain, who has come seeking for protection even though certainly belong-26 ing to an enemy's party! A kshatriya am I; these terrified Nágas have come to me for protection; thou indeed art their injurer; why shouldst thou not be killed by me?

Marutta spoke:

- 27 Whoever tends to be an obstacle to the protection of the subjects, whether he be a friend or even a kinsman or a father 28 or a spiritual preceptor, he must be killed by a king. I, being such a king, will fight with thee; be not thou angry, O father.
 I must preserve my own righteousness. I have no anger against thee.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

- 29 Seeing those two determined to kill each other, Bhárgava and the other munis sprang up then and stood between them, 30 and said,—“Thou must not discharge thy weapon against this thy father; nor must thou slay this thy son who is renowned for his deeds.”

Marutta spoke:

- 31 I must as king slay the wicked and guard the good; and these are wicked Nágas. What is my fault in this matter, O ye twice-born?

Avíkshi spoke:

- 32 I must rescue those who have come to me for refuge, and

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 35 Now Vírā approaching her son said this,—“ At my word 36 this thy son has tried to kill the Nágas. That is finished. When the bráhmans live unmolested and the dead munis also come to life again, the Nágas may be set free, since they have sought thee for protection.”

Bhávíní spoke :

38 reason I commissioned this my husband in this matter. Therefore has occurred this noble outcome, splendid, in both of them, both in my husband and my son, in thy grandson and thy son.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 39 Those Nágas then restored those bráhmans to life both by means of various divine herbs and by drawing out the poison.
40 The king then bowed at his parents' feet; and he, Avíkshít,
41 embracing Marutta affectionately spoke thus—“ Be thou a destroyer of thy enemies' pride; long do thou protect the earth; be thou also merry with thy sons and grandsons; and may they not be haters of thee!”
42 Permitted* then by the bráhmans and by Vírā to depart, the two kings mounted the chariot together; and Bhávíní went to her own city.

 these exploits of that royal rishi, high-souled Marutta, who was vigour, and of his pre-eminent birth, O bráhmaṇ, a man is Marutta gave the kingdom to his son Narishyanta—Narishyanta resolved to do some great deed and performed a great sacrifice at which he enriched the bráhmans for life—Consequently he could not induce any bráhmans to attend a second sacrifice except after great difficulty—All bráhmans then were themselves offering sacrifices.

Kraushṭuki spoke :

Adorable sir, thou hast narrated all Marutta's exploits; the wish to hear completely about his descendants prevails in me.

- 2 I wish to hear of those among his descendants, as thou describest them, who were lords of the earth, worthy of sovereignty, and endowed with valour, O great muni.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 3 Marutta's son was famed as Narishyanta* ; he was the 4 eldest and indeed the best of the eighteen sons. And for 5 eighty-five thousands of years the lordly kshatriya Marutta
6 enjoyed the entire earth. After ruling the kingdom according to his own righteousness, after offering peerless sacrifices, he anointed his eldest son Narishyanta as king and departed to the forest. With his mind concentrated on one idea the king practised great austerities there. He ascended to the sky, covering the heaven and earth with his glory, O brāhman.
- 7 His son Narishyanta, being wise, pondered thus, considering how his father had acted and other kings also,—
- 8 “ In my family my ancestors have been high-souled kings. Offerers of sacrifices, they protected the earth righteously, being 9 powerful ; and they were givers of riches ; they turned not back in battle. But who is able to imitate the exploits of 10 those high-souled kings ? Yet the righteous deed which they† did with sacrifices and other offerings, that I wish to do ; and 11 that is not feasible ; what can I do ? The earth is protected according to righteousness ; what virtue has the king in this ? If he does not duly protect, a king is sinful and goes to hell.
12 If he has riches, a king must certainly offer great sacrifices, and must bestow gifts ; what is there wonderful herein ? A 13 king is the refuge of those who are perishing. High birth and shame and anger, dependance on hostile folk and one's own rules of righteousness ensure that there is no fleeing from 14 battle. As all this has been well achieved by my ancestors and 15 by my father Marutta, who now can do it so well ? What then shall I do, that has not been done by those ancestors, who 16 were sacrificers, choice men, gentle, and who turned not back from battle, whose manliness did not fail in great battles and conflicts*? With whose deed shall I coming strive unappalledly? Moreover those kings, my ancestors, themselves performed sacrifices unweariedly, but did not have them performed by others; I will do that."

Márkaṇḍeya sp ke

18 After deliberating thus the king performed a single sacrifice, the like of which, made splendid by the lavishing of riches, no
19 one else had performed. Now after giving very great wealth to the twice-born bráhmans, enough for life, the king further 20 gave them a hundred times as much food at the sacrifice, and cattle, clothing, ornaments and granaries and other gifts. Thus he intoxicated each one of them who dwelt in the earth.
21 Consequently when the king began a sacrifice again, he got no twice-born bráhmans then to conduct it after the sacrifice had 22 been begun. Whatever bráhmans the king selects for the business of sacrificial priesthood,† they said everyone to him,— 23 "We have consecrated ourselves for a sacrifice elsewhere. Choose thou some one else; the riches which thou didst lavish among us, there is no end thereof. Yet thou mayest give wealth to others at thy sacrifices."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke:

24 And the lord of the whole earth obtained no bráhmans then as sacrificial priests. He began then to give a gift on the 25 space outside the sacrificial altar. Nevertheless they did not accept it at all, having their houses full of wealth. In order to give again to a twice-born bráhmaṇ he spoke thus, being dejected,— 26 "Alas! it is very splendid that there is no poor bráhmaṇ anywhere in the earth: and it is not splendid that this 27 treasury is useless to one who does not sacrifice. No one undertakes sacrificial priesthood* ; all folk among the twice-born are sacrificing, and do not assent when we are giving gift."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 28 Prostrating himself then before some twice-born bráhmans again and again in faith, he appointed them sacrificial priests at his own sacrifice. They performed the great sacrifice.
29 And this was very surprising,—when that sacrifice offered by the king took place, all folk of the twice-born on the earth 30 were offering sacrifices at that time ; no one was present as a spectator thereat. Some of the twice-born were having sacrifices offered, and some of them were themselves offering sacri-31 fices. Whenever king Narishyanta sacrificed, people might make a sacrifice on the earth entirely with the riches given by 32 that giver. Now in the eastern region there were more than one hundred and eighty million sacrifices ; in the west seventy 33 millions† in sooth ; in the south fourteen tens of millions ; and in the north there were then fifty tens of millions of sacrifices at one time, O bráhmaṇ muni, when Narishyanta was sacrificing.

all the kings looked on, who had assembled there for her sake.
- 10 Now the Madra§ king's son Mahá-náda, who was great in 11 strength and prowess, was also deeply enamoured of her, and so also were the son of Sañkrandana king of Vidarbha,|| and prince Vapush-mat, who bore a great bow and was of lofty 12 intellect. Now seeing that Dama, tamer of the wicked and of enemies, was chosen by her,¶ they took counsel thus with one another there, being infatuated by love,—
- 13 “We will seize this beautifully-formed maiden from him by force and go home. She shall be his among us, whom she, 14 the maiden of beautiful hips, shall take with the intention that he shall be her husband according to the ordinance of the svayam-vara—his wife she shall be, delivered over according 15 to righteousness by our wish. Yet if that maiden of intoxicating eyes does not desire any of us, then she shall be his who shall slay Dama.”

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 16 Having formed this resolve, those three princes seized that most beautifully-formed maiden, as she attended by Dama's 17 side. Thereupon some kings among them who were of his party cried out, and other kings shouted out on the other side ;

- 18 some took a neutral position. Then Dama, looking at those kings all around, made this appeal with full presence of mind, O great muni.

Dama spoke :

- 19 "Ho, ye kings! Since men say a svayam-vara is among the duties of righteousness, is it unrighteousness or righteousness 20 that these have seized her by force? If it is unrighteousness, it is no duty of mine that there shall be another wife for me; or if it is righteousness, then enough of the life which is retained in an outrage by an enemy!"
- 21 Then king Āru-dharman,* king of Daśārṇa, making that 22 assemblage keep silence, spoke, O great muni,—“If this which Dama has spoken depends on righteousness or unrighteousness, O kings, declare it then, so that mine and his righteousness be not violated.”

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 23 Then certain kings addressed that king,—“With mutual affection the Gāndharva ceremony of marriage is ordained for 24 kshatriyas,† but it is not for vaiśyas, śūdras or twice-born brāhmanas. And it has been effected by this thy daughter in 25 that she has preferred Dama. Thus according to righteousness this thy daughter belongs to Dama, O king. He who behaves otherwise, proceeds through infatuation as one licentious in soul.”
- 26 And others, high-souled kings, who belonged to the party of the hostile kings, spoke this speech to the king of Daśārṇa, O brāhman,—
- 27 “Why say they through infatuation that this Gāndharva form is the rule of righteousness for him who is kshatriya-born? But this is certainly not approved. There is another‡

 29 Rákshasa marriage, O kings. Of the two forms of marriage this Rákshasa form is esteemed the more excellent here among kshatriyas; hence Mahánanda* and the other princes have acted righteously."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

30 Then the kings, who had first addressed the assembled kings, spoke again this speech dealing with the righteousness of their caste as concerned with mutual affection ;—

31 "It is true the Rákshasa form also is commended as an excellent ordinance for kshatriyas, but the maiden has approved him, Dama, as her husband under her father's authority.
 32 Now she who is carried off by force by a man, who has killed her father or kinsman—that is declared to be the Rákshasa 33 ordinance—provided she is living in the possession of no one else as husband.† In this completion of the Gándharva form here—since this maiden chose Dama in the sight of all the 34 kings—what Rákshasa marriage has there been here? A maiden when married certainly retains not her maidenhood, 35 and marriage creates a bond‡ on a maiden, O kings. These particular princes, who are prepared to take her by force from Dama, let them do so then, if they are strong enough; but that is not good."

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

36 Hearing that, Dama with eyes reddened with wrath strung 37 his bow and spoke this speech,—“If my own wife is carried off by strong men before my eyes—what then is the value of the existence of an impotent man as regards his family or his 40 So exclaiming, mighty Dama, the tamer of great enemies, then addressed all those other kings with Mahánanda at their 41 head,—“ Here stands the surpassingly bright maiden, pretty in form, and with intoxicating eyes ; what has he to do with life, 42 to whom this high-born maiden becomes not wife ? Thinking thus, O kings, so strive ye in combat that ye may by vanquish-ing me proudly make her your wife.”

43 Having challenged them thus, he then discharged a shower of arrows there, covering the kings therewith as a storm of rain 44 covers trees with darkness. Those heroic kings also discharged arrows, pikes, spears and maces, and Dama playfully clove the 45 missiles used by them. They also clove the arrows shot by him, and Narishyanta's son clove the multitudes of arrows 46 discharged by those kings, O muni. As the fight went on then between Dama and the princes, Mahánanda penetrated with 47 sword in hand where Dama was. Dama, seeing him advancing with sword in hand in the great fight, discharged showers of 48 arrows as Indra pours out the rains. Mahánanda immediately then clove those his missiles, which composed meshes of arrows, 49 with his sword and avoided others. Mahánanda, great in valour, next mounted on Dama's chariot in fury then and fought 50 with Dama. As Mahánanda was fighting agilely in many ways, Dama shot an arrow gleaming like the fire of fate into 51 his heart. Mahánanda, with himself pierced as he was, pulled out the arrow that had stuck in his heart, and then hurled 52 his glittering sword against Dama. And Dama dashed aside this torch-like sword, which was falling on him, with a pike, and cut Mahánanda's head off with a double-edged sword.*

 59 many spikes, and he, Dama, hastily split that also while it 60 was in his very hand. Whilst Vapush-mat is taking up 61 another choice weapon, during that interval Dama pierced 62 him with an arrow and laid him low on the ground. That 63 prince was laid low on the ground then, powerless in his limbs and quivering, and ceased in his mind from fighting. After gazing on him as he lay so with no more thought of fighting, Dama restraining himself‡ abandoned him, and taking Sumaná

The defeated prince Vapush-mat met him there, and in revenge killed him—Indra-sená sent tidings to Dama that he should punish the murderer.

Márkaṇḍeya spoke :

1 Thus the prince gained her, Sumaná, as his wife, O most great muni, and prostrated himself* at his father's and 2 mother's feet ; and she, beautiful-browed Sumaná, bowed then before her parents-in-law. And they were both welcomed then 3 with blessings by them both. And a great festival was held in Narishyanta's city itself, since Dama had both married a 4 wife and arrived from the city of the king of Daśárṇa. On hearing that he was thus connected by marriage with the lord of Daśárṇa and that the kings were defeated, king Narishyanta 5 rejoiced with his son. And Dama, son of the great king, sporting with Sumaná amidst choice gardens and woodland spots, in palaces and on the summits of hills.

6 Now after a long time Sumaná, daughter of the king of 7 Daśárṇa, while sporting with Dama conceived a child. And king Narishyanta, who had enjoyed enjoyments as lord of the earth, reached his declining years, and anointing Dama to the 8 kingdom departed to the forest ; and his wife Indra-sená also went as a female ascetic. He dwelt there according to the ordinance of vána-prasthas.†

9 Saúkrandana's son Vapush-mat, king of the Southern region, most evil in conduct, went to the forest to kill deer, with a small 10 body of followers. He saw Narishyanta as an ascetic dirty and mud-covered, and his wife Indra-sená most extremely 11 weakened by austerities, and asked,—“ Who art thou, a bráh-man, or a forest-wandering kshatriya, or a vaiśya who has 12 reached the vána-prastha stage?‡ Tell me ! ” The king, being under a rule of silence, gave him no answer at all then,
and Indra-sená told him all that truly.

Dama's exploits—The slaying of Vapush-mat.‡

Dama consulted his ministers and resolved to kill Vapush-mat—He and Vapush-mat met with their armies, and he killed Vapush-mat in fight—He celebrated his father's obsequies with Vapush-mat's flesh and blood.

Márkandeya spoke :

- 1 When Narishyanta's son Dama uttered this vow, his eyes rolled with anger and passion, while he covered his beard with
- 2 his hand. Exclaiming "Alas! I am stricken!" he kept his father in mind and reproached Fate; and he addressed all those ministers; he brought the family priest there.

This ending is printed as an Appendix to the latter edition, but the text there is very incorrect; and I have followed the text in the former editions, noting only such variations as appear worthy of notice.

Dama spoke :

- 3 Tell me what should be done in this matter, now that my dear father has reached the gods' abode. Ye, sirs, have heard 4 what that śúdra ascetic has said. That king was aged, an ascetic, engaged in the vána-prastha's vow, observing the rule of silence, unarmed and dwelling with my mother Indra-sená.
 5 She who was associated with him told the exact account to Vapush-mat. Thereupon the evil-souled foe, drawing his scymitar and seizing my father's matted locks with his lefthand, 6 killed the world's master as if he were a masterless churl.
 And my mother, having actually commissioned me, was utter-7 ing the word "Shame!" and, calling me feeble in lot and void of good fortune, has entered the fire. Embracing him, Narish-8 yanta, she has departed to the abode of the thirty gods. I being such will now do what my mother has said. And let my army composed of elephants, horses, chariots, and infantry 9 be arranged. If I drive not away the enmity against my father, if I kill not my father's murderer and comply not with my mother's word, how can I endure to live here ?

Márkandeya spoke :

- 10 The ministers hearing his speech exclaimed "Alas! Alas!"
 and did accordingly therefore, while distraught in mind. Ac-11 companied by his dependants, army, and chariots, and by his retinue, they, placing king Dama at their head and taking the blessings of the brahman family priest who knew the 12 three divisions of time, went forth. Breathing hard like the Serpent king, Dama advanced against Vapush-mat, while slaying the wardens on his boundaries and other neighbouring princes, and hastening* towards the southern region.
 13 Seeing him approaching, Vapush-mat was filled with patience ;† and Sañkrandana's son Vapush-mat recognized Dama, who had arrived attended by his retinue, by his ministers, and 14 by his dependants. With unwavering mind he directed his armies ; and issuing from his city he despatched a messenger to thirsting, shall pierce thy body in battle and drink thy blood."

- 17 But Dama, on hearing all that speech from the messenger, went on hastily, remembering his previously uttered vow, 18 breathing hard like a serpent. And the man who boasted of his army* was summoned to battle. And then there was an exceedingly fierce combat between Dama and Vapush-mat.
19 And the armies fought, both chariot-rider against chariot-rider, which could endure his arrows. Next Vapush-mat's general 22 fought with Dama, and Dama pierced him deeply in the heart with an arrow at close-quarters. When he fell, his army verily was seized with a panic to flee.

- 23 Then spoke Dama, tamer of his foes, to their master thus,— "Where goest thou, wicked one, after having slaughtered my 24 father, who was an ascetic and weapon-less and practising austerities? Thou art a kshatriya; stay thou!" Then staying back he, Vapush-mat, attended by his younger brother

pany with his sons, relations, and kinsmen. With the arrows

- 29 And Vapush-mat after his sons and kinsmen had been killed, mounted in a chariot fought wrathfully with him in battle with serpent-like arrows.† And Dama split those his arrows, 30 O great muni,‡ And those two fought together, being exasperated, wishing to conquer each other, each one's bow being quickly split by the impetus of the other's arrows. They both, 31 great in strength, grasping their swords, made play. § Dama, reflecting for a moment on the king his father who had been 32 killed in the forest,|| seized Vapush-mat by the hair and attacked him and felled him to the earth; and with his foot on his neck, 33 raising his arm he exclaimed,—“ Let all the gods, men, Serpents and birds see the heart also of Vapush-mat, who is of 34 kshatriya caste, split open !” And so saying Dama tore open his heart also, and desirous of drinking¶ was forbidden by the gods from tasting the blood.
- 35 Then he offered the water-oblation to his dear father with the very blood. Having discharged his debt to his father he 36 returned to his own house. And with Vapush-mat's flesh he offered the cakes to his father, he feasted the bráhmans who were sprung from families of Rákshasas.
- 37 Such verily were the kings born of the Solar Race. Others also were of fine intellect, heroic, sacrificers, learned in right-38 eousness, deeply versed in the Vedánta. And I am not able to CANTO CXXXVII.

Conclusion.

The Birds close here the long discourse delivered by Márkaṇḍeya, and Jaimini thanks them and departs.

The Birds spoke :

- 1 Having spoken thus, O Jaimineya,† the great muni Márkaṇḍeya let the muni Krauṣṭuki depart, and performed the
- 2 mid-day ceremony. From him we also have heard what we have declared to thee, O great muni. For this was perfected by Him who is without beginning.‡ Spoken formerly by the
- 3 Self-existent One to the muni Márkaṇḍeya was this which we have uttered to thee. It is sacred, pure, and grants length of life ;
- 4 it bestows righteousness, love, wealth and final emancipation from existence; it delivers immediately from all sin those who
- 5 read it, those who hear it.
- 6 And the very four questions indeed, which thou didst put to us at the very first—the conversation between the father and son, and the creation by the Self-existent One, and the administrations § of the Manus, and the exploits of the kings, O muni, this we have declared to thee. What now dost thou wish to hear ? After hearing or reading || all these matters in assem-

* Dama's descendants are given in the Vishnu Pur. IV. i. His son was Rájya-var dhana, who is the subject of cantos cix and cx, above.

† He and the Birds reappear from canto xlv. The text is Jaimineyam, 'Having spoken thus to Jaimineya;' but the Birds have been relating to Jaimini what Márkaṇḍeya had before told to Krauṣṭuki, and this reading is unsuitable unless Jaimineya be taken as Krauṣṭuki's patronymic; and that it cannot be, for Krauṣṭuki's patronymic is said to have been Bháguri, see pp. 436 and 445. I have ventured therefore to read Jaimineya instead.

§ Sthiti; or "positions."

|| The Calcutta reading paṣṭhitá appears preferable to páṣṭhale.

7 blies, a man discarding all sins may reach absorption into Brahman at the end.*

There† are eighteen Purāṇas which the Forefather spoke.
8 Now the seventh of them is to be known as the very famous Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa.‡ They are the Bráhma, the Pádma, and 9 the Vaishṇava, the Śaiva and the Bhágavata, and also the Nára-díya besides, and the Mārkaṇḍeya as seventh, the Ágneya which was declared the eighth, and the Bhavishya ninth, the Brahma-10 vaivarta tenth, the Laiṅga known as the eleventh, Váraha de-11 clared the twelfth, the Skánda next as thirteenth, and the Vámana fourteenth, and the Kaurma fifteenth, and the MátSYa, and the Gáruḍa and next the Brahmáṇḍa.

12 He who may read the titles of the eighteen Purāṇas, who repeats § them at the three periods of the day continually, may obtain the result of a horse-sacrifice.

13 Both creation and secondary creation, genealogy and the manvantaras and the exploits in the genealogies constitute a
Purāṇa with the five characteristics.||

14 This Purāṇa which contains the four questions is indeed of the highest quality. Now when it is heard, sin committed in 15 hundreds of ten millions of ages perishes. Brahmanicide and other sins, and other deeds that are vile, all those perish there- 16 by, like grass smitten by the blast. The merit that is gained by making gifts at Pushkara¶ accrues from hearing this Purāṇa; and a man attains to a benefit superior to all the Vedas 17 by completely acquiring this. A man should worship him who may cause it to be heard, as he worships the divine Fore-

* The Calcutta Appendix here introduces Jaimini's reply which is at page 688; and puts what follows here regarding the Purāṇas as a separate pronouncement by Brahmá.

† The Calcutta Appendix puts all that follows down to verse 30, and also the concluding two verses, into the mouth of Brahmá, and places it at the very end.

‡ This sentence is omitted from the Calcutta Appendix.

§ For japato read japate.

|| This verse and the next are not in the Calcutta Appendix.

- father, *with perfumes and flowers and with gifts of clothing 18 and with gratifications to bráhmans. And kings should give according to their ability villages and other lands and carriages.† After hearing all this Puráṇa, which is augmented with the objects of the Veda and which is the sole abode of the Dharma-śástras, a man may obtain every object.‡ After 19 hearing the entire Puráṇa, let a wise man do full reverence to Vyása for the sake of the benefits of righteousness, wealth, love and final emancipation from existence as therein declared. Let 20 him give his spiritual preceptor a cow, accompanied with gold, clothing and ornaments. In order to gain the benefits that come from hearing it let him gratify his spiritual preceptor with gifts.
 21 He who, without paying reverence to the man who reads the Puráṇa out, hears a single verse, acquires no merit; verily 22 he is known as a Scripture-thief. § Not him do the gods gladden, nor the Pitṛis, with sons; and they desire not || the śraddha given by him nor the benefit gained by bathing at 23 sacred places of pilgrimage. He incurs the censure of a Scripture-thief in an assembly of good men. Wise men must not 24 listen to this scripture with contempt; but when this noble scripture is contemned as it is being read by sages, ¶ the offender becomes dumb; he is born as a fool in seven births.
 25 Now he, who after hearing this seventh Puráṇa may further do reverence to it, being delivered from all sin verily 26 purifies his own family. The purified man goes without doubt to Vishṇu's eternal world; never shall he falling therefrom 27 become a man again. By the very hearing of this Puráṇa a man may obtain supreme union with the universal soul.

* The Calcutta Appendix reads śrúyeta pájayeś chástram, "let him hear and reverence this śástra."

† The Calcutta Appendix reads instead—"And he should give according to his ability royal carriages and other vehicles."

‡ This verse and the next two are not in the Calcutta Appendix.

§ Śástra-śoraḥ.

¶ Sádhubhiḥ.

 The Calcutta Appendix reads—"Moreover until seven Manus are gone,

28 No gift should be made to an atheist, to one fallen from his caste, to a contemner of the Vedas, to one who contemns religious preceptors and twice-born men, or moreover to one 29 who has broken his vows, to one who contemns his parents, to one who contemns the Vedas, Śāstras and other scriptures, or to one who infringes the rules of good breeding, or indeed to one who is passionate towards his caste-folk. To these men certainly no gift must be made, even when one's life is at its last gasp.

30 If entirely through covetousness or infatuation or fear one should read this Purāṇa or cause it to be read, he may assuredly go to hell.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke:

31 All this story is characterized by righteousness, and bestows heaven and final emancipation from existence. Who hears it 32 or may read it, his earnest endeavour is achieved; he is never affected by the pain of mental or bodily sickness; he is delivered from brāhmanicide and other sins, there is no doubt 33 of this. Good men become his kindly * friends, affectionate in mind. No enemies nor robbers will ever arise against him.
34 Aspiring to what is good, † and eating savoury food, he perishes not with famines; nor with sins touching others' wives or others' property, or with injury to others or with 35 such like crimes; and he is continually freed from many pains, O best of dvijas. Success, affluence, memory, peace, good fortune, nourishment, and contentment—may each of these 36 be his continually, who hears this story, O brāhman! The man who hears the whole of this Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa is not to be lamented; nor is he indeed to be lamented who recites this poetical work properly, O dvija. Endowed with perfection that is purified by knowledge of religious devotion, ‡ and surrounded even in Svarga and the other worlds by Indra

he may, after enjoying delights according to his wishes, and after enjoying the very earth, attain to supreme union with the universal soul."

* Su-jana of the Calcutta Appendix is better than sva-jana.

† Sad-artha; or perhaps "being in good circumstances"?

‡ Or "possessing pure success in the knowledge of religious devotion."

and other gods and other heavenly beings, he is always revered 37 in Svarga. And after hearing this Purāṇa, which is replete with knowledge and intelligence, being mounted in a choice heavenly car he is magnified in Svarga.

38 And the number of the syllables in the Purāṇa has been declared by him who is intelligent in exactitude. There are 39 of verses six thousands and eight hundreds also, thereto are added eighty-nine verses and eleven—pronounced of yore by the wise muni Mārkaṇḍeya.

Jaimini spoke :

40 In India there was not that which burst asunder my doubts,
 O ye twice-born;* ye, sirs, have accomplished that which no 41 one else now will do. Ye have attained long life, are good,† and are clever in knowledge and intelligence. And thus let there be unerring intelligence in the application of the 42 Sāṅkhya doctrine to the knowledge of spirit ! Let evil-mindedness that springs from pain wrought by a father's curse depart from you!"‡ After speaking this much the muni went to his own hermitage, pondering over the speech uttered by the Birds, which was sublimely noble.

End of the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa.

* The Calcutta Appendix reads more bluntly, "In India twice-born brahmans have lost the power of bursting asunder perplexities and doubts."

† For santu of the Bombay and Poona editions read santaḥ with the Calcutta Appendix.

Conclusion.

The story of Dama breaks off—A high encomium is passed upon this Purāna.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke :

- 1 When king Dama had spoken thus, his father's enemy fled.
 "My father was an ascetic; and let any other man practise great austerities fearlessly." Dama said nothing to them when he saw them intent on flight.

Mārkaṇḍeya spoke : †

- 2 All this story is characterized by righteousness, and bestows heaven and final emancipation from existence. Who hears it &c.

* Canto cxxxvii in the Calcutta edition.

† Here the narrative ends abruptly; and what follows is the same as verses 31 to 37 on page 687 above. The Purāna ends with them according to the Calcutta edition.

NOTE TO THE INDEX.

The system of transliteration followed in this translation is one that was in use formerly, yet has not been quite uniform. The transliterations of Sanskrit words contained in this Index have been revised and are brought into agreement with the system that is now approved by the Asiatic Society of Bengal and the Royal Asiatic Society. Sanskrit words are printed in the Roman character; all other words are put in italics, whether vernacular or English, Latin or Greek, and the spelling of vernacular words is generally that in common use.

The locality of geographical names is indicated by the letters M (Madhya-deśa), C (Central India), and N., S., E., W., NE., NW., SE., and SW. which explain themselves.
